Road Relocation Hearing

A PEP RALLY? Volunteers to distribute the Wood Dale Park District attitude and interest survey gathered last week for the kick-off. The survey will be passed out to residents this week and returned to a researcher for analysis. The Wood Dale Junior Women's Club and Lions Club helped organize and distribute the survey material.

ALAN CASKEY, Wood Dale Park District researcher, expects that answers to his questionnaires, being distributed this week, will return soon. He will compile the results and comments, and suggest a faster plan of park and recreational development later. Questionnaires are slated for about 600 residents. About 200 junior and senior high school students already have answered questions.

Planners To Meet

The Bloomingdale Planning Commission will meet Monday night with the Bloomingdale Village Board to exchange ideas about the proposed $70 million Hoffman-Rosner project seeking annexation into Bloomingdale. The planning commission met Monday night with Lowell Siff, Hoffman representative, for the second time to review plans in accordance with village regulations. Larger acreage for school sites, higher buildings, elimination of four-bedroom apartment units and the establishment of the need for public hearings have resulted from several meetings by the Hoffman company with local school board and the village. A TIME SCHEDULE hoped for, Siff said, would allow a large public hearing later this month. The hearing would air the developments and changes worked out by Hoffman and the village before any formal action by the village would be taken, he added. Plans for the project call for about 800 homes, 539 condominiums, 1,030 apartments, two churches, a lake, shopping center, parks, pools, bowling alley and two restaurants with cocktail lounges. A movie theater is in the preliminary stages. The project would bring an estimated 10,000 to 12,000 additional persons into the area. School districts 13 and 15 would share the load of the children. About 12 acres are slated for school sites within the project. Formerly 10 acres were promised. Streets would be privately maintained by Hoffman but fire and police protection would be provided by Bloomingdale if the project was annexed. SIFF SAID Monday that the new building and zoning codes of the village would make the project impossible and unprofitable to build if they were imposed upon it. He was told by plan commission chairman Paul Monas that the project was a planned development which is given more flexibility and a percentage of lesser requirements.

Residents and officials from three counties will gather tomorrow in Schaumburg with state highway officials to give their views on the proposed relocation of Irving Park Road (Route 19), now called the Elgin-O'Hare Expressway. The public hearing starts at 2 p.m. in Schaumburg's Great Hall. The proposed relocation between Elgin on the west and Route 83 on the east will specifically affect Bensenville, Wood Dale, Itasca and Roselle in DuPage County; Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Hanover Park and Bartlett in Cook County; and Elgin in Kane County. This portion of the relocation of the expressway will be handled by the Dist. 1 Elgin state highway office. East of Route 83 will be handled by the Chicago Dist. 10 office. HENRY YAMANAKA of the Dist. 10 office said plans for rerouting Illinois 19 from Illinois 83 east to Mannheim Road have not been completed. "We hope to have something under way in the near future," he said, adding that a public hearing may be held in July. The proposed expressway starts at the Elgin bypass and follows a southeasterly path parallel to the Milwaukee Road Ry. lines, then goes northeasterly through Bartlett, extending easterly through the Rinne property in Hanover Park, through the Milwaukee Road industrial park in Schaumburg, south of Nerge Road through Roselle to Interstate 90 and then follows Thorndale Road through the Wood Dale Moody Airport and ends at Route 83. The expressway will have limited access, but frontage roads will be included on both sides. The Dist. 1 office hopes to use a common corridor through DuPage County on which Commonwealth Edison has the property right-of-way options. This would locate the road and power lines through a common corridor.

INTERCHANGES for the expressway would come at Route 83, Wood Dale Road, Prospect Avenue, Arlington Heights Road, I-90, Meacham-Medina Road, Roselle Road, Springinguth Road, Barrington Road, Bartlett Road and Route 59. Present Irving Park Road would be turned over to local communities when the new expressway is completed. The state has not given a timetable on beginning the relocation. Funds will have to come from the state legislature and none will be allocated sooner than July. The relocation could be many years away. The state highway department wants to map out the route for the relocation now so rights of way may be purchased and communities will steer development away from the freeway. Communities supporting the preferred relocation include Schaumburg and Elk Grove Village. HANOVER PARK Mayor Richard Baker definitely plans to seek a different rerouting through that community. Hanover Park residents feel the preferred route will cut off village expansion to the south. Baker plans to ask the highway department to locate the road further south of Hanover Park and Bartlett.

York Hearing Tomorrow

A public hearing on the widening of York Road from Memorial Road in Bensenville south to Interstate 90 in Elmhurst will be held tomorrow at 9:30 a.m. in the basement of the Bensenville Village Hall, 700 W. Irving Park Road. York Road is scheduled for widening this year from two to four 12-foot wide lanes along a 2.7-mile stretch from Elm-hurst to Bensenville. A four-foot wide mountable median strip is included. Intersection channelization at the junction of York and Grand Avenue, together with left-turn lanes and traffic signal relocation, will be part of the improvement. Personnel of the Elgin Dist. 1 office of the Illinois Division of Highways will be available to discuss individual problems.

Erickson Killed in Vietnam

Pfc Howard W. Erickson, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Erickson, 548 Linda Lane, Addison, was killed in action in Vietnam recently. Neighbors have been flying flags since learning of his death last weekend in an announcement from the Defense Department. He was killed April 30 near Duc Pho where he was stationed as a machine gunner. HE HAD BEEN assigned to the Third Infantry Division since being sent to Vietnam last January. A 1967 graduate of Addison Trail High School, he entered Western Illinois University, Macomb, the following year. He attended college one year before enlisting in the Army last July. His parents and two sisters, Marcie, 17, and Susan, 16, will make funeral arrangements when his body is returned.

Superior Is Low Bidder on I-90 Work

Superior Concrete Construction Co., Chicago, was the apparent low bidder yesterday on two Interstate-90 projects in DuPage and Cook counties. The awarding of contracts is indefinite, pending Illinois House committee action on a $118 million emergency highway appropriation. Bids on the projects were opened in the Chicago office of the Illinois Division of Highways.

Projects to be awarded include: —A bridge over Golf Road in Cook County. —A grade separation and structure taking I-90 over relocated Wood Dale Road; a bridge taking relocated Wood Dale Road and Lake Street over Salt Creek and .54 miles of concrete paving on Wood Dale Road, all in DuPage County. Superior Concrete Construction Co bid $1,130,511.55 for the bridge over Golf

Road. It was the lowest of seven bids. Superior bid $1,275,597.99 for the DuPage County project, the lowest of 10 bids. BIDS WERE NOT opened, as had been expected, for a $12 million interchange with Illinois 83, U.S. Route 20, and Interstate 90. Also, bids were not opened for construction of I-90 from Golf Road to Schaumburg Road. Another bid letting is scheduled for May 23 on other I-90 projects. A. C. Braming, assistant Dist. 10 highway engineer in charge of engineering, said that, ordinarily, contracts are awarded within two weeks of bid opening. However, these contracts awards are awaiting emergency appropriation in the Illinois House, he said. Braming added that 62 jobs from an April 11 bid opening have not been awarded yet, also because of funding.

Seek To Block Annexation

A rapidly-blossoming conservation crusade will take a spotlight at tonight's meeting of the Bensenville Park District. A citizens' group, the Committee for the Preservation of Nature and Wildlife Areas, will appear before the board with a petition asking that the board take no action at least until Oct. 1 on the possible annexation of White Pines Golf Course to Bensenville. The petition will represent the first formal action by the committee in what is shaping up as a complex effort to save the area known as Fischer's Woods from development. The woods is in an unincorporated section of DuPage County, lying south of Forest View Road and west of Church Road. BENSENVILLE builder Ralph Cantrell holds an option to buy more than 26 acres of the 80-acre area, and would need the golf course property annexed to Bensenville in order for his proposed subdivision to be contiguous to the village. He could then petition for annexation of the subdivision. The committee, headed by former Bensenville park board president and executive director Wayne Scheppele, is directing its action first to the park board because the board would have to recommend its golf course for annexation. The petition, according to Scheppele and committee member Tom Mills, will bear the names of 500 to 1,000 residents throughout the Bensenville Park District. It will ask for the delay until Oct. 1 to allow the committee more time to study the value of the woods, its potential as a nature center, and a means of getting it set aside as a natural wildlife area. THE PARK BOARD has taken no formal position on the woods, but the area is listed as a potential site for recreational development in the park district's master plan. The committee, formed last October as an arm of the White Pines Civic Association, has been trying to get the park district, the DuPage County Forest Preserve District, and the Illinois Department of Conservation interested in saving the forest. Financing purchase of the woods has been a principal problem, and the current thinking is to get a private foundation to buy the property and hold it until some taxing body can get the funds to acquire it. It is hoped some such arrangement could be made by Oct. 1. TESTIMONY to the natural value of the woods was given Monday evening during a tour of the forest land attended by several local residents, newly elected park board member Merle K. Hummel, biology professor Dr. Robert Betz of Northeastern Illinois State College, and Floyd Swink of the Morton Arboretum. Dr. Betz and Swink confirmed that the woods is a significant one in terms of its history, development and diversity of plant life, and both recommended that the committee "fight as hard as possible" to save the area. Both agreed to write letters for Scheppele's use attesting to their findings. The woods, remnant of a 630-acre tract homesteaded in the mid-19th century by settler Alonzo Fischer, is dominated by walnut, ash, basswood and oak trees, some of which are estimated at up to 150 years in age. The presence of sugar maples also indicates it is entering the last stage of forest development. PLANT LIFE on the forest floor includes bellwort, yellow violet, Dutchman's breeches, bloodroot and blue cohosh, all flowers considered rare and a good sign of advanced forest development. Both Dr. Betz and Swink concluded that the woods could serve as an outstanding living nature center, particularly valuable in demonstrating to students the stages and diversity of forest growth.

THE ILLINOIS Division of Highways is seeking a $125 million emergency appropriation. It passed the House committee once but was cut down in the Senate to $118 million. Braming indicated he expects the emergency appropriation to pass but cannot award contracts until it has. The legislature appropriates a certain amount of money each year for highways. In other I-90 related business, a public hearing is scheduled for Friday to consider the proposed closing of portions of 29 streets in Addison and Bloomingdale townships in DuPage County. The hearing will be held at 10 a.m. in the Addison Village Hall.

The World Just Walks By

by GERRY DeZONNA (In this second and concluding part of "Divorce Suburban Style," Gerry DeZonna, Paddock staff writer, describes where a suburban mother of five turns when her money runs out as she waits for her divorce to become final.) For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried. There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce, he would file a lien against the property. He would be guaranteed his wages once the house was sold. The house would have to be sold within 90 days from the day that the decree was filed, so he said. She was left in an unfortunate position. There was no money, and there wouldn't be any income until the divorce was settled. She was living in a state in which she had only lived for seven years. She didn't know the procedures as well as her native state of Wisconsin. Her family still lived in Madison, and she didn't know where to turn or who to go to for help and advice. It's a tragic story. The four students who act it out perform well and sensitively.

The story is Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie" and the performance will take place Friday and Saturday at Lake Park High School starting at 8 p.m.

According to director Daryl Schultz, the three main characters in the play are "Pathetic, like three ships passing in the night."

AMANDA, THE strong-willed domineering mother, is portrayed by junior Candice Boardman. Candice has performed in several Lake Park productions. Her acting experience serves her well in the difficult role of the neurotic, harpy woman.

A truly good performance is turned in by senior Paul Kapitza who plays the son, Tom. The role calls for a versatile actor who can portray wrath, compassion and total intoxication. Paul manages all three emotions with a good deal of perception.

The daughter Laura is portrayed by sophomore Karen Dlugosz. Slender, brown haired Karen looks good in the role of a shy introvert who is afraid of life.

The cast is completed by the performance of junior Robert Ruskey, the gentleman caller who serves as the only real character in the play.

THE STORY IS set in the Winefield home in St. Louis during the 30's. An unseen family member, the father, is no more than "a picture on the wall," yet his obvious absence makes him an important character in the play.

Each member of the Winefield family lives in a dream world.

Tom, the poet, finds his refuge from the nagging Amanda in movies and drink. Laura retreats into a fantasy world of music and glass figurines, and Amanda exists in the past.

Afraid that her daughter will become a spinster and her son a drunkard, she consoles herself with memories of her own GIRLHOOD AS A Southern belle.

If the emotions involved are difficult, the story is really very simple.

THREE CONFUSED souls are trying to reach out for each other but all the compassion in the world cannot help them understand one another.

The gentleman caller enters their life, only to remind them of the stability they lack.

Schultz has done well in directing his cast in a disturbing and tragic drama.

A musical background and strong lighting effects are the added extras that make the play what it is, a Pulitzer Prize winner.

Smolla Wins $25 Bond

Rodney L. Smolla, of 238 Lake St. Bloomingdale, won a $25 government savings bond yesterday for his essay in a contest on traffic safety.

Smolla received the bond in conjunction with an appearance by the Sparrows, a young singing group scheduled to perform yesterday at Lake Park High School.

The group tours the country for Chrysler Corp. Its performance in Roselle was sponsored by Fabich Motor Sales, Roselle.

House Hears Hoffman Bill

The House Education Committee yesterday heard a teacher negotiations bill sponsored by State Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst.

Hoffman said late last week that spokesmen for the state Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction now have agreed to support the bill.

State support for Hoffman's bill, House Bill 1235, hinged on amendments defining negotiable conditions of employment.

Hoffman said the bill has been amended to provide that teachers groups and school boards may bargain regarding "salaries and other employee benefits permitted by law" and working conditions.

THE ILLINOIS Education Association helped draft the Hoffman bill and has given it solid backing.

The bill provides a local option on whether principals and other "management" level school men below the central office staff should be represented by a teachers' group during negotiations.

It also provides that teachers may not strike during the term of their contracts.

This is the second public employees' bargaining bill to be considered in the House during the current legislative session.

The other bill, covering all public employees, would have a state labor relations group mediate stalemated disputes. The American Federation of Teachers supports this approach.

Hoffman's bill calls for the state superintendent of public instruction to have the final word in case of stalemate between a teachers' group and a local school board.

Nottke Wants To Increase Conference Size

Wilbert Nottke, village president of Itasca, was installed Saturday as president of the DuPage County Mayors and Managers Conference meeting in Burr Ridge.

Following is the text of his speech to elected officials:

"I consider the position bestowed upon me as president of the DuPage Mayors and Managers Conference an honor and a tremendous challenge. Each year this organization has grown to new heights, and we will endeavor to continue this pattern during the coming year.

"One of my goals will be to bring the three remaining municipalities, Bartlett, Winfield and Hanover Park, into our organization making the total then 31 communities."

"It was brought out this year that DuPage municipalities represent 300,000 people out of the total county 460,000 population. We will do our best to give each the fairest and best representation.

"ON A COUNTY or regional level, we will work closely with the DuPage County Board in an attempt to resolve the matter of a countywide sewage system.

"In my opinion this program carries top priority. The end results greatly affects all municipalities and each resident.

"We will solicit the county board's help, and we will offer ours in all matters concerning DuPage affairs. I hope to carry on the best communication.

"On a state level, we will work closely with the Illinois Municipal League for the benefit of all municipalities in our county and in the state, to formulate, sponsor, promote needed legislation for the general benefit of all communities. We will ask the help of the Illinois Municipal League, and will pledge our support to them in their programs.

"WE WILL CLOSELY work with our governor to help solve the state financial problems. We will give aid, encouragement and guidance when possible for the benefit of the majority of our citizens. We will continue to promote legislation for home rule.

"I am looking forward to an interesting and challenging year serving as your president."

"I will seek your advice and help, in an effort to make this our biggest and best year yet."

Almost-Divorcee Needs Help

the lien, despite the lawyer's price. Without the divorce, there would be no money at all. Her financial situation was already at rock bottom. It seemed as though there was no alternative but to sign the lien. She thought that it would be better to be in the frying pan rather than the fire.

But there had to be someone who could give her some advice and some help. The lawyer was using pressure tactics, legal blackmail. And the longer the delay, the more her children would suffer.

Worried and confused, she sought help from family, friends, her family physician and her priest. Her priest offered some counsel, but the church frowned upon divorce, and he couldn't give her any help. The rules of the faith were the rules.

The family physician gave her as much help and advice as he could. He donated his time and his talents to the family, and he suggested that she seek help from welfare agencies in the area. He, too, could do only so much. The situation enraged him, especially the lawyer's attitude.

"THE LAWYER doesn't have an ounce of PROFESSIONAL INTEGRITY," the doctor complained. "The situation is so discouraging and disappointing. Just to know that this lawyer will sacrifice a family in trouble for a financial profit."

Her neighbors have tried their best to provide as much as possible in the way of aid and advice. But neighbors have families to raise themselves and financial responsibilities to meet. They were doing as much as possible.

Her family in Wisconsin had been sending money to keep her and the children from starving, but their own funds were limited. Besides her family still lived in Madison, and without any money, the distance seemed so much farther.

She contacted county and township welfare agencies, and only the township was quick to come to her aid. When her bank account was depleted, they gave her a food allotment from the emergency fund. They could contribute $10 per person for a two-week period.

The township promised to pay the utility bills, if the companies threatened to discontinue service. (The phone had been taken out months ago.) The township case worker promised to investigate some of the county agencies that could help, but processing all the papers and conducting the investigations take time. Time she really couldn't afford.

SHE CONTACTED 11 welfare agencies herself in hopes that someone could help or at least give her some advice, especially legal advice. The county legal department couldn't help because she already had a lawyer. They couldn't even give her any advice. And her lawyer couldn't help either because he wanted his money.

Other agencies couldn't come to her aid because technically she had a house and property. On paper, she wasn't destitute. In reality, she didn't know where the money would come from that would provide for her children. She did have assets, but they were tied up tighter than a drumhead because the divorce hadn't been completed.

The welfare agencies seemed to be hanging themselves on legal technicalities and bureaucratic red tape. They had their rules and their investigations, too. They were limited by law only to do so much.

THE BANK THAT held the mortgage on the house threatened to foreclose. The payments were due. She inquired about a loan on the mortgage, but the bank needed both her husband's signature as well as hers. The house was held in joint tenancy. She couldn't borrow any money because she had no income or salary.

The bank, too, had its policies.

The welfare agencies had their rules and regulations. Her financial status was a stumbling block for case workers. She was appealing for aid, and yet she owned a house, the comfortable tri-level with the aluminum siding, in suburbia.

She's one of the many property owners in an above-average income neighborhood in the Northwest suburbs where financial problems of this kind are supposedly the least likely to happen.

SHE DOESN'T FIT into the suburban divorce mold: the comfortable divorcee who becomes just another statistic in the broken-marriage column.

The lawyer, the priest and the case workers walked past the house. Just like the stranger, they didn't stop to steal a glimpse of the residents in the comfortable tri-level home with the aluminum siding.

Ward Completes Course in Law

Itasca police officer Larry Ward returned recently from a 40-hour "law for police" training course.

The course, offered at the University of Illinois, Champaign, instructed police in legal arrests, how stop-and-frisk laws affect them, proper searches and seizures and how to determine the proper charge.

Each Itasca officer takes a course in some specialized field every year. New officers take basic courses during their first year on the force.

If you're one of the thousands of homeowners who'll say goodbye to their old furnace this year, here are 5 things you should know about electric heat.

One. When you have an electric heating system in your home, you take warmth and comfort for granted, because electric heat rarely, if ever, needs repair or adjustment. It just doesn't grow old. In fact, some manufacturers guarantee their electric heating equipment for the life of your house.

Two. With electric heat, there's no flame or combustion that can draw in cold air from the outside. You eliminate drafts around your ankles and cold spots in your house.

Three. You should know, too, that the most modern heat is also easy to install... because anywhere you can run wire, you can heat with electricity.

Four. Electric heat costs less than you may have been led to believe. Actually less than $200 for an average 6-room home in the Northern Illinois area.

Five. Converting to electric heat is simple... because there are several different systems available to fit any special requirements you may have in your home.

So now that you're interested, why not give our nearest office a call, and ask for Tom Rogers. Or, tear out the coupon, and find out just how easy it is to switch to the most modern heat there is. Electric heat. Commonwealth Edison Company

The Way We See It

Late Tax Bills Hurt

Late tax bills can cause hardship for local taxing districts, yet they are a regular occurrence in the Northwest suburbs.

When the bills are mailed late, and tax payments received late, many local agencies, particularly schools, must issue tax anticipation warrants to tide themselves over until taxes are received. For this expedient they must pay interest, substantially raising the cost of government during the period while tax receipts are delayed.

A bill to spur county collection agencies into greater efficiency has been introduced in the Legislature by State Rep. William A. Redmond (D-Bensenville). Redmond would require counties to pick up the interest payments on tax warrants issued because of the delay in mailing tax bills.

Redmond's bill has been received unenthusiastically by county officials who are not completely immune to the embarrassment and frustration created by late tax bills. Cook County commissioners recently were so chagrined over this year's late bills that they called several county officials on the carpet. The commissioners were seeking concrete answers to the questions of how and why tax bills were delayed.

Answers, if there are any, seemed to elude the commissioners. Switch-over in computerized operations this year could have been a legitimate excuse. However, it was pointed out that the man installing the equipment was off work four months following a heart attack. Surely an operation as big as Cook County could have acquired a substitute technician for this period.

We do not mean to underrate the complexity of the tax billing problem. In Cook County, 640 separate tax rates have to be developed.

It is understandable that even under the most favorable circumstances tax bills may not always be prompt. What is difficult to understand, however, is the question raised by Commissioner Charles Chaplain of one county employee:

"Somewhere someone must have known these bills would be late...how come we weren't notified?"

Leadership Role in North DuPage

Selection of two North DuPage representatives as officers of the DuPage Mayors and Managers Conference is a reflection of the leadership exerted by those communities in county affairs.

Itasca Village Pres. Wilbert Nottke was named president, and Bensenville Village Administrator Harold Koehler was picked as secretary-treasurer.

Nottke's choice was particularly significant because Itasca, with a population of 5,000, represents only one per cent of the county's population yet its president leads an organization representing 28 of the county's 31 municipalities.

Under Nottke's guidance, the conference can become an effective tool of cooperation among DuPage's communities, the county and state agencies. The county's population is growing rapidly, creating numerous problems that sprawl across municipal boundaries like the metropolitan complex itself.

What is needed is a diligent effort to attack problems like transportation, housing, planning, sewerage, zoning and recreation. These problems will be solved only through joint action. It is fortunate, therefore, that an attempt to write a defensive resolution, seemingly pitting municipalities against county and state, was softened by conference members.

We look forward to a year of progress and positive action on the part of the mayors and managers conference.

Could Use Early Warning System

County Beat

Policing Health Standards

by PAT HENSEL

"Frankly, I wish some of those old buildings would burn down," says an official from the DuPage County Health Department.

He refers to the numerous antiquated landmarks dotting the north DuPage landscape which have been converted from old homes or barns into "quaint" taverns and restaurants.

—The ones with cracks in the old wood floors through which the rats can scurry, and where cockroaches wallow in crumbling plaster caked with the plant and animal dust of generations.

—The ones where septic tanks flank water wells, and where cheap indoor plumbing was installed decades ago and behaves like it wanted to be back again at the pump or outhouse.

—And where the preparation of food and cleansing of utensils resembles the manner in which neighborhood mongrels scrounge for a meal in the garbage pile out in back.

THE DUPAGE COUNTY Health Department employs five full-time field inspectors and supervisors to keep track of 1,500 food handling establishments in DuPage County — most of them admittedly clean, well-kept and constructed with an eye to complying with health ordinances.

County codes in this respect are stringent. Far more stringent than codes maintained, if at all, by most villages.

Pat Hensel

"Oh, sure, you can say we haven't had a case of typhoid in years," says the county health official. "Or dysentery or ptomaine poisoning."

"But, I'd say that if we prevent one case of ptomaine poisoning out of a million times that people eat in restaurants, we're doing our job."

BECAUSE THE COUNTY has stringent codes, it often is "convenient" for a person seeking a tavern or restaurant permit to go to the village in which the establishment will be located.

Usually, it's no trouble at all to obtain such a permit — the fees boost the village coffers. And, villages simply are not equipped financially to maintain adequate health inspection departments.

It can be six months later that the county may discover a new "restaurant" operating in sub-standard quarters.

Then, even though the county can supercede village health codes, it's a problem, sometimes involving court action, to close down a place.

Even the village sometimes will intervene in behalf of its local businessman.

The Fence Post

Needed: Peace and Quiet

After spending some time (not long, however, as we could not stand it) sitting out on our patio last night and trying to carry on a conversation, I finally decided to do something that I have never done before — blow my stack to the fencepost instead of my husband. I suppose that this can all be regarded as the result of "progress." I have often wondered what this term really means. If it means that we must be subjected to this constant irritation of jet noise and traffic along with the spewing of exhaust that continually threatens the air day and night, then indeed we have progressed.

My husband and I consider ourselves somewhat natives of Arlington Heights having lived here since 1950, and anyone who lived here at that time can testify as to how delightful it was. It was peaceful and quiet and the air was fresh and clear. I could step out on my patio and breathe in a lung full of clean, fresh air.

Not anymore. In fact, if it gets any worse I am seriously considering purchasing a gas mask. I quit smoking and so did my husband as we were concerned about the cancer scare. However, what do we do about the jet fumes? Where can we go to protect ourselves against it? Does any other organization have the right to subject us to this frightening situation? What are we, as citizens of Arlington Heights, going to do about it?

If anybody else is concerned about this, perhaps we, as a group, can do something about it. Or, am I alone in this? Am I just one of those people who is hard to get along with? I am praying that the time will come, and soon, when there will be a universal awareness of the need for us, as a race, to have our times of peace and quiet so that we can forego the times of DUPAGE COUNTY has an answer to this problem, but few villages so far are listening.

All the county wants is for a village to require the bar-keeper or tavern-owner to have a permit from the DuPage County Health Department before applying for or renewing a village permit.

According to a model ordinance available to villages upon request — "If only they would request," says the health official — the village merely would have to amend its ordinances to say:

"It shall be unlawful for any person to operate a restaurant, itinerant restaurant (for a temporary period, such as in connection with a fair or circus), food store, open air market or as an itinerant vendor (house-to-house delivery or sale of food or beverage) unless such person possesses a valid vending license issued by the (village clerk) of the village of (name)."

"Such vending license shall not be issued by the village of (name) unless the applicant presents . . . satisfactory evidence of the possession of a valid permit from the Board of Health of the County of DuPage."

IT'S AS SIMPLE as that. It would bring villages into conformity with each other and with the county. It would open the door to other conforming ordinances covering dairies, and it eventually would involve conforming liquor ordinances.

Most of all, it would bring villages and the county into a coordinated program of cooperation in the area of health standards.

And, as the public is aware, health violations are one of the easiest to detect but one of the hardest to control if those in authority are working at odds with one another.

Force Down Costs?

Increased taxes, higher grocery bills, proposed taxes on gasoline and the many other increases in the cost of living can not realistically be handled by the average middle income family. "I" alone can not do anything to counteract these, but "we" can. "We" can write our congressmen, "we" can protest to our grocery stores, "we" can encourage reduction of the surtax completely instead of only a reduction to five per cent by 1970.

Because the women of a small community united against rising food prices a few years ago, the chain stores were forced to lower prices, at least for a while. This united action impressed me. I am interested in joining with others who feel as strongly as I do about counteracting the rising cost of living in an appropriate manner.

Nation Waits While War Goes On

by CHARLES E. HAYES

Americans are growing impatient and irritated at the lack of progress in resolving the war in Vietnam. At best, there has never been broad public understanding and acceptance of our involvement in Vietnam. President Nixon has done little to improve this situation.

The President accurately assessed the national mood last summer when he av-war situation. There is talk, but little in the way of accomplishment.

The burden of Vietnam has made it difficult, if not impossible, to plan or implement federal programs of tax reform, economic development, law enforcement, consumer affairs or conservation as well as come to grips with deep-seated problems of poverty, hunger, race relations and urban turmoil.

THE NATION has patiently waited for President Nixon to define national objectives in both domestic problem-solving and foreign policy.

What statements have emerged thus far have been expressed only in general terms, with a promise that "specifics" will be provided sometime in the near future.

But the country is getting restless, particularly in its anxiety for some meaningful progress in Vietnam.

This is already America's longest war, particularly in its anxiety for some meaningful progress in Vietnam.

With the U. S. death toll nearing 35,000, Vietnam has become our third costliest foreign conflict, claiming more American lives than the war in Korea. If unchecked, it will soon begin to match the toll of World War I when 53,402 Americans were killed. And for what? The nation wants to know, and it wants to know in clear, specific terms.

THE PRESIDENT faces a serious dilemma, he cannot procrastinate a resolution much longer.

It is clear to the public that we have paid a terrible price for becoming involved in a foreign conflict through executive fiat rather than congressional declaration.

The constitutional question of whether men should be drafted and sent to their deaths in these circumstances is one of the many complex questions facing President Nixon.

No one in authority has yet faced up to it. It is time someone did.

Joshing the Pres: Timing Right?

BY MERRIMAN SMITH
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Backstairs at the White House:

This is the time of year when, by tradition, President Nixon and leaders of his administration, plus opposition bigwigs, must be dreadfully good sports.

This curious sportsmanship involves going to so-called press banquets, each of which lasts from three to five hours, plus time devoted to before-and-after "receptions" which is a polite word for drinking parties.

There must be at least a half dozen of these affairs, hosted by one journalistic organization after another, to which the President, his Cabinet, the Supreme Court, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and congressional leaders are invited and expected to attend.

Nixon is starting out bravely in this opening era of his administration, but presidential enjoyment derived from dining out en masse is debatable and largely a matter of politeness and stoicism.

One thing is truly new about this administration, Nixon and his vice president, Spiro T. Agnew, show up at the same affairs together; even speak on the same program which has the effect of putting the vice president in the position of a tightrope walker. He does not dare overdo; he can be funny but not too funny, but if he knocks the ball out of the oratorical park, the number one man cannot help but be in an awkward position.

Part of the sportsmanship involved for a President and other government figures sitting at a head table is to respond with polite chuckles as comedians, professional and amateur, fire satirical oneliners in their direction.

Comedically, it is fair game to be satirical or theoretically funny about a government figure present. When shots are boomed at absent notables, however, the impact softens and can turn into questionable taste.

The other night, both Nixon and Agnew were present and spoke at the annual banquet of the White House News Photographers Association at the Sheraton Park

Nixon was elected, his administration is now 107 days old, and we are still waiting for details.

THE BATTLEFIELD stalemate, with its bloody toll of lost American lives, grinds on. If the Paris peace talks have done anything but flounder, the public is unaware of it. In response to increasingly sharp questioning, the secretary of state finally announced a few weeks ago that the President does indeed still have a plan to resolve the war. But he, too, declined to offer any specifics.

Meanwhile, the electorate is warned the income tax surcharge will be retained "indefinitely" if the Vietnam war is not concluded, defense spending in the next fiscal year is estimated to be as much as $81 billion or 9 per cent of the total U. S. national income.

Nearly all domestic concerns are kept in limbo pending some clear direction of the ST. JOHN'S United Church of Christ in Bensenville was once located on property that has since become O'Hare Airport. Constructed in 1873, this church was moved in 1952 to its present location at Illinois 83 and Foster Avenue.

Jets Moved Church

(This is the eighth in a series of week-stories on the churches serving the Bensenville area.)

St. John's United Church of Christ has something in common with O'Hare Airport that few if any other churches have.

It was originally built in 1849 on grounds which have since become part of the world's busiest airport.

A group of German farmers founded the church a year earlier when Addison Township was nothing but farmland.

Two acres were donated for construction of the church and another three were bought for $30, more than 119 years ago. The first pastor was the Rev. Ferd Wuchter.

A new church was built in 1873 at what became known as Lawrence Avenue and Mount Prospect Road. The church remained there until 1952 when, because of the airport, it was moved to the Landmeier farm at Foster Avenue and Illinois 83.

THE ONLY TRACE of the church at the former site is the cemetery north of the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks, which intersect with Mount Prospect Road north of Irving Park Road.

Today, only trucks use Mount Prospect Road to gain access to the south end of the airport.

G. M. Prostek has been the pastor of St. John's for the last six years. He's 41 years old and the father of five children.

A graduate of Mission House Seminary in Sheboygan, Wis., Rev. Prostek was at Pawauke and Random Lake, also in Wisconsin, before coming to Bensenville.

He says St. John's is a "uniting church" as reflected in its name, "United Church of Christ."

REV. PROSTEK explained that St. John's was once an Evangelical church but that in 1957 the Evangelical and Reformed Churches merged with the Congregational Christian Church to form the United Church of Christ.

Within five to 10 years, Rev. Prostek foresees a further merging with eight other denominations.

"Our history has come to a point where some day we might see one Protestant church," said the pastor, recalling the mergers of the Congregational and Christian denominations in 1931 and the Evangelical and Reformed denominations in

To Prepare Parks

About $2,000 worth of playground equipment and picnic tables and benches will be installed this week at A and B Park, Bryn Mawr and Valley Road, Roselle.

"Weather permitting, installation of the equipment which we have had since last fall will be sometime this week," Paul Derda, Roselle park director, said.

The baseball fields at the park will be used for minor league play this summer for boys 8 to 10-years-old.

A full array of equipment for tiny tot, and intermediate youngsters has been purchased, Derda said.

Equipment includes such items as a space platform sliding board, muscle-man gym set, horses set on huge springs and a swing set.

THE PICNIC tables will provide families in that area with a neighborhood park, Derda said, at which the kids can play and the parents enjoy the outdoors. The area will be developed more fully in the future, he added.

The park district will have a six-week summer recreation program this year.

Details on what will be offered are expected to be finalized soon. After the regular summer program, swimming classes will be at Flick-Reedy Corp. in Bensenville.

The district also is working on spring equipment repair and getting baseball fields in shape for summer play.

Plans for the Roselle swimming pool will be reviewed soon by the park board along with other plans for following up a referendum okay of $400,000 worth of park improvement bonds recently.

Dissent Is War's Legacy

THE REGISTER

Wednesday, May 7, 1969

Section 2 — 1

by MARY HUTCHINGS

The 1960's bear the scar of Vietnam. The life, views, attitudes and in many ways the domestic affairs of the nation have been influenced by the U. S. military intervention in Southeast Asia.

One important effect of the war has been evidenced in the number of anti-war protests and slogans in recent years. In fact, dissent has attained an unprecedented level of legitimacy.

The emergence of Sen. Eugene McCarthy on the political scene in 1968 was largely due to the need for what the peace candidate called an "alternative."

His anti-war candidacy and early success were the determining factors, many believe, on former President Johnson's decision not to run for re-election and on the decision of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy to seek the nomination of the Democratic Party.

THE VIETNAM war, through the candidacy of McCarthy, brought about new interest and involvement in politics by youth.

Kids rang doorbells, stood on street corners and even washed cars for Gene. Dissent in America reached a new high — on a new plateau.

Dissent through the use of political channels was a return to the constitutional ideals of free speech and free thought.

Then came Chicago and the aftermath of the tragedy of the convention week last August is still being felt. Americans went to the polls in November with little choice — there was negligible difference in the Vietnam planks of the two parties.

Though the anti-war elements of the nation failed to elect a president, they did seem to be a unique phenomenon in themselves. Rarely in U. S. history have so many different elements found common ground in a single protest, and for many reasons.

The protest over U. S. involvement in Vietnam war and protest over the draft, a fact.

The dissent which has split this nation has found supporters in all strata — from the super intellectual concerned with the academics of the situation to the 18-year-old who doesn't want to die.

College students, high schoolers, blue and white collar workers, housewives, hippies, politicians, even "rabble-rousers" — all have found economic, political, social or philosophical reasons to voice their protest of the war.

THERE HAVE been slogans — "War is not healthy for children and other living things." "This war is a bomb" — but there have been profound effects on the American mind. Protest over Vietnam has brought into focus a whole spectrum of social issues.

The draft has been the concern of much controversy and attack recently in the light of the effect of the Vietnam war. Eighteen-year-olds who face an uncertain future have centered attention on the inequities of the selective service system — including the effect of the draft on the lives of ghetto dwellers, who are usually among the first to be drafted.

Thus, perhaps indirectly because of the Vietnam war and protest over the draft, colleges have recently scurried to institute programs for admittance of potential students to their schools.

In another chain reaction, blacks and underprivileged have realized a new emphasis on their causes.

Moreover, it seems that the entire condemnation of the "establishment" has stemmed from protest over U. S. handling of the Vietnam war. Many Americans have begun to see the individual rather than the bureaucracy as the significant factor in their lives.

Vietnam has probably in some way touched the lives of the majority of Americans, but it has most certainly marked the entire decade.

Protest has become a way of life, so to speak. No longer is it reserved for beatniks — dissent has become respected and "legitimate." Protest as a political necessity, then, is the legacy the '60s leave to history.

Highlights on Youth

Letters from Nam

(First Lieutenant C. M. Erickson is stationed in Nha Trang, Vietnam. His family receives letters from him regularly. From some of these letters, his sister, Joy Erickson, a junior at Forest View High School, has taken excerpts and has interjected commentaries. The following article gives her opinion of letters from her brother.)

"Well, I finally made it. Get out your map of Vietnam — you should have one to keep up with me."
And so we did.
"Vietnam is beautiful — all green."

"TRYING to find my assignment was the next step in the game. It didn't seem that they needed a new man anywhere... but the battalion commander of the 54th called back because the colonel had told him I was a journalist and told him he wanted me to become assistant to his adjutant of the 54th Signal Battalion, located at NHA TRANG — one of the three best places to be in Vietnam. This was the Riviera when the French were here."

16 January, 69
Now the problem is to get used to the place. It seems from his first few letters that he has it fairly good, but it's just getting used to having it so good!

"This is my 10th day in this country — seems like a century already. Vietnam gets old fast. The days are long on the job, 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. After I get off at night I have supper and then grab a beer at our little officers' club that the 54th has. Then about all you have time for is a shower before hitting the sack."

So now he's got his job, he's starting to get accustomed to the hours and he can even get in a beer at night.

"IN OUR little club drinks cost 20 cents a beer, and 30 cents for a mixed drink. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 7-9 p.m. they are half-price. The 10 cent beer has returned."

In describing the nights and the artillery setup he said, "From a distance it looks like the 4th of July every night. There really isn't much in the way of enemy involved. We just have to keep letting him know that we will take care of him if he gets wise."

Sunday 19 January, 69
"WELL, I am just now finishing my first of 52 seven-day weeks."

What else is there except to count the days? I'm sure that we would all do the same.

"There is a lot going on right now. The artillery boys are still pumping harassment fire into the hills at night and everybody is getting ready to see if V.C. throw an attack our way during the Tet season, (which means lunar new year) which starts Jan. 31. Most of the action is still in the central highlands and down in the Delta region."

Rooming with the chaplain isn't so bad after all, it seems. "Moved into the chaplain's hooch (room) yesterday — so I'm permanently settled. The chaplain — Mr. X (captain) — is a pretty good guy. About his only gripe is in not being able to get enough ice for his bourbon — so what are you going to do? Actually that sounds worse than it really is — he's a pretty liberal fellow (MA in psyche) and is serving his second tour in Vietnam. So that is a pretty good contribution."

Not to mention the living conditions — "Oh, I didn't tell you how hard the living is. We have our own maid, called a 'mama san,' who does the beds, the laundry on a daily basis and spit-shines the boots too! All this for $10 a month per man. And by their standards they are overpaid. Oh well, fried chicken tonight, and clean boots tomorrow."

Love, Bud

It's Their War

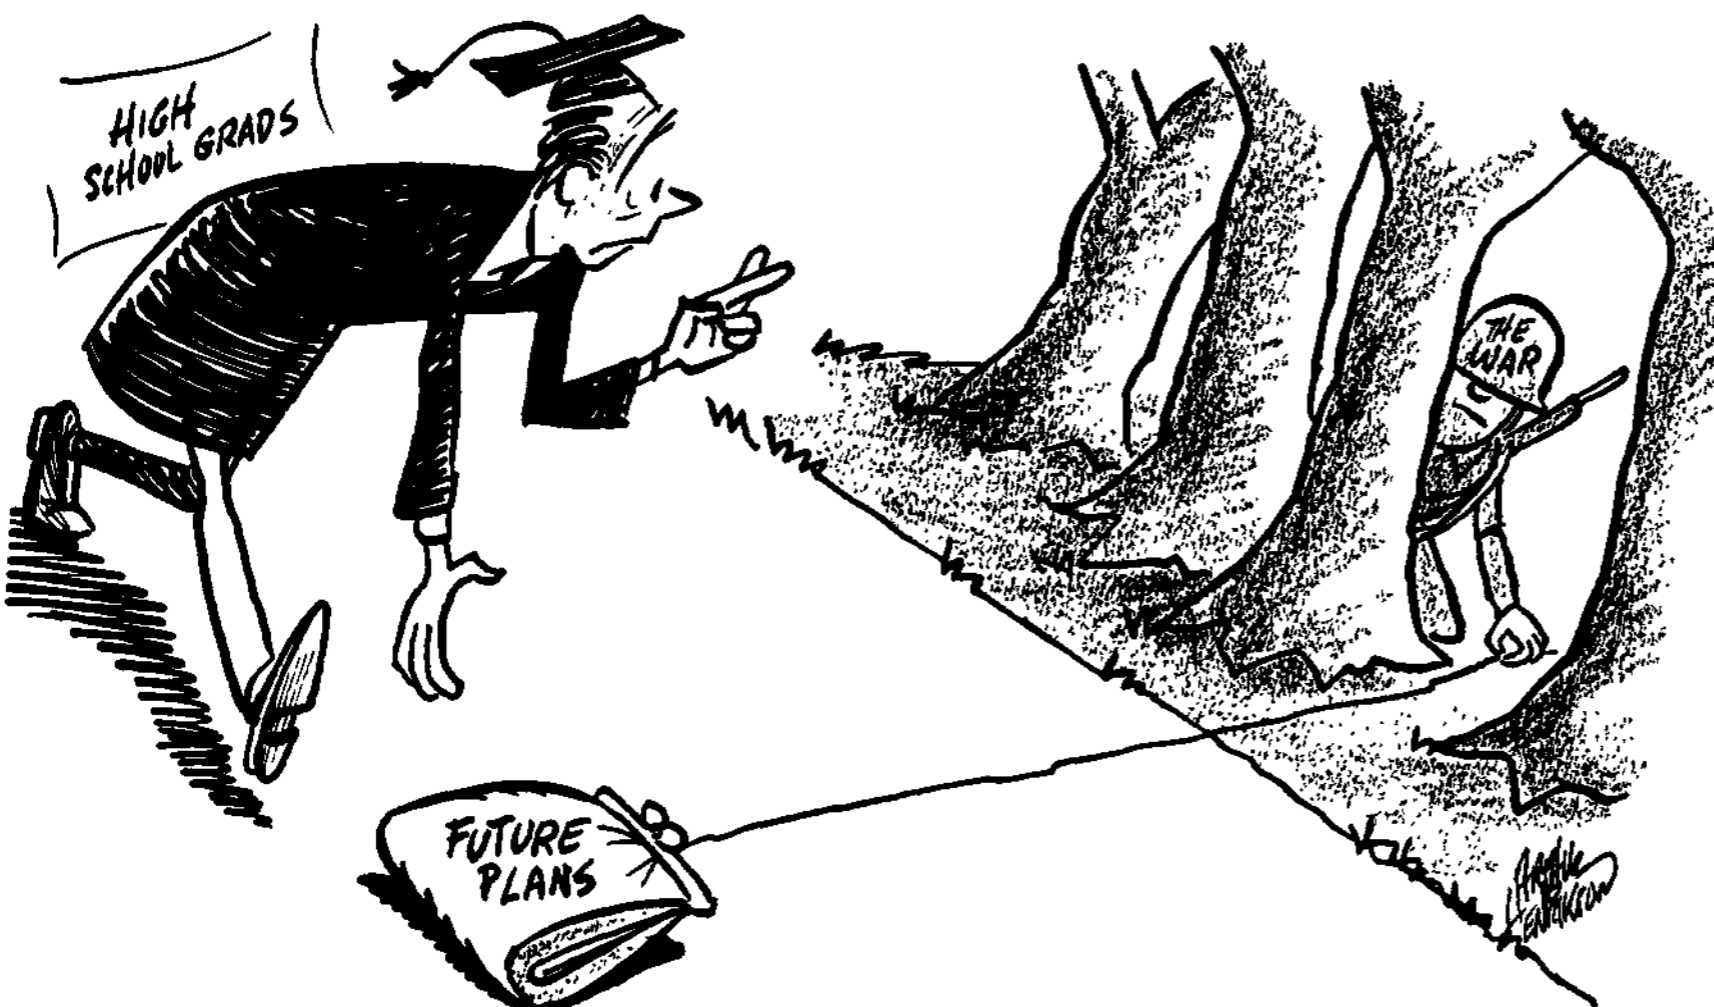

The war in Vietnam has made Nha Trang a household word.

It has divided the United States almost as visibly as Vietnam is divided.

It has changed the lives of virtually every one in this country.

But possibly most important — in the long run — it has given protest to a new legitimacy.

Because this war is fought by the young, the staff of Highlights on Youth analyzes it today from the student viewpoint.

It Won't Go Away if You Ignore It

by LAURA MARCUS

It is hard to ignore Vietnam. Approximately half of the American budget goes to defense and a large portion of this is directly tied up with our position in Southeast Asia.

The papers are continually flooded with the news of the war, stories range from the Paris peace talks to the casualty reports. Vietnam has become one of the most written-about as well as one of the most protested issues.

There is little question as to the effect of Vietnam war on the high schooler facing graduation, especially if he has no plans for an immediate college education. Almost without exception, this student would be swiftly on his way to becoming a draft statistic.

SAID ONE BOY who will be going soon to Vietnam from his present training position.

"The draft had been after me for a long time and so I decided that there was nothing I could do."

He had been 3½ years in college and forced out by extenuating circumstances.

He said the United States should not be in the war. "But since we are, I guess we just have to finish it out," he added.

But what about the college-bound senior? What is the effect of the war on his life?

For the most part, the college-bound student finds himself, as far as action goes, removed from the surrounding issues of the war.

"I don't think my life would be any different today had I decided not to go to college. I had planned on it all along," said one senior boy.

Another student pointed out the fact that although Vietnam does not affect his college plans, he could see its effect in his friends. Somehow college was becoming a salvation for them, at least on a temporary basis.

The after-college question seemed too far away for most of the students to think about.

"I WORRY ABOUT it, but I can't let it take a hold of me. I've got to live for the present and when the time comes..."

said one boy looking ahead.

The effect of the war, said one student, "is on our thoughts and our opinions. Since I have entered high school, I have paid considerable attention to the whole issue."

"I know I will have to plan my future with the knowledge that I will have to serve in the armed services for at least two years. This means that I might not be able to go to college four straight years, or that I cannot get married until I finish my active duty. Also I cannot get a permanent job until I am finished."

The views of the students varied. The majority could understand the protests, but they believe the important thing is fulfillment of our previous commitment and support of the men in power.

Said one reluctant student, "I'm sick of everyone asking views on the war, what I think about this and that. If I have to answer another one, I'll..."

Minister Sees Coalition in Viet Nam

by TOM BARCLAY

The Rev. Paul Lindstrom of the Church of Christian Liberty in Prospect Heights is best known for his involvement with the "Remember the Pueblo" group and for this outspokenness over the EC-121 incident.

But if his views of these affairs have been publicized, so should his opinions on the Vietnam conflict.

"There seem to have been powers within our own government," he says, "that were seeking to turn the South Vietnamese government, a very strong anti-Communist government, into a weak coalition government, if not a Communist government."

"I certainly feel that there were those within the administration that were working in the direction of a coalition government for Vietnam."

"CERTAINLY, AT LEAST, the policies that they advocated for Vietnam have resulted in a condition of chaos there that will lead, as far as I can read the picture, to a coalition government for Vietnam."

"This is what was happening in the '50's; weakening the anti-Communist forces, causing confusion in the anti-Communist forces, or actually destroying the anti-Communist forces within that country, and then we moved in with a no-win policy that is leading in the direction of a coalition government."

"I can't really say what the motives of our policy makers have been, but I can see where their actions have taken us."

"I would question why the United States does not support the former emperor of Vietnam, the Bao Dai. He was, for many years a leading anti-Communist force in Vietnam and could probably unite the anti-Communist forces."

"And I would question why our government would not support the return to office of Vietnam's former security chief, Li Van Vien. He had years ago proved his effectiveness in combatting the V.C. terrorist organizations wherever he was given the responsibility of going to stop this terrorism. He proved himself very effective in matters of security, working under the Diem regime."

Rev. Lindstrom said he considers a coalition government for Vietnam definitely undesirable.

"I say this because the Communists, in fact Lenin himself, have stated that a coalition government containing a Communist element is a government favorable to the moulding of a Communist regime."

"Lenin said that the Communists need only 3 per cent of control within a government to completely control it, to dominate it. We have seen coalition governments fall many times to the Communists."

"It's simply been a matter of time before such a government has come under the control of the Communist branch of the coalition, and I certainly see this as the eventual outcome of a coalition government for Vietnam."

He followed this by saying, "I feel that we are only in Vietnam because we failed to successfully conclude the war in South Korea. Had we followed the advice of General MacArthur, had we bombed the Yalu River bridges, had we bombed the staging areas of Red China, and had we consumed that war as we had every other war we had ever been involved in, then I do not feel that we would have the presence of American forces in Southeast Asia today."

"But because General MacArthur was fired... we moved into a no-win policy, such as we had in Korea. I feel that this sort of policy is an idiotic policy."

"...WE ARE FIGHTING a very illogical sort of war," he said. "On one hand we are supposedly fighting the Communists in Vietnam, and on the other hand we are trading with the various Communist bloc countries of the world, we're trading with the Russians, we have cultural agreements with the Russians and all the other agreements, but we know that the Russians are sending approximately 82 to 84 per cent of the war materials used against us."

"It seems very stupid to be committing American servicemen to battle in one part of the world, and demanding of them the last full measure of devotion, and yet at the same time supporting the enemy who is helping to provide the bullets which are killing our sons."

"It's very illogical, and I think it's immoral, and certainly un-Christian, and I feel it's treason."

The 'Little War'

by DENISE LAMOT

Guerra is Spanish for war, and guerrilla means, literally, little war.

Little war is about the best way to describe guerrilla warfare, often talked about but rarely understood.

Guerrillas, the fighters, have not won wars, and it is doubtful that they could ever do so alone. But their activities could very well prevent the other side from winning. Because of this, military campaigns today call for strong anti-guerrilla forces.

In general, guerrilla warfare is an underground or irregular force working behind the lines or along side of the enemy's troops. Sabotage, terrorism, non-cooperation, propagandizing and resistance to occupation authority are some of the activities other than straight military that guerrillas take part in.

GUERRILLAS, unlike disciplined, well-trained and uniformed soldiers, are not held to the idea of corps spirit and are not compelled to face death and hardship as the others are. On the contrary, guerrillas often embrace an ideological concept or any one of the subjective things that develop during a war.

Their reason for fighting is, therefore, a cause, and not pride in the profession of arms.

Normally, a guerrilla will wear no distinctive uniform that distinguishes him from another man. Any certain insignia or item of apparel he may wear would be known to only fellow members of his particular group, for his success depends upon anonymity.

It is for this reason that regular troops find guerrillas such destructive enemies.

The tactics used by guerrillas could be described as "hit and run."

They use the element of surprise as a balance against the larger and stronger forces they attack.

Then, after attacking, they disappear just as quickly as they appeared.

Their mission is accomplished when they succeed in lowering the enemy's morale and forcing them into a stalemate or bringing them into a retaliatory campaign that will consume their resources.

In addition to attacking the troops themselves, guerrillas also destroy railroads, communication lines and supply dumps which are important to the enemy, again consuming needed resources.

All in all, guerrilla warfare is an addition to the regular troop warfare. The guerrillas do their fighting behind cover and their attacking suddenly.

Their objective is to distract the enemy from the regular troops, thus lowering the enemy's defenses, making it easier for the regulars to win the war.

3 Thais Approve

by TOM SMEDINGHOFF

With the ever increasing American impatience with the war in Vietnam, we might examine it from another point of view.

Unlike our position as citizens of the United States, the people of Thailand find themselves much more directly involved in the war, not only because of their proximity to the war zone and their commitment of troops, but because their country is directly threatened, as evidenced by the presence of communist guerrillas in Thailand itself.

How, then, do these people view the conflict so near to their own borders?

AMORN BENJEWAN, Montri Benjewan and Sanghapan Ploysook, three students from Bangkok, Thailand, now attending St. Viator High School, expressed their views of the war.

In general they support it, saying, "Americans are doing a good thing." "We're holding back the Communists, and this in turn helps the Thais fight their own communist insurgents."

But the three believe the Communists want to take over all of southeast Asia, but they also added they don't feel United States involvement in Vietnam is necessary to save Thailand from a Communist takeover.

But is the United States undermining the Thai economy and taking over the country economically?

All three Thai-born students seemed to disregard this possibility. They claimed just the opposite, citing as an aid to the Thai economy the increased jobs produced by the American presence in that country.

In summary, the war in Vietnam is "too bad," they said.

Here's Vietnam History

Since the Chinese conquest in 111 B.C., Vietnam has remained a Chinese possession for 1,000 years. In 939 A.D. the Vietnamese created their own empire.

In the 1600's, French missionaries went to Vietnam. The Vietnamese resented the missionaries and persecuted them. In the late 19th century, the French had control of the central and northern portions of Vietnam.

FRANCE RULED Indochina (of which Vietnam was a part) until 1940. During World War II, Japanese invaders seized Indochina. At the end of the war, Vietnam declared its independence. At first France recognized the independence, yet with the outbreak of the Indo-China War in 1946, it was withdrawn. The war between the French and a Communist-supported group ended with a French defeat.

In 1954, an international agreement divided Vietnam into two parts. The Communists took the north and left the south free. Diem made himself president and the land a republic.

In 1962, the South Vietnamese moved thousands of people into villages to protect them from the Viet Cong. Diem's brother organized a secret police to enforce Diem's rule. Diem established a military government.

In 1963, there was rioting in Saigon. Monks and nuns burned themselves to death in protest of the government.

On Nov. 1, Diem and his brother were killed. Currently peace talks are in progress in Paris.

Greg Belongs to Greg — He's the Lucky One

by LuANN WINE

There is no one like Greg Walsh, a junior at Palatine High School who has been honorably designated as Palatine High School's super non-hero.

In opposition to the standard stereotype all-American boy, Greg presents himself in a thoroughly unconventional way.

The era of the non-hero opens. As a non-hero, his gain in popularity was not through a wealth of money, athletics or scholarship (grades), but through his uniqueness.

Surely there has been a reputation building within the school about Greg.

"People envy Greg because they don't have the guts to do what Greg does."

"I like him because he's funny."

"He could be a genius if he wanted to."

"I like Greg because he's honest, not a fake."

"A LOT of people say I'm a kook, a weirdo or a hippie," Greg said.

"People are only called eccentric if they have money, and they are called kooks if they don't."

What is so outstanding about Greg Walsh? Why does he stand out at Palatine High School? The question has been pondered.

The outstanding feature that brings Greg into the limelight is "very easily, my nose," he quipped. With a masterful grace he posed readily to prove his statement and grinned mischievously.

"The school will give you self-discipline," Greg believes. The idea of a "patterned" education is unpopular with Greg. He thinks school "is supposed to prepare you for life. When you go to school every day and they're pushing all this knowledge at you, you've got to pick up something — you can't just sit there and vegetate."

"I KNOW I am different. I'm different maybe because I'm not as 'people-conscious.' It's useless trying to hide something so that you will be accepted."

Conversation led to discussing the "status" groups at Palatine High School. The Lettermen's Club, for instance, in which "some of the members are sincere in their striving because they really like the sport, but others are in there only for status."

Which prompted the question, "Do you feel you are above these people, do you feel that you are luckier than they?"

"Luckier, yeah, but not above them." Greg's preferences for personal physical achievements are tennis and gymnastics.

Greg's spontaneous plays of action cannot be overlooked, like the strange noises he makes when he travels through the halls.

He is especially fond of "chicken beaking," which involves very delicately plucking a person. As the chicken beaking continues, victims can experience extreme pressures of mental torment, more of a

AN INTRODUCTION to Greg's repertoire of impersonations include "thick split pea soup coming to a boil, an old man having a seizure and disgusting noise number three."

Kids prefer doing something to remain idle. "They have to find something to occupy their time. I think that's why sex and drugs are so popular," Greg said.

"To become rich — filthy rich!" is Greg's goal in life.

"Because if I had money," he explains,

"I could stop working and pursue the things I want."

If given a completely idle period, he feels that involving himself with something (music, in his case. This summer Greg will teach music at Kustom Music Center, Palatine) surpasses totally wasting his time. "I am a very materialistic person."

A look at the lighter things in life is called for. The final question is popped and answered. "When it comes to girls — that's a subject that's hard to think about."

Serendipity

by RUSS SINKLER

Good morning folks! To start things off, I'd just like to say a big hi (!) to Forest View High School's Serendipity Singers. That is — Pat Flanagan, Nancy Cooper and Diane Dahlquist. They really dig this column a whole bunch! They even have a dance that goes along with it. Right girls? (Movin' right along! hee hee hee!)

Well, I've just gotten back from my latest trek south. Not as far as Antarctica this time, just St. Louis metro. As I had promised, I'm gonna pass along the deal about their weekend scene. Ready?

Anyway, I arrived there at 4:45 a.m. and my first stop was the local "White Castle" drive-in to get a bite to eat. Imagine my surprise when I see piles of kids our age layin around the joint in their hot, gassed-up cars, while others patch out in the lot obsessively, as if it were music. At 4:45 a.m.

To top it off, a patrol of cops was eaten on the inside! You see, in order to get to the point, there are little, if any, curfew laws, not to mention that it seems like they don't hardly have any other laws either (at least they're not enforced too heavily).

THE WHOLE thing's kind of a waste, though, I really doubt if coming home at 4 is beneficial. I'm just talking out of the personal experience that when I rise up out of the feathers on Saturday morning at 8:15, I find that at least 7½ hours of sleep is helpful. 7½? Actually a person in my shape needs around 12!

However it's nice to know that the area lets you be free at night, in case you get the urge. You know what I mean?

So far as teen clubs go, things can be summed up duly by exclaiming, "They're scarce!" Yes, there are only a bare minimum of clubs, and the clubs they have aren't too advanced. What this means is you could put our first Celler when it got goin and their Castaway (their only club name that stuck with me) next to each other and they'd almost pass for twins. In other words, it's a cheezy, rinky-dink set-up for "boppers" and fake "hair-heads." According to my cousin from St. Louis, the club is populated mainly by long-hairs co-honor less pass "the word." That teen-

When I was down there, I also noticed that teenage drinking was quite prominent and I would safely venture to say that narcotics see their part around town, too. It just seems like a conducive atmosphere for that type of thing.

ACCORDING to my cousin, the place to go is the quarries, where the kids more or less splash it up. Mostly more, I guess from my observations, however these activities are more confined to the "college cat."

Speakin of cats . . . That's the other big deal down there. They have a chain of stores called "Katz." see? Well, when I was down there I didn't have a car with me, so I was confined to the immediate area, of sorts. In the area was a Katz.

I must've gone there four times that evening. Once for flashbulbs, once for cigars, once for gumballs, and once for . . . (hee hee hee) checkin out the scene at "Katz." That became my pastime . . . checkin' out de scene at "Katz."

You know, one of the times I was there this girl kept starin' at my cousin and me. So I convinced him to help me give her the treatment. This consisted of following her with our eyes through the storefront. Then after she left, we followed her down some dark streets until we reached a church. I guess we scared her, 'cuz she acted as if she was gonna go inside the church, but when she saw us go straight she went on. It was then I asked her to go to the 10 o'clock mass with me. She never answered. I guess I just don't have it!

Well, that's about it, really. About the only other thing I can think of is it is really beautiful around there and if you love good weather and pretty scenery, dig the St. Louis scene soon!

Now, gang, I'd like to apologize for last week's short "Serendipity." I hope I made up for it this week. Also, coming soon is a big deal on The New Place's grand reopening. You WILL dig it!

Anyway, now that you got the dope (?) stand by for schedule time

Movie Review

by DEBBI HEDGES

Streisand lights the screen in an Oscar-winning performance as Fanny Brice.

The screen version of the Broadway play "Funny Girl" is a dazzling knock-out musical which is a welcome relief from the many sadistic movies which are being produced today. Yet in recreating the life of Fanny Brice, the movie also presents emotion-packed drama.

Nominated for numerous Oscars — including best picture, best costumes, best musical score — "Funny Girl" is sure to be an ever-popular box-office seller.

THE CAST AND crew alone make "Funny Girl" outstanding. Barbra Streisand has become one of the world's most celebrated entertainers. She has attained fame as Fanny Brice both on screen and stage and she is a popular recording star. Now, in her first movie, she has won an Oscar as best actress.

The movie also stars Omar Sharif, which is enough to make anyone want to see it. An internationally known star, Sharif has become today's most romantic leading actor.

He has what is known as the Clark Gable charisma. Beyond that, he has starred in such motion pictures as "Lawrence of Arabia" and "Dr. Zhivago."

Together, Barbra and Omar create an indestructible dynamic duo.

In supporting roles, the film offers such well known personalities as Kay Medford, Walter Pidgeon and Anne Francis.

A well known producer of Broadway shows, Ray Stark, produced the movie as well as the play. In 1966 he formed his own production company, Rastar Productions, in order to produce the screen version.

To Stark, "Funny Girl" is more than just a movie because he is married to Fanny Brice's daughter.

What more can be said about "Funny Girl" than see it!

Simon Says 'Show Interest'

by CINDY ZUCKER
Lt Gov Paul Simon was the guest speaker at the law day assembly at Elk Grove High School last Friday.
Featured with Simon was the school's jazz band, under the direction of Douglas Peterson.
Simon is the state ombudsman, and as a Democrat, the only Lieutenant governor in history to serve under a governor of a different political party.
He spoke of the need to make the state government more responsive to its citizens, and then opened the floor for a question-answer period.

"WE ARE OFTEN told that we are a government of laws, and not of men," he said. "The problem is not following the laws, but making the laws responsive to needs."
He told of one prisoner in an Illinois jail who brought about a change in jail discharge laws simply by writing to him and explaining the faulty system which existed at the time.

"The government can be made to work, and it is you people who are interested now who will make it so. There is a healthy sign on campuses now, despite the excesses. Students and adults must be more than casually interested in government — they must support it actively."
He spoke of an incident in his own college days, when he wanted to discuss the invasion of Czechoslovakia but could find no one interested in talking about it. "There is concern and interest now," he conceded.
"When crisis strikes, it usually affects only a minority of the population. Polk County, located in southern Illinois, is an example of a forgotten area, for as industry leaves, so do the jobs, and many families must subsist on welfare," he said.
"There cannot be forgotten men in this nation, and only a responsible and responsive government can remedy the needs."
He was asked by one student what means of reconciliation were being made in Cairo, a city torn by racial strife.
Simon told of the personal part he had taken in the problem:
"FOR THE FIRST time, we called all of the clergy in the community together to meet, and we also had the city council meet with leaders of the black community in an effort to work out a solution."
In answers to other questions, Simon told the students that he favors lowering the voting age to 18 and said the state constitutional convention will begin late this year.
He drew applause when asked if he favors a smoking lounge in the school:
"The lieutenant governor does not have responsibility in that area."
His speech demonstrated an awareness in student problems and made the students themselves aware of their responsibility in government.
"If you are not interested now, you probably never will be — but if you are, show it in your attitudes and actions."

'Cherish' is the Theme

by MARLA BYL
"Cherish" is the theme of Forest View High School's 1968-1969 junior prom.
The prom will be held at The Carousel in Arlington Heights. The prom area will be decorated with the color theme of red and blue.

The dance is May 23, 9 p.m. until midnight.
The highlight of the dance will be at 10:30 p.m. when the queen will be crowned.
On May 9 the senior class will nominate five senior girls to be in the prom court. The actual voting for the queen will be at the dance. As the couples arrive, they will vote for the queen.
There will be continuous music supplied by Ivan Burke and His Orchestra, and the Four Naturals.
Cost of the dance is $3 per couple.
"WE HAVE designed a charm to give everlasting memories to the girls who attended the prom," Eileen O'Brien, prom chairman, said.
Other prom chairman are Kathy Komay, chairman of the coronation; Lois Mason, decorations; Joy Erickson, bands; Vicki Framburger, charms; Barb Betman, invitations.
Also on the prom committee are Karen McKenny and Bob Bergland, publicity; Barb Conway, refreshments; Ken Applehans, photographer; Pat Coyne, chaperones; and Pam Laugel, bids.
"A lot of hard work has gone into this prom, to make it the best from that Forest View has ever had," Eileen added.

Cosmetics Sale To Raise Funds

Sacred Heart of Mary High School's fund-raising event for this year is the sale of Holiday Magic Cosmetics.
The campaign lasts for two weeks and at the end of this time span, the school will receive a percentage of the profits.
EACH STUDENT was given a brochure and samples. Items for sale are skin-care products, lip-ticks, nail polishes, eye make-up, home-cleaning products and Cologne.
Girls turning in the most sales will receive prizes such as purses, wiglets and talls.
Anyone wishing to purchase these products may contact any Sacred Heart Student.

Teacher Runs (Puff, Puff) Twelve Miles

April 30 was made memorable for Conant High School students when David Alex, math teacher, set the school track record for a teacher, running 12 miles in 1 1/2 hours.

Alex's running commitment was the result of an offer he made at the recent Student Council auction. According to the proposal, Alex would run a mile for $4. His math classes quickly pooled money, and before Alex could back out of the offer, he was scheduled to run 12 miles.

A few students who attempted to accompany the teacher on the long trek were left behind by the fleet-footed Alex. They dropped out at the sixth mile.

But the teacher, who is also tennis coach, had determination.

Although he found himself losing speed at times, he sprinted in on the last mile to make a glorious finish.

"CAN I FIX you a little breakfast?" Senior Linda Ramsey, landlady in "Merton of the Movies" apparently enjoys the opportunity to assist her roomer Merton Gill, played by senior Ray Munro, on the night after his debut in the silent movies. "Merton" will be presented by the Arlington High School drama department, May 15 to 17.

Three Win Merit Scholarships

Sacred Heart of Mary High School has announced the names of the three National Merit Scholarship winners.

The girls are Chris Kirby, Debbie Threedy and Sue Zwolski, who have also been listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

Miss Kirby, who intends to attend the University of Pittsburgh, will major in biology. Her scholarship will be sponsored by United Airlines.

Her accomplishments from this past year include being the semi-finalist in the National Honor Society competition and being the business manager of the Marimead, Sacred Heart's school paper.

Miss Threedy, who will attend Beloit College in Beloit, Wis., will be majoring in either speech, dramatics, English literature or anthropology. She won a National Merit Scholarship for $1,000.

THIS YEAR SHE will be the senior class salutatorian. Her past accomplishments for this year are being the president of Drama Club and a finalist in the National Catholic Forensic Contest in Washington, D. C. She has also participated in the St. Viator-Sacred Heart Musical, "Music Man," and in the summer theater workshop.

Miss Zwolski is the third winner of National Merit Scholarship, sponsored by Reader's Digest for four years. It is renewable as long as a "C" average is maintained.

She will be attending Macalester College, in St. Paul, Minn., where she will major in biology and eventually will go into biological research.

She has been a member of Sacred Heart's drama club and of both the Elan and National Honor Society. She also has participated in St. Viator Chorale and the St. Viator Musicals, "Music Man" and "Carousel."

Her hobbies include playing the piano, sewing and reading, especially e.e. cummings, and T. H. White.

She was also awarded an honorary Illinois State Scholarship.

Potpourri

The members are just divided into varsity, sophomore, and freshman teams and will soon be placed in five-man teams according to ability.

SMASH has recently elected its officers for the coming season. Mike Kemp is president and Darrel Krueger is the vice president.

Plans for next year include several trips to Wilmet, Alpine and Mount Fuji.

"The response to the club this year has been great," said one enthusiastic member. "We have the biggest club in the school and from the interest shown it will be even bigger next year."

This year's banquet will be held this evening at Prospect High School. It was necessary to have the banquet there because of Forest View's building commitment to Harper College.

The banquet will be potluck and the speaker will be Jeff Ibsen, first vice president of the Illinois Association of Student Councils.

Hello Hostess

Mother's the 'Star' May 11

Is your family often "in the movies"? Do you take pride in your slides? Then consider today's Family Film Festival as your special Mother's Day Celebration for this year.

Roll out the red carpet to welcome your guests. Set up a spotlight to simulate an old-fashioned Hollywood premiere. Appoint an official photographer and announcer. Play recordings of songs from old movies. Prime the youngsters in the family to rush new arrivals, clamoring for autographs. (Mom, of course, rates the biggest welcome.)

HAVE A SPECIAL director's chair for Mother, preferably with her name lettered on the back. Use folding chairs to transform your party room into a theatre. Arrange ahead of time for screen, projector and other technical details. And do serve bags of hot popcorn to munch on through the "show."

Pick your flicks to suit your guest of honor. Ask each member of the family to bring favorite movies or slides, but limit the number so your program won't be too long. Have one person act as "M.C." to comment on the pictures and perhaps give out prizes in a few of the very oldest family pictures. You can bet Mother will think even the fuzziest old film rates an Academy Award when her "babies" are the stars!

RE-RUNS: We guarantee that this all-family "Star Party" will be a box-office smash with most snap-happy families. But if it won't appeal to your mother, "re-run" an idea from previous "Hello, Hostess" Mother's Day columns. One of the most popular is our Queen-for-a-Day mother-daughter luncheon. For that matter, any mother-daughter event is always popular, and even more so when the hostesses are teen-age daughters.

Outings are always "in," especially if your mother is a rather senior "senior citizen." Take her and a few of her friends out to lunch, out to a play, or just out for a bit of shopping and/or sight-seeing.

If outings are out because your mother's shut-in, you can still package a "mini-party," complete with guests, and take it right to her. Of course, you'll give careful thought to her health, strength, diet and other personal requirements. But even a bedbound patient can usually enjoy a short visit from a few close relatives and friends, complete with simple refreshments, decorations and presents.

If you're the mother to be treated, try giving youngsters (or their father) a few subtle hints as to your preferences. But, whatever the outcome, Applaud, Applaud; Appreciate, Appreciate. Remember, it's the thought that counts!

The "Hello, Hostess" Almanac: Amy always seems busy enough, what with Mother's Day, showers, graduation parties. But if you want something different to celebrate, here are a few more Red Letter Days to mark on your May calendar:

The International Film Festival is in Cannes, France, May 2-16. Two former Presidents were born in May: John F. Kennedy on May 29; Harry S. Truman on May 8 (which is also World Red Cross Day). May 17 is Armed Forces Day and also Constitution Day in Norway. National Maritime Day is May 22. The Pilgrimage of the Gypsies takes place in France, May 23-27. May 30 is Memorial Day and also the day of the Indianapolis 500-Mile Race.

IF THAT'S not enough to keep you busy, you can always be kind to animals during National Be Kind to Animals Week (May 4-10), dig worms for Let's Go Fishing Week (May 10-17), or pucker up for International Pickle Week (May 22-31) designed to "give national recognition to the world's most humorous vegetable."

And you can have music for all these activities since May is "International Play-Your-Own-Harpsichord Month." Happy harpsichording — and happy hostessing!

Circles Study Book of James

The Lutheran Church Women of Our Saviour's Lutheran Church of Arlington Heights will study the book of James, Chapter III. This is the third part of a three-part Bible study to be discussed at the May circle meetings. No advance preparation is needed. Participants are invited to bring a favorite excerpt from the Bible.

Thursday morning circle meets May 8, at 9:30 a.m. with Mrs. John Milas of Arlington Heights as hostess; Thursday evening circle meets at 8 p.m. with Mrs. Philip Wray of Arlington Heights as hostess.

The Monday evening circle meets May 12 at 8 p.m. with Mrs. Carl Couve of Rolling Meadows as hostess; the Tuesday afternoon circle meets May 13 at the church with Mrs. Richard Wise as hostess. There will be no sitter.

The Wednesday morning circle meets May 14 at 9:30 a.m. at the church. Mrs. Day Frandsen is hostess. There will be a sitter.

For A Happy Life

It's Fun in May To:

1. Take the family on a visit through a bakery, cannery or some large factory.
2. Believe in your ability to be a charming hostess.
3. Offer to take a shut-in for a ride some pretty day.
4. Figure the savings if you bought laundry detergent in 20 or 40 pound cartons.
5. Give your mother-in-law a chance to visit alone with her son.
6. Study the texture of your skin. Consider how you might improve it.
7. Be a jolly mother. Laugh, smile, tickle and tease. Tell jokes, hide surprises, have fun!
8. Note this by Montaigne: "The height of wisdom is to take things as they are, and to look upon the rest with confidence."

Now That She's a Mother

It Does Make a Difference

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mother's Day this year will be, for me, the best of all times because now I both have one and am one.

It's really an odd sort of observance. For some, it is too commercial, just another way to lead the unwary into conspicuous consumption. For others, it is more a bitter-than-sweet day, a reminder that their own mothers no longer are with them.

But for the lucky ones like me, it's a day to rejoice, particularly when I look at my sturdy 13-month old daughter, or when my husband grins at me and says, "You made a beautiful baby."

My own mother, who for some unfathomable reason prefers to be called granny, rather than grandma, has definite doubts about some of the ways my husband and I are bringing up our little girl.

I think granny is surprised her granddaughter has survived our care.

But there she is, recovered from her winter miseries of colds and tummy virus, her smile exposing three and a half teeth, almost ready to walk by herself.

A year ago on Mother's Day our baby had been home for about a month after her weeks in the premature ward.

My husband and I had worked out a routine for her care, but mostly she was a little lump who slept, woke up like an alarm clock every four hours to be fed, slurped up her bottle like a vacuum cleaner, then promptly went back to sleep.

We were hoping her eyes would stay blue (they have), that she would remain bald (she hasn't) and that we would become superparents who never made mistakes (we haven't).

Being on the receiving end of Mother's Day this year makes me realize that I am, suddenly and forever, also on the other side of the generation gap.

Until I became a mother, I was living in a sort of delayed post-adolescence. I could talk to teenagers easily because in their separation between "they" and "us" as in, "They don't understand us," I identified more with the teen-age "us."

Now I'm beginning to shift, and I know that shift will become more pronounced as the years go by and my daughter grows up. It's one thing to hold theoretical opinions on everything from pot to petting, quite another to apply them to your own child.

I laugh at my husband when I mention our daughter's eventually dating and his eyebrows collide in consternation. But in the back of my mind as I read newspapers today are thoughts about how to guide a child without steering her, how to teach her right from wrong in theory so she can apply it in particular—and without scaring the daylight out of her.

Probably, we'll do as unsatisfactory a job of it, in her eyes, as parents have done since the cave parents sat up waiting for the Neanderthal next door to drag their shaggy darling home by the hair.

Of course, there's another side to being on the receiving end of Mother's Day.

I keep dropping muttered hints around the house such as, "Diamonds are a mother's best friend" and "Mink is so practical for a mother to wear."

So far he hasn't picked up one. But then, as I've told him time and again, he never picks up anything around the house.

Nurses Donate Tape Recorder To Hospital

St. Alexius Hospital was the recipient of an Ampex portable tape recorder, the gift of the Elk Grove Nurses Club, as they wound up the club year.

Outgoing vice president Mrs. Roger Conrad and publicity chairman, Mrs. Donald Doucette presented the recorder to Mr. E. H. Harlow, director of nursing service at the hospital. The recorder will be used at educational meetings and for training programs in the new coronary care and psychiatric units being planned.

New officers for the 1969-70 year, who will assume leadership May 20 are: Mrs. Dean Armstrong, president; Mrs. Stanley King, vice president; Mrs. John Bourke, recording secretary; Mrs. Edward Tucker, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Paul Reichenbacher, treasurer.

Residents desiring to borrow hospital equipment may contact Mrs. Vernon Meyer, lending closet chairman, at 437-4532.

Countryside Gardeners Sell Corsages Saturday

Corsage making will be the one and only order of business when members of Countryside Garden Club gather in the community room of the Bank of Rolling Meadows tomorrow (Thursday) evening.

The gardeners will be creating corsages for their annual Mother's Day corsage sale Saturday in front of the Rolling Meadows Jewel Store.

Mrs. Jerome Handel, and other Countryside Garden Club members prepare for their corsage sale.

"PLEASE DON'T eat the daisies!" Kim Handel, 21 months, obligingly only sniffs the flowers as her mother,

Mrs. Jack Moodie

Portrait of First Lady

by MARY B. GOOD

Sue Moodie is the lady behind the man, first critic and advisor to Palatine's village president, Jack Moodie.

The lady's zodiac sign is Gemini, which may account for her wide range of interests, since those of this sign are supposed to be versatile. Sue Moodie is both sophisticated and homespun.

She has participated in the Great Books program and taken part in community theater as well as being allied with the 4-H program through her daughter's involvement.

An efficient medical secretary who charts and labels EKG's, she insists her mathematical ability is zero.

"Jack says I could mess up a one-car funeral," she joked.

Here is one college graduate who enjoys "idiot work" as she labels her embroidery samplers, a creative endeavor Mrs. Moodie tends to understate.

"A FRUSTRATED artistic ability led me to handicrafts," she said. "I got a 'D' in high school sewing. It would have been a worse grade, but the teacher liked me!"

Later on, Sue took a night sewing course, but said she never got any place until in a millinery class she learned how to handle her hands.

"It was degrading to see my daughter a better seamstress than her mother."

Now Mrs. Moodie sews about half her wardrobe, especially delighting in cocktail and evening dresses because they're "more exciting."

Since Mr. Moodie isn't home as much as he'd like to be, due to village business and his own loop sales representative firm, Sue fills the gap with her secretarial job and "always has a project going." She's trying to plot her own embroidery patterns, dabbles at yarn stitchery and petting and has done her share of knitting.

HER POSITIVE mental attitude on the outcome of her husband's re-election April 15 was translated into the creation of a village seal, done in crewel. It hangs in Jack's home office.

She started her project, the idea borrowed from Julie Nixon, the first of the year. She worked on it in snatches, hiding it when Jack came home from work so he would be surprised.

Trustee Clayton Brown helped obtain a large metal seal off a village vehicle when no transfer could be found. With carbon paper she traced the seal and copied it with gold and black yarn.

The seal combines the American eagle with a sheaf of wheat, a wheel, a book and the cross, all united to represent Palatine founded as a Christian farming community by settlers searching for knowledge.

"JACK'S HAD A lot of flak about the cross on the village seal, but he says, 'As long as I'm president, the cross stays on it.'"

Sue married Jack when he was a 27-year-old bachelor and she the widow of a Korean War soldier with three small children. The family includes Christine, a married art student who will be off to Australia in August; Susanne, 23, graduating from Northern Illinois University; John, who wants to be an architect, and Jack and Sue's daughter Cynthia, who is 16 and a junior at Palatine High School.

A colorful, talkative and personable woman, Sue Moodie loves the socializing part of politics — hates the "bad press" and unfavorable remarks which a politician's wife must learn to buffer.

"I think Mrs. Richard J. Daley of Chicago must be as tough as an armadillo by now," she mused.

HOME IS A 100-year-old refurbished Williamsburg colonial at 103 N. Benton. This water-lover can be found taking morning dips in the in-ground swimming pool as the weather warms, and her retirement dream is to chart a trip around the world in a sailboat.

Meanwhile, she exchanges sea tales with fellow members of the Waukegan Yacht Club, where the family's 28-foot sailing vessel is moored.

Life is comfortable, cultural and creative for the politician's wife, who put the woman's touch in the seal of public office.

Some Statistics for Parents

by PATRICIA MCCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI)—Your daughter the high school student wants a $110 fun fur coat.

"All the kids are getting one," she says in a pouting, tearful manner meant to break your heart if you turn her down.

You don't have to swallow that "all the kids" argument if you find yourself in such a squeeze at back-to-school clothes buying time—August and September.

Thanks to a marketing survey, there are statistics to guide you.

High school girls—6.3 million of them—spent on the average $276.22 for wearing apparel last year, according to the survey sponsored by "Seventeen" Magazine.

And they didn't, on the average, spend anything near $110 for a coat. The averages on coats ranged from $10.35 for parkas to $31.80 for a dressy coat.

About the fur coat? The 4.2 per cent of the high school girls who bought fake and real fur coats paid an average of $31.27.

During the two months covered by the study the teenage girls spent $1.7 billion for wearing apparel. They spent, in addition, $394 million for things connected with the fun and work of a teenager—from ballpoint pens to portable televisions, hairdryers and tape recorders.

Adding the fun expenditures to the clothing bill, each girl spent $338.93, on the average.

The marketing survey showed other averages to help the master of the family budget decide how much to earmark for teenage girl's back-to-school expenditures. Consider:

—The girls are big buyers of regular and pants suits, $24.52 and $18.54 respectively.

—Mini skirts. The 15.6 per cent who bought one paid $6.63. Most of them purchased longer, described as "short length", skirts at $7.51.

—In the dress bracket, 51.1 per cent bought jumpers, still a schooltime mainstay, for $8.60.

—They preferred pullovers and turtle-necks to cardigans in the sweater department and paid, on the average, $7.73 for the pullover and $5.64 for the turtleneck.

—They paid from $3.91 to $10.58 for pants, the more expensive ones being ski pants. Five per cent bought plus fours (knickers) at $6.78 apiece.

—For shoes they paid from $3.81 (sneakers) to $15.40 (leather boots). Most shoes bought were school and date (dress) flats. The school types cost $7.85 and the date ones, $8.26.

The least expensive item on the clothing list: panties at 76 cents apiece.

The briefer underpinnings, bikini panties, were preferred by one out of four girls and cost $1.31 apiece.

Style 'Whys' At Luncheon

The "why" rather than "what" women are wearing was amusingly pointed out when Ethel Burge, lecturer and fashion editor presented her program, "Your Fashion Horoscope," at a luncheon meeting of DuPage County Homemakers.

The annual meeting was held April 29 in Itasca Country Club with 500 members of the DuPage County Homemakers Extension Association present. Business of the day included the installation of Mrs. Charles W. Tinsley, Naperville, president, and reports from professional advisors. Mrs. Rachel L. Crabb, extension advisor, was honored for her 10 years of service to the Homemakers.

Among the eight charter members present at the meeting was Mrs. William Warner of Bartlett. The eight joined the organization in 1930.

Mrs. Gil Kramer Heads Juniors

Mrs. Gil Kramer is the new president of Wood Dale Junior Woman's Club. She and her board of directors were installed at a banquet April 29 at Arley's Restaurant, Downers Grove, attended by club members, their husbands, eight past presidents and four charter members of the club.

Mrs. Jack Carlson, 11th District Junior Director, IFWC, was the installing officer.

Taking office under Mrs. Kramer were Mrs. Albert Ladubec, vice president; Mrs. Jerry Kaufmann, secretary; Mrs. Delmar Lettenmeier, treasurer. Mrs. Stanley Bogdajewicz and Mrs. Ralph Madonna are ways and means co-chairmen; Mrs. Leo E. White is press chairman.

THE MEMBERS WHO retired from offices this year were given engraved charms by the retiring president, Mrs. Dom Vecchione.

The Juniors recently hosted a surprise farewell party for Mrs. Robert Fleck, treasurer, who is leaving Wood Dale due to a job transfer for her husband. The Flecks will live in Stirling, N.J.

Yes, 'It's Love'

"It's Love," St. Alexius Hospital Auxiliary's variety show, will be presented on May 30, 31 and June 1 at Elk Grove High School. Ginger Walsh, who will produce and direct the show for the second time, reports that rehearsals have begun and all participants are working to make the show a worthwhile evening.

Mrs. William Maloney is this year's show chairman. Anyone interested in attending may obtain tickets from the ticket chairman, Mrs. R. H. Eltenhoefer, 437-0352, or from Mrs. Donald Dean at BR 9-5297 or Mrs. Robert Fleming at HE 7-9134.

All members in good standing may compete; judges will be members of the state style body. The chapter will be meeting at 8 p.m.

Also, tonight, the group will be selecting committees for its second annual "Our Fair Lady at the Races" set for Monday, June 16, at Arlington Park. The affair includes luncheon and an afternoon of racing.

'Sound of Music' Runs Through This Sunday

Maggie Task

Maggie Task plays the Mother Abbess in "The Sound of Music" at Mill Run Playhouse through May 11. Dorothy Collins stars in the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical — the first of the theatre's spring musical season.

Miss Task grew up in Chicago, attending Sem High School and Wright Junior College. She toured with the national company of "Most Happy Fella" and her Broadway appearances include "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," "The Education of Hymen Kaplan" and "Funny Girl."

Local cast members include Bradley Patterson, Palatine, as Baron Elberfeld, and Karen Greyson, Rolling Meadows, as a postulant and one of the Festival Concert winners.

After a week's honeymoon in the Bahamas, newlyweds John and Maureen Lord are back to the Midwest and living in Rosemont. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David J. Garry, 110 N. Addison, Bensenville, and parents of the groom are the Theodore A. Lords of Dixon, Ill.

The couple were married the afternoon of March 29 in St. Alexis Church, Bensenville, by Father Joseph Jurkovich. Later there was a dinner reception for 100 guests at the local VFW Hall.

A white silk organza empire gown was the bride's choice for her wedding day. The dress had long fitted sleeves, a scooped neckline and a flowing train, all trimmed with embroidery set with pearls and sequins. Her shoulder-length veil was held in place by an organza floral headpiece accented with a single pearl drop on the forehead. She carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias, white roses and stephanotis.

PAMELA BARRY of Des Plaines was her maid of honor, dressed in pink Italian imported silk styled similar to the bride's gown, with a headpiece of pink and white bows and pink veiling. Her bouquet was a colonial arrangement of pink-tipped carnations with long green velvet streamers.

There were two bridesmaids, Barbara Garry and Mrs. Jeanne Nicholson, both sisters of the bride, who were gowned exactly as the maid of honor.

Kelly Kathleen Garry of Indianapolis 8-year-old niece of the bride, was flower girl, wearing a pink Italian silk dress trimmed with white lace embroidery and a pink velvet headpiece of tiny bows. She carried a basket of white rose petals.

STEVE HARDY of Danville was best man for the double ring rites. Ronald Lord, the groom's brother, and Richard Dempsey, a cousin from Oshkosh, Wis., seated the wedding guests.

The new board member slate will also be announced, with nominations accepted from the floor.

Following the business meeting will be entertainment featuring Guild members, and refreshment.

A light blue silk dress with a matching jacket and accessories were worn by the bride's mother and an orange crepe dress with a gray and white houndstooth coat and orange accessories were the choice of the groom's mother. Each had a white orchid corsage.

Vocalist for the two o'clock ceremony was Tom Ryan of Bensenville.

The bride, a graduate of Fenton High School, is in the reservations department of Eastern Airlines in Chicago. The groom has a bachelor's degree from Illinois State University and a master's from Southern Illinois University. He is teaching at Maine West High School, Des Plaines.

Cook of the Week

She Likes To Make Soup from Scratch

by LOIS SEILER

The aroma of homemade vegetable soup simmering on the stove gives a lot of satisfaction to Mrs. George E. McKenzie of 331 S. Burton, Arlington Heights.

She likes to make soup from scratch because of its full-bodied flavor. Her favorite recipe is from a cookbook, but she doctored it up to suit her taste.

Talie McKenzie uses 2 to 3 pounds of short ribs in her soup, which makes it rich and meaty. Along with the conventional fresh vegetables, such as carrots, onions and celery, she adds canned tomatoes, frozen mixed vegetables and peas. Then she tosses in whatever leftovers are in the refrigerator, such as lima beans or corn, and even leftover pot roast gravy or broth.

One of her own innovations is the addition of minced garlic, and she also seasons the soup with ground cloves, which gives it an interesting flavor.

Because it makes such a large quantity, Talie usually freezes half of the soup.

"If you aren't going to freeze it, you can add potatoes," she remarked.

FOR ONE OF HER husband's favorite meals, Talie accompanies the hearty soup with toasted cheese sandwiches.

Another of her specialties is an easily made pot roast that makes its own gravy as it cooks.

This recipe was originally used by Talie's grandmother. Before Talie was married, her mother typed up her favorite recipes and assembled them in a box for her daughter. Talie has enjoyed this so much that she did the same for her three younger sisters, adding some of her own favorite recipes which she acquired over the years.

For the pot roast, she cuts the fat off first and renders it in a large skillet or Dutch oven. Then onions and the meat are browned in this fat. Canned tomato soup and seasonings are added, and the roast is simmered for three hours.

"More liquid accumulates as the meat cooks, and the tomato soup makes a rich, wonderful gravy," Talie commented.

SHE ADDS CARROTS and potatoes the last half hour of the cooking period. A tossed salad or lettuce wedges is all that is needed as an accompaniment for this easy meal.

"You can serve noodles with the pot roasts instead of potatoes," Talie added, instead of potatoes.

It is this flavorful pot roast gravy that Talie adds to her vegetable soup if there is any left over.

For people who have trouble with pie crust, she recommends her Murbe Teig pastry.

An old German recipe which she also acquired from her mother, she uses it to make fruit kuchen.

"The pastry is richer and thicker than a regular pie crust," Talie said, "plus easier to make and always a success."

SHE LIKES TO make her kuchen with Italian plums. When they are in season during the summer months, Talie buys a large supply and stores them in the freezer for use during the rest of the year.

These are arranged in rows over the murbe Teig pastry and topped with a mixture of flour, sugar and cinnamon.

"You can also make this kuchen using apples, peaches or blueberries," Talie explained.

Very flavorful and appealing, she has taken these kuchen to church suppers and also serves them as a dinner dessert.

FORMERLY Palatine Editor for Paddock Publications, Talie is now the busy mother of three children: Trip, 8; Teddie, 6½, and Kedrin, 4.

Continuing her interest in the affairs of Palatine, she is secretary to the Palatine Plan Commission. She also is a lay reader for a senior English teacher, sings in the Southminster Presbyterian Church choir and belongs to the local Gamma Phi Beta Alumnae Club.

Talie says she is a "gardener out of necessity" because of the family's big back yard, and she also enjoys sewing and craft work.

HOMEMADE VEGETABLE SOUP

- 2 to 3 pounds short ribs
- 3 quarts water
- 1½ tablespoons salt
- 2 medium onions, sliced
- 6 pared carrots, cut into chunks
- 2 coarsely cut-up celery ribs
- 1 green pepper, cut up
- 1 No. 2½ can tomatoes
- 2 tablespoons snipped parsley
- 2 teaspoon ground cloves
- 2 minced cloves garlic
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1½ teaspoon pepper
- 1 box frozen mixed vegetables
- 1 box frozen peas
- Any leftovers, such as corn, lima beans, pot roast gravy or broth.

Put meat, water and salt into a kettle and bring to a boil. Skim off top. Add remaining ingredients except frozen vegetables. Simmer for 3½ hours.

Remove short ribs and let cool. Remove meat from bone. Discard fat and bone.

Return meat to pot; add frozen vegetables and simmer for a half hour. Serves 12.

TOMATO SOUP POT ROAST

- 1 3 to 4 pound pot roast
- 2 onions, sliced in rings
- 1 can tomato soup
- Salt
- Pepper
- Paprika
- Bay Leaf
- Parsley
- Carrots
- Potatoes

Cut fat off pot roast and render in a Dutch oven or skillet. Brown onions in the fat; add the pot roast and brown on all sides.

Add the tomato soup and season to taste. Simmer, covered, for 3 hours. If using an electric skillet, set temperature at 325 degrees. If a Nesco oven is used, bake at 350 degrees.

Thirty to 45 minutes before the pot roast is done, add carrots and potatoes.

PLUM KUCHEN WITH MURBE TEIG PASTRY

- 1 cup flour
- ¼ cup margarine
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 egg yolk
- Italian plums

Cut flour, margarine and sugar together with a pastry blender. Work in egg yolk with your fingers. Pat into a 10-inch pyrex or Corning Ware dish.

Slice Italian plums in half, remove pit and lay on an angle in rows with plums overlapping. (Apples, peaches or blueberries may be substituted for the plums.)

Combine the following:

- 1½ cups sugar
- 1 tablespoon flour
- Dash of cinnamon
- Sprinkle over top of plums. Bake one hour at 350 degrees.

Hearty Quick Supper

For a quick hearty supper, take a can or two of bean and bacon soup, add equal amount of water, chopped fresh onion, dried parsley, and 1 teaspoon of aromatic bitters per can. Simmer gently until onion is soft.

A Slimming Salad

A cottage cheese and egg mixture makes a nourishing, low-calorie salad slimmer. Combine 2 cups of cottage cheese with 1 hard-cooked egg, finely chopped; 2 tablespoons of chopped canned pimiento and 1 tablespoon of chopped chives. Spoon into 4 cooked cold artichokes and serve with fresh lemon juice or low-calorie french dressing.

You can. You can make better coffee.

Week's Best Buys In Meat, Poultry

All prices are up from last year's quotes, and meats are no exception. Survey sources for the first week in May indicate all retail prices have advanced, but there are still some Chicago-area food values.

Poultry values include whole and cut-up fryers, eggs and small turkeys.

Meats that are best values include rolled rump and sirloin tip roasts, round and sirloin beef steaks, beef briskets, beef liver, ground beef, center cut pork and sliced loin chops, pork steaks, pork picnics and second grade bacon.

3rd Annual Spring Benefit Dinner

The Grecian Room of Stevens Restaurant in Elmhurst will provide a colorful background Tuesday evening, May 20, for the "black-tie" third anniversary spring benefit dinner sponsored by the DuPage Memorial Hospital Board of Governors.

For the third year, Chriss Stevens, Elmhurst restaurateur, is underwriting expenses so that all proceeds may accrue to the hospital building fund.

Robert E. Soukup of Roselle will serve with Stevens as co-chairman of the planning committee.

ON HAND TO entertain will be television, musical comedy and night club personality Charlie Manna, following the champagne dinner which will feature filet mignon "a la Stevens."

In attendance at the dinner will be members of the hospital family and friends, including administrative, board, medical staff and guild members. Reservations are limited to 150 couples.

Officers of the 60-member governing board are A. Raymond Ewers of Villa Park, chairman, and Edward C. Wegener, Elmhurst, vice-chairman.

Road Relocation Hearing

WESTLAKE PRESS, INC. GOOD IMPRESSIONS, INC.

IN ITASCA'S Central Manufacturing District, members of AFL-CIO Lithographers and Photoengravers Local 245 picketed Westlake Press Inc. as part of an areawide strike. The work stoppage started Monday in an effort to get an across-the-board $35 pay increase. No incidents were reported at the Itasca firm.

Residents and officials from three counties will gather tomorrow in Schaumburg with state highway officials to give their views on the proposed relocation of Irving Park Road (Route 19), now called the Elgin-O'Hare Expressway.

The public hearing starts at 2 p.m. in Schaumburg's Great Hall.

The proposed relocation between Elgin on the west and Route 83 on the east will specifically affect Bensenville, Wood Dale, Itasca and Roselle in DuPage County; Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Hanover Park and Bartlett in Cook County; and Elgin in Kane County.

This portion of the relocation of the expressway will be handled by the Dist. 1 Elgin state highway office. East of Route 83 will be handled by the Chicago Dist. 10 office.

HENRY YAMANAKA of the Dist. 10 office said plans for rerouting Illinois 19 from Illinois 83 east to Mannheim Road have not been completed.

"We hope to have something under way in the near future," he said, adding that a public hearing may be held in July.

The proposed expressway starts at the Elgin bypass and follows a southeasterly path parallel to the Milwaukee Road Ry. lines, then goes northeasterly through Bartlett, extending easterly through the Rine property in Hanover Park, through the Milwaukee Road industrial park in Schaumburg, south of Nerge Road through Roselle to Interstate 90 and then follows Thorndale Road through the Wood Dale Moody Airport and ends at Route 83.

The expressway will have limited access, but frontage roads will be included on both sides.

The Dist. 1 office hopes to use a common corridor through DuPage County on which Commonwealth Edison has the property right-of-way options. This would locate the road and power lines through a common corridor.

INTERCHANGES for the expressway would come at Route 83, Wood Dale Road, Prospect Avenue, Arlington Heights Road, I-90, Meacham-Medinah Road, Roselle Road, Springguth Road, Barrington Road, Bartlett Road and Route 59.

Present Irving Park Road would be turned over to local communities when the new expressway is completed.

The state has not given a timetable on beginning the relocation. Funds will have to come from the state legislature and none will be allocated sooner than July. The relocation could be many years away.

The state highway department wants to map out the route for the relocation now so rights of way may be purchased and communities will steer development away from the freeway.

Communities supporting the preferred relocation include Schaumburg and Elk Grove Village.

HANOVER PARK Mayor Richard Baker definitely plans to seek a different rerouting through that community. Hanover Park residents feel the preferred route will cut off village expansion to the south.

Baker plans to ask the highway department to locate the road further south of Hanover Park and Bartlett.

Superior Is Low Bidder on I-90 Work

Superior Concrete Construction Co., Chicago, was the apparent low bidder yesterday on two Interstate-90 projects in DuPage and Cook counties.

The awarding of contracts is indefinite, pending Illinois House committee action on a $118 million emergency highway appropriation.

Bids on the projects were opened in the Chicago office of the Illinois Division of Highways.

Projects to be awarded include:

—A bridge over Golf Road in Cook County.

—A grade separation and structure taking I-90 over relocated Wood Dale Road; a bridge taking relocated Wood Dale Road and Lake Street over Salt Creek and 54 miles of concrete paving on Wood Dale Road, all in DuPage County.

Superior Concrete Construction Co. bid $1,130,511.55 for the bridge over Golf Road. It was the lowest of seven bids.

Superior bid $1,275,597.99 for the DuPage County project, the lowest of 10 bids.

BIDS WERE NOT opened, as had been expected, for a $12 million interchange with Illinois 83, U.S. Route 20, and Interstate 90.

Also, bids were not opened for construction of I-90 from Golf Road to Schaumburg Road.

Another bid letting is scheduled for May 23 on other I-90 projects.

A. C. Braming, assistant Dist. 10 highway engineer in charge of engineering, said that, ordinarily, contracts are awarded within two weeks of bid opening.

However, these contracts awards are awaiting emergency appropriation in the Illinois House, he said.

Braming added that 62 jobs from an April 11 bid opening have not been awarded yet, also because of funding.

THE ILLINOIS Division of Highways is seeking a $125 million emergency appropriation. It passed the House committee once but was cut down in the Senate to $118 million.

Braming indicated he expects the emergency appropriation to pass but cannot award contracts until it has.

The legislature appropriates a certain amount of money each year for highways.

In other I-90 related business, a public hearing is scheduled for Friday to consider the proposed closing of portions of 29 streets in Addison and Bloomingdale townships in DuPage County.

The hearing will be held at 10 a.m. in the Addison Village Hall.

Seek To Block Annexation

A rapidly-blossoming conservation crusade will take a spotlight at tonight's meeting of the Bensenville Park District.

A citizens' group, the Committee for the Preservation of Nature and Wildlife Areas, will appear before the board with a petition asking that the board take no action at least until Oct. 1 on the possible annexation of White Pines Golf Course to Bensenville.

The petition will represent the first formal action by the committee in what is shaping up as a complex effort to save the area known as Fischer's Woods from development.

The woods is in an unincorporated section of DuPage County, lying south of Forest View Road and west of Church Road.

BENSENVILLE builder Ralph Cantrell holds an option to buy more than 26 acres of the 80-acre area, and would need the golf course property annexed to Bensenville in order for his proposed subdivision to be contiguous to the village. He could then petition for annexation of the subdivision.

The committee, headed by former Bensenville park board president and executive director Wayne Scheppele, is directing its action first to the park board because the board would have to recommend its golf course for annexation.

The petition, according to Scheppele and committee member Tom Mills, will bear the names of 500 to 1,000 residents throughout the Bensenville Park District. It will ask for the delay until Oct. 1 to allow the committee more time to study the value of the woods, its potential as a nature center, and a means of getting it set aside as a natural wildlife area.

THE PARK BOARD has taken no formal position on the woods, but the area is listed as a potential site for recreational development in the park district's master plan.

The committee, formed last October as an arm of the White Pines Civic Association, has been trying to get the park district, the DuPage County Forest Preserve District, and the Illinois Department of Conservation interested in saving the forest.

Financing purchase of the woods has been a principal problem, and the current thinking is to get a private foundation to buy the property and hold it until some taxing body can get the funds to acquire it. It is hoped some such arrangement could be made by Oct. 1.

TESTIMONY to the natural value of the woods was given Monday evening during a tour of the forest land attended by several local residents, newly elected park board member Merle K. Hummel, biology professor Dr. Robert Betz of Northeastern Illinois State College, and Floyd Swink of the Morton Arboretum.

Dr. Betz and Swink confirmed that the woods is a significant one in terms of its history, development and diversity of plant life, and both recommended that the committee "fight as hard as possible" to save the area. Both agreed to write letters for Scheppele's use attesting to their findings.

The woods, remnant of a 630-acre tract homesteaded in the mid-19th century by settler Alonzo Fischer, is dominated by walnut, ash, basswood and oak trees, some of which are estimated at up to 150 years in age. The presence of sugar maples also indicates it is entering the last stage of forest development.

PLANT LIFE on the forest floor includes bellwort, yellow violet, Dutchman's breeches, bloodroot and blue cohosh, all flowers considered rare and a good sign of advanced forest development.

Both Dr. Betz and Swink concluded that the woods could serve as an outstanding living nature center, particularly valuable in demonstrating the stages and diversity of forest growth.

Planners To Meet

The Bloomingdale Planning Commission will meet Monday night with the Bloomingdale Village Board to exchange ideas about the proposed $70 million Hoffman-Rosier project seeking annexation into Bloomingdale.

The planning commission met Monday night with Lowell Siff, Hoffman representative, for the second time to review plans in accordance with village regulations.

Larger acreage for school sites, higher buildings, elimination of four-bedroom apartment units and the establishment of the need for public hearings have resulted from several meetings by the Hoffman company with local school board and the village.

A TIME SCHEDULE hoped for, Siff, said, would allow a large public hearing later this month. The hearing would air the developments and changes worked out by Hoffman and the village before any formal action by the village would be taken, he added.

Plans for the project call for about 800 homes, 539 condominiums, 1,030 apartments, two churches, a lake, shopping center, parks, pools, bowling alley and two restaurants with cocktail lounges. A movie theater is in the preliminary stages.

The project would bring an estimated 10,000 to 12,000 additional persons into the area. School districts 13 and 15 would share the load of the children. About 12 acres are slated for school sites within the project. Formerly 10 acres were promised.

Streets would be privately maintained by Hoffman but fire and police protection would be provided by Bloomingdale if the project was annexed.

SIFF SAID Monday that the new building and zoning codes of the village would make the project impossible and unprofitable to build if they were imposed upon it.

He was told by plan commission chairman Paul Monas that the project was a planned development which is given more flexibility and a percentage of lesser requirements.

For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried.

There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce, he would file a lien against the property. He would be guaranteed his wages once the house was sold. The house would have to be sold within 90 days from the day that the decree was filed, so he said.

She was left in an unfortunate position. There was no money, and there wouldn't be any income until the divorce was settled. She was living in a state in which she had only lived for seven years. She didn't know the procedures as well as for her native state of Wisconsin. Her family still lived in Madison, and she didn't know where to turn or who to go to for help and advice.

INTERCHANGES for the expressway would come at Route 83, Wood Dale Road, Prospect Avenue, Arlington Heights Road, I-90, Meacham-Medinah Road, Roselle Road, Springinguth Road, Barrington Road, Bartlett Road and Route 59.

Present Irving Park Road would be turned over to local communities when the new expressway is completed.

The state has not given a timetable on beginning the relocation. Funds will have to come from the state legislature and none will be allocated sooner than July. The relocation could be many years away.

The state highway department wants to map out the route for the relocation now so rights of way may be purchased and communities will steer development away from the freeway.

Communities supporting the preferred relocation include Schaumburg and Elk Grove Village.

HANOVER PARK Mayor Richard Baker definitely plans to seek a different rerouting through that community. Hanover Park residents feel the preferred route will cut off village expansion to the south.

Baker plans to ask the highway department to locate the road further south of Hanover Park and Bartlett.

York Hearing Tomorrow

A public hearing on the widening of York Road from Memorial Road in Bensenville south to Interstate 90 in Elmhurst will be held tomorrow at 9:30 a.m. in the basement of the Bensenville Village Hall, 700 W. Irving Park Road.

York Road is scheduled for widening this year from two to four 12-foot wide lanes along a 2.7-mile stretch from Elm-hurst to Bensenville. A four-foot wide mountable median strip is included.

Intersection channelization at the junction of York and Grand Avenue, together with left-turn lanes and traffic signal relocation, will be part of the improvement.

Personnel of the Elgin Dist. 1 office of the Illinois Division of Highways will be available to discuss individual problems.

Erickson Killed in Vietnam

Pfc Howard W. Erickson, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Erickson, 548 Linda Lane, Addison, was killed in action in Vietnam recently.

Neighbors have been flying flags since learning of his death last weekend in an announcement from the Defense Department. He was killed April 30 near Duc Pho where he was stationed as a machine gunner.

HE HAD BEEN assigned to the Third

Infantry Division since being sent to Vietnam last January. A 1967 graduate of Addison Trail High School, he entered Western Illinois University, Macomb, the following year.

He attended college one year before enlisting in the Army last July.

His parents and two sisters, Marcie, 17, and Susan, 16, will make funeral arrangements when his body is returned.

Superior Is Low Bidder on I-90 Work

Superior Concrete Construction Co., Chicago, was the apparent low bidder yesterday on two Interstate-90 projects in DuPage and Cook counties.

The awarding of contracts is indefinite, pending Illinois House committee action on a $118 million emergency highway appropriation.

Bids on the projects were opened in the Chicago office of the Illinois Division of Highways.

Projects to be awarded include:

—A bridge over Golf Road in Cook County

—A grade separation and structure taking I-90 over relocated Wood Dale Road; a bridge taking relocated Wood Dale Road and Lake Street over Salt Creek and .54 miles of concrete paving on Wood Dale Road, all in DuPage County.

Superior Concrete Construction Co. bid $1,130,511.55 for the bridge over Golf Road. It was the lowest of seven bids.

Superior bid $1,275,597.99 for the DuPage County project, the lowest of 10 bids.

BIDS WERE NOT opened, as had been expected, for a $12 million interchange with Illinois 83, U.S. Route 20, and Interstate 90.

Also, bids were not opened for construction of I-90 from Golf Road to Schaumburg Road.

Another bid letting is scheduled for May 23 on other I-90 projects.

A. C. Braming, assistant Dist. 10 highway engineer in charge of engineering, said that, ordinarily, contracts are awarded within two weeks of bid opening.

However, these contracts awards are awaiting emergency appropriation in the Illinois House, he said.

Braming added that 62 jobs from an April 11 bid opening have not been awarded yet, also because of funding.

THE ILLINOIS Division of Highways is seeking a $125 million emergency appropriation. It passed the House committee once but was cut down in the Senate to $118 million.

Braming indicated he expects the emergency appropriation to pass but cannot award contracts until it has.

The legislature appropriates a certain amount of money each year for highways.

In other I-90 related business, a public hearing is scheduled for Friday to consider the proposed closing of portions of 29 streets in Addison and Bloomingdale townships in DuPage County.

The hearing will be held at 10 a.m. in the Addison Village Hall.

Seek To Block Annexation

A rapidly-blossoming conservation crusade will take a spotlight at tonight's meeting of the Bensenville Park District.

A citizens' group, the Committee for the Preservation of Nature and Wildlife Areas, will appear before the board with a petition asking that the board take no action at least until Oct. 1 on the possible annexation of White Pines Golf Course to Bensenville.

The petition will represent the first formal action by the committee in what is shaping up as a complex effort to save the area known as Fischer's Woods from development.

The woods is in an unincorporated section of DuPage County, lying south of Forest View Road and west of Church Road.

BENSENVILLE builder Ralph Cantrell holds an option to buy more than 26 acres of the 80-acre area, and would need the golf course property annexed to Bensenville in order for his proposed subdivision to be contiguous to the village. He could then petition for annexation of the subdivision.

The committee, headed by former Bensenville park board president and executive director Wayne Scheppele, is directing its action first to the park board because the board would have to recommend its golf course for annexation.

The petition, according to Scheppele and committee member Tom Mills, will bear the names of 500 to 1,000 residents throughout the Bensenville Park District. It will ask for the delay until Oct. 1 to allow the committee more time to study the value of the woods, its potential as a nature center, and a means of getting it set aside as a natural wildlife area.

THE PARK BOARD has taken no formal position on the woods, but the area is listed as a potential site for recreational development in the park district's master plan.

The committee, formed last October as an arm of the White Pines Civic Association, has been trying to get the park district, the DuPage County Forest Preserve District, and the Illinois Department of Conservation interested in saving the forest.

Financing purchase of the woods has been a principal problem, and the current thinking is to get a private foundation to buy the property and hold it until some taxing body can get the funds to acquire it. It is hoped some such arrangement could be made by Oct. 1.

TESTIMONY to the natural value of the woods was given Monday evening during a tour of the forest land attended by several local residents, newly elected park board member Merle K. Hummel, biology professor Dr. Robert Betz of Northeastern Illinois State College, and Floyd Swink of the Morton Arboretum.

Dr. Betz and Swink confirmed that the woods is a significant one in terms of its history, development and diversity of plant life, and both recommended that the committee "fight as hard as possible" to save the area. Both agreed to write letters for Scheppele's use attesting to their findings.

The woods, remnant of a 630-acre tract homesteaded in the mid-19th century by settler Alonzo Fischer, is dominated by walnut, ash, basswood and oak trees, some of which are estimated at up to 150 years in age. The presence of sugar maples also indicates it is entering the last stage of forest development.

PLANT LIFE on the forest floor includes bellwort, yellow violet, Dutchman's breeches, bloodroot and blue cohosh, all flowers considered rare and a good sign of advanced forest development.

Both Dr. Betz and Swink concluded that the woods could serve as an outstanding living nature center, particularly valuable in demonstrating to students the stages and diversity of forest growth.

ALAN CASKEY, Wood Dale Park District researcher, expects that answers to his questionnaires, being distributed this week, will return soon. He will compile the results and comments, and suggest a faster plan of park and recreational development later. Questionnaires are slated for about 600 residents. About 200 junior and senior high school students already have answered questions.

Planners To Meet

The Bloomingdale Planning Commission will meet Monday night with the Bloomingdale Village Board to exchange ideas about the proposed $70 million Hoffman-Rosner project seeking annexation into Bloomingdale.

The planning commission met Monday night with Lowell Siff, Hoffman representative for the second time to review plans in accordance with village regulations.

Larger acreage for school sites, higher buildings, elimination of four-bedroom apartment units and the establishment of the need for public hearings have resulted from several meetings by the Hoffman company with local school board and the village.

A TIME SCHEDULE hoped for, Siff, said, would allow a large public hearing later this month. The hearing would air the developments and changes worked out by Hoffman and the village before any formal action by the village would be taken, he added.

Plans for the project call for about 800 homes, 539 condominiums, 1,030 apartments, two churches, a lake, shopping center, parks, pools, bowling alley and two restaurants with cocktail lounges. A movie theater is in the preliminary stages.

The project would bring an estimated 10,000 to 12,000 additional persons into the area. School districts 13 and 15 would share the load of the children. About 12 acres are slated for school sites within the project. Formerly 10 acres were promised.

Streets would be privately maintained by Hoffman but fire and police protection would be provided by Bloomingdale if the project was annexed.

SIFF SAID Monday that the new building and zoning codes of the village would make the project impossible and unprofitable to build if they were imposed upon it.

He was told by plan commission chairman Paul Monas that the project was a planned development which is given more flexibility and a percentage of lesser requirements.

Road Relocation Hearing

A PEP RALLY? Volunteers to distribute the Wood Dale Park District attitude and interest survey gathered last week for the kick-off. The survey will be passed out to residents this week and returned to a researcher for analysis. The Wood Dale Junior Women's Club and Lions Club helped organize and distribute the survey material.

en's Club and Lions Club helped organize and distribute the survey material.

Residents and officials from three counties will gather tomorrow in Schaumburg with state highway officials to give their views on the proposed relocation of Irving Park Road (Route 19), now called the Elgin-O'Hare Expressway.

The public hearing starts at 2 p.m. in Schaumburg's Great Hall.

The proposed relocation between Elgin on the west and Route 83 on the east will specifically affect Bensenville, Wood Dale, Itasca and Roselle in DuPage County; Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Hanover Park and Bartlett in Cook County; and Elgin in Kane County.

This portion of the relocation of the expressway will be handled by the Dist. 1 Elgin state highway office. East of Route 83 will be handled by the Chicago Dist. 10 office.

HENRY YAMANAKA of the Dist. 10 office said plans for rerouting Illinois 19 from Illinois 83 east to Mannheim Road have not been completed.

"We hope to have something under way in the near future," he said, adding that a public hearing may be held in July.

The proposed expressway starts at the Elgin bypass and follows a southeasterly path parallel to the Milwaukee Road Ry. lines, then goes northeasterly through Bartlett, extending easterly through the Rinne property in Hanover Park, through the Milwaukee Road industrial park in Schaumburg, south of Nerge Road through Roselle to Interstate 90 and then follows Thorndale Road through the Wood Dale Moody Airport and ends at Route 83.

The expressway will have limited access, but frontage roads will be included on both sides.

The Dist. 1 office hopes to use a common corridor through DuPage County on which Commonwealth Edison has the property right-of-way options. This would locate the road and power lines through a common corridor.

INTERCHANGES for the expressway would come at Route 83, Wood Dale Road, Prospect Avenue, Arlington Heights Road, I-90, Meacham-Medinah Road, Roselle Road, Springguth Road, Barrington Road, Bartlett Road and Route 59. Present Irving Park Road would be turned over to local communities when the new expressway is completed.

The state has not given a timetable on beginning the relocation. Funds will have to come from the state legislature and none will be allocated sooner than July. The relocation could be many years away.

York Road is scheduled for widening this year from two to four 12-foot wide lanes along a 2.7-mile stretch from Elmhurst to Bensenville. A four-foot wide mountable median strip is included.

Seek To Block Annexation

A rapidly-blossoming conservation crusade will take a spotlight at tonight's meeting of the Bensenville Park District.

A citizens' group, the Committee for the Preservation of Nature and Wildlife Areas, will appear before the board with a petition asking that the board take no action at least until Oct. 1 on the possible annexation of White Pines Golf Course to Bensenville.

Angry Parents Protest

Court-Martial Out

WASHINGTON — A court of inquiry recommended that Cmdr. Lloyd Bucher be court-martialed for the loss of the intelligence ship Pueblo, but the civilian Navy Secretary yesterday ruled out punishment of Bucher or any of his crew because "they have suffered enough."

At a news conference after Navy Secretary John H. Chaffee overruled the five-admiral board and decreed that there would be no discipline of Bucher or his crew, E. Miles Harvey, Bucher's lawyer, said, "As far as we're concerned, Commander Bucher has been cleared."

141 North Viets Die

SAIGON — U.S. officers said Tuesday night at least 141 Communist troops were killed and 29 captured in a furious assault by a regiment of North Vietnamese on a U.S. outpost near Cambodia. They predicted even heavier fighting in the frontier area northwest of Saigon.

Nine Americans were killed and 62 wounded in the overnight battle at Camp Carolyn, a U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division outpost 63 miles northwest of Saigon.

Moon Via Color TV?

CAPE KENNEDY — The three moon-bound Apollo 19 astronauts rehearsed their May 18 launch procedures yesterday and then tested a new color television camera. The hope will show earthlings the spectacular hues of space.

Thomas P. Stafford, John W. Young and Eugene A. Cernan tried out the new 12-pound camera by flashing a color cartoon from their spacecraft to the Houston Control Center. Project officials said initial reports were that the color pictures were received satisfactorily in Houston.

Marchers See Aid OK'd

SPRINGFIELD — About 200 chanting welfare recipients marched 12 blocks from a tent village to the statehouse yesterday where they watched the House Public Welfare Committee approve bills to increase public aid and payments and benefits by a 14 to 4 vote.

About 2,000 demonstrators had been expected, according to Robert Taylor, march organizer. The bills would eliminate the $50-a-month rent ceiling, exclude Social Security benefits from recipients' payments, boost public aid grants and expand free school lunch programs.

Real Bargaining Seen

PARIS — A tacit agreement among the Vietnam peace negotiators in Paris to stop threatening each other gave impetus Tuesday to reports that the conference is inching toward real bargaining.

Careful analysis of statements made by Allied and Communist negotiators showed a de-escalation of verbal attacks and threats routinely made in the initial stages of the conference. This change in tone, noted by diplomats on both sides, coincided with mounting reports in diplomatic circles in Paris that delegates were slowly moving toward a breakthrough.

Tiny Army Increases

VATICAN CITY — Twenty-four recruits were sworn in yesterday for two-year hitch in the world's smallest, most old-fashioned and most photographed army — the Pope's 75-man-strong Swiss Guards.

The recruits took their oath of duty in a steady rainfall in the Belvedere Courtyard of the Vatican, dressed in the billowy yellow, orange, and blue uniforms the artist Michelangelo designed for them four centuries ago.

ELK GROVE Trustee Ronald Chernick to Centex: "We want to control where donated land goes." School Dist. 54 is affected.

Land Donations

Elk Grove Village trustees this week set the stage for getting better than a 10 per cent public land donation out of Centex's residential developments west of Highway 53 in the village.

A major beneficiary will be Schaumburg Dist. 54, which much provide seven schools to serve the 3,500 homes Centex will be building in the western part of Elk Grove Village during the next few years.

The trustees' platform for their land grab maneuvering was a joint meeting of village, park district, school and plan commission officials with Centex representatives.

Officially the meeting was called to discuss a proposed Centex residential subdivision billed as "Section 17" west of Illinois Route 53 between Biesterfeld and Noyes roads — the first Centex housing development in Dist. 54.

BUT TRUSTEES Charles Zetek and Ronald Chernick made it clear early in the meeting that they intended to set a precedent that would bind Centex officials to donate all the school, park and village lands needed in Elk Grove Village areas served by the Schaumburg elementary district.

Centex representatives Robert Winkle and Robert Calkins turned alternately agreeable and glum as the trustees' intent was made clear.

Winkle made no commitment, standing his ground on the same Elk Grove Village ordinance cited by trustees. The ordinance requires 10 per cent of any development acreage be donated for public use.

But public land needs in the new Centex developments will go well past that 10 per cent, amounting to 50 acres for the eventual 1,300 acres planned for homesites.

Public land needs will total 80 to 100 acres, based on estimates made at Monday's meeting.

Wayne Schable, Dist. 54 superintendent, estimated he will need 21 to 25 acres for six elementary schools and a junior high to serve the area.

High School Dist. 211 will be asked what land it needs in the area. It was not represented Monday.

Park Dist. Pres. Ed Hauser said the park district will want six acres per school site plus 25 acres for a community park.

The village has already said it will need 10 acres for municipal uses such as a well site and a fire station.

THE VILLAGE, park district and Elk Grove Dist. 59 have worked out an agreeable arrangement where park-school sites are shared and used for school or recreational use year-round.

Schable said that Dist. 54 has park-school lease agreements with two other park districts already and would be agreeable to a similar setup with the Elk Grove Village park system.

Because this was the first session joint meeting between Dist. 54 and the village and park boards, committee chairman Richard McGreener was meticulous in explaining how the village board handles land donation matters.

Chernick explained, "We want to be the middleman. We want to control where donated land goes."

Turning to Centex spokesman Winkle, Chernick declared, "If you want to give land to the school, fine. Then we would give the 10 per cent donated to us to the park district."

RONALD CHERNICK

With banners and placards waving, 100 angry Forest View parents walked out of the Dist. 59 meeting Monday night.

The parents walked out as a visual demonstration of their opposition to the board's reaffirmed decision to remove the Forest View principal.

Principal Tom Warden has been appointed curriculum coordinator of Dist. 59, a decision hotly protested by parents working as the Forest View Parents' Study Committee.

Monday's board meeting began with an hour-long executive session in which the Warden matter was apparently discussed. When the board returned to public session, Allen Sparks, board president, told the assembled parents that Tom Warden will be removed from Forest View School as originally announced.

Sparks also disclosed that an executive meeting was held last Tuesday in which the board members arrived at the same decision.

SPARKS BARELY HAD the announcement read when he was barraged by a series of questions from angered parents. Monday's meeting was more emotional than a similar meeting two weeks ago, when the study committee members originally voiced their disapproval of board policy.

As board members were asked to account for their decision to transfer Warden, homemade signs appeared in the audience reading "We Want Warden" and "Tom Warden is the Man We Want."

Supt. Donald Thomas was asked to explain his position regarding qualifications of principals and to account for Warden's transfer.

The board's public silence on the matter angered the parents even more causing some to shout their defiance to the board openly.

ERNEST RICH OF Des Plaines, defeated candidate for the Dist. 59 board, rose to ask if each board member would disclose how he voted on the Warden transfer. The board refused claiming the privileges of executive session.

At that point a member of the audience asked Warden how he felt about the transfer. Obviously on the spot, Warden replied that he would go along with any position offered him by Superintendent Thomas, but that given his choice he would prefer to stay at Forest View. His reply was greeted with a standing ovation by the disgruntled parents.

Things continued to get hot when parents accused the board of being unresponsive to their demands. Elsie Cohn, of Arlington Heights asked, "Why is the board so unresponsive? Obviously there is a divergence of opinion between the board and the people. What happens to all of us when we disagree with the school board?"

JOHN D. Herbert, a resident of the district for 10 years and a former school board member, spoke of the growing dissatisfaction with the elected officials.

"Something's wrong in this district," Herbert said. "Soon you will try to swing another bond issue and if you go for that issue you'd better have some answers for the people." His remarks were met with applause.

At 9:20 p.m., at the close of the discussion of Tom Warden, the parents walked out of the meeting. But they did not leave the school. Assembling in another part of the building the study committee discussed their differences with the board and made new plans.

One of the men who most appealed to the embittered parents was Paul Neuhauser, defeated candidate for the Dist. 59 Board of Education.

Neuhauser is theoretically next in line for a soon-to-be-vacant Dist. 59 board seat. His stand Monday was in obvious sympathy with the Forest View parents on the Tom Warden matter. As of Monday, Neuhauser was obviously a candidate the parents are behind.

Neuhauser Stepping In

by GEOFFREY MEHL

Even though School Dist. 59 Board of Education elections are fading into history, the name of Paul Neuhauser is not.

One of seven who sought election on April 12, he ran third behind winners Harold Harvey and George Blanchard.

But fate on two fronts is pushing Neuhauser back into the spotlight, and possibly onto the school board. He lost the election by 26 votes out of more than 5,400 cast, conceded and congratulated, and talked about "maybe next year."

All of a sudden Blanchard has been affected by a company transfer, and expects to move out of the area July 1. Concurrently, parents of students at Forest View Elementary School are becoming more militant and have tabbed Neuhauser as their man.

He hasn't been unwilling to accept the leadership that parents have been pressing upon him.

BLANCHARD, HAVING announced that he won't be with the district much longer, hasn't set a resignation date. While his term won't expire until 1972, any appointee to replace him would serve until April, 1970, date of the next board of education election.

Initial feelings are mixed on who will replace Blanchard. Some lean toward the practice followed in the past of interviewing interested citizens and making a choice, while others favor at least giving consideration to the candidates who were defeated on April 12.

Neuhauser, who received 626 votes to Blanchard's 670, heads the list, followed by Ernest Rich, Patrick Orlovsky, William Garvey, and Harry Stewart.

The board is not bound to naming the next highest vote-getter, and may appoint anyone it chooses. In this regard, there is already talk in some quarters about naming Gene Artemenko, past president and member of the board, who retired from the panel last month.

AT THE TIME of his decision not to seek reelection, listed personal commitments as the reason he chose not to seek to remain on the board.

Parents of Forest View Elementary School students, organized into a study group to probe faculty morale, fiscal matters, and administrative practices, became incensed when the school principal, Thomas Warden, was transferred to the central administration office.

Warden said Monday night that while he would live with the transfer, he would prefer to remain at Forest View. The board, in executive session, decided otherwise, arousing parents even more.

When the "reconsideration" of the Warden issue went in favor of the administration, parents Monday night complained bitterly and walked out of the meeting.

Waiting in the wings was Neuhauser, who met with the group immediately after they left the board meeting.

Warden reportedly had been told to either accept the transfer or resign, and some board members privately accused him of being "incompetent."

THUS WARDEN WAS removed from his job as principal and made a curriculum coordinator.

Neuhauser appears to strike a compromise between administration and the militant parents on several issues dear to both.

On tax anticipation warrants, he believes that they're "necessary," but could be cut back to 50 or 60 per cent a year from the current maximum level of 75 per cent to increase flexibility and avoid potential crisis.

While he questioned current practices, he carefully avoided commitment and pledged "looking into administrative accounts and staff functions." The contention he made was that administrative costs seem to be too high, and that a morale problem does exist between administration and faculty.

"Teachers feel like pawns, receiving very little consideration. Some of the policy is arbitrary," he said, calling for an examination of how Supt. Donald Thomas handles affairs of the district.

He won friends on the board by issuing substantial praise for Albert Domanico and Allen Sparks. Domanico, running unopposed, was elected to a one-year term, and Sparks, an incumbent, was elected president of the panel.

WITH INROADS into the district Teachers Council, Neuhauser has drawn positive interest among faculty members. His wife, a teacher, would have to resign if he were appointed because of policy prohibiting potential conflict of interest.

"The school board should have a maverick on it, and I'm willing to be that person. I'm not interested in a popularity contest," Neuhauser said earlier this year.

Now he is making it clear that he is interested in an appointment if Blanchard does get transferred and resigns from the board. Although he expected to do best in his home precinct, Neuhauser on April 12 ran evenly throughout the district and for a time during incoming returns was one of the leading pair of candidates, with Blanchard.

Now the federal law enforcement agent from Des Plaines is subtly recalling that election, staying involved, and hovering in the wings waiting to walk out on stage.

(In this second and concluding part of "Divorce Suburban Style," Gerry DeZonna, Paddock staff writer, describes where a suburban mother of five turns when her money runs out as she waits for her divorce to become final.)

For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried.

There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce, he would file a lien against the property.

Divorce Suburban Style

He would be guaranteed his wages once the house was sold. The house would have to be sold within 90 days from the day that the decree was filed, so he said.

She was left in an unfortunate position. There was no money, and there wouldn't be any income until the divorce was settled. She was living in a state in which she had only lived for seven years. She didn't know the procedures as well as for her native state of Wisconsin. Her family still lived in Madison, and she didn't know where to turn or who to go to for help and advice.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW if she should sign the lien, despite the lawyer's asking price. Without the divorce, there would be no money at all. Her financial situation was already at rock bottom. It seemed as though there was no alternative but to sign the lien. She thought that it would be better to be in the frying pan rather than the fire.

But there had to be someone who could

Elk Horn

Casual Untruths

by GEOFFREY MEHL

A certain amount of interesting reading has been coming out of Elk Grove High School lately. In the midst of the controversy on smoking policy there we wouldn't want to let the administration feel neglected.

Let's examine then an April 28 letter from Principal Robert Haskell to a rather select audience. I have ascertained that your child was there as an active participant, vocal supporter or curious onlooker.

HASKELL WAS writing about the three-hour demonstration April 24 aimed at getting a smoking area for Elk Grove High School. At the time, he concurred with me that the students were blowing off a bit of steam and that as long as it didn't get out of hand it was harmless.

Some people would take issue with Haskell's comment in the letter to parents that "Mr. Farris . . . acted with dispatch in moving the group into the auditorium," but since I didn't witness who moved whom I can't challenge the remark.

Neither could I challenge the line Mr. Farris, Mr. Aldrich . . . and I all appeared before the group, whose bad manners in shouting down any explanation were all too evident. Students were impolite but I find it interesting that while the administration couldn't settle the group down to some semblance of order several students did.

I have to have praise for the school's ability to make a quick, accurate mental note of names of the "several hundred" who ranged from those on stage to those curious onlookers in the dimly-lit auditorium.

I HAVE TO agree with, understand and respect Haskell's comment. My duties do not include taking orders from students.

But I completely disagree with Haskell's limited reporting, unfortunate use of rhetoric, threat of overkill retaliation and a couple of inaccuracies.

The letter never mentions that since the Great April 24 Rebellion, students are campaigning quietly and in orderly fashion through proper channels for their objective. The letter is quick to include several students like Paul Stathas into the 40 or 50 ill-mannered youngsters after Haskell in an interview had praise for Stathas.

There was no mention in the letter that School Dist. 214 officials Dr. Rod McLennan and Jack Martin praised the students for their good manners during the central administration visit nor that the two encouraged students to take the matter to the board of education.

Haskell's letter casually misinforms the community he frequently mentions the "demand for a smoking lounge," knowing full well the students are seeking a smoking area outside of the school with smoking inside still prohibited. Whether you favor student smoking or not it's nice to be accurately informed.

In the second to last paragraph comes the big threat. "Naturally some disciplinary action will be taken against those who participated in this demonstration." Does that include readmitting all of the students to class without punitive action?

"I AM CONSIDERING the insertion of a note in the student's permanent record regarding his participation in this abortive affair. We wonder how this will affect those who were merely curious onlookers, condemned because they wondered what was going on. Haskell doesn't specify who he will or will not condemn.

But nothing is ever attacked in this column without some sort of recommendation.

Our suggestions to Robert Haskell include attend a high school journalism class and learn objectivity and complete reporting. Open your eyes and discover the students you so quickly condemned are doing precisely what you and your superiors recommended. Remember that high school students are young enough to act like kids from time to time but if they're treated with respect and honesty, they become amazingly mature. And finally, please don't try to scare the community. It's frightened enough with issues much larger and more important than cigarettes.

GERANIUMS, MARIGOLDS, snapdragons and petunias were among the many varieties of flowers that Larry Giesler watered and helped sell this past weekend at the Schaumburg Jaycee's annual flower sale. All proceeds from the sale will be used for local Jaycee service projects. Giesler was the project chairman.

Study CTA Link

The Council of Governments of Cook County (COG) may pick up Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's idea of tying suburban bus service into the Chicago Transit Authority (CTA).

COG Chairman Jack Pahl, Elk Grove Village president, said he also hopes to pick up Chicago membership in the voluntary association of governments.

Pahl said he discussed the combined bus-mass transit plan with Daley yesterday. The local mayor said he will set up a meeting with Daley to talk further on the idea of COG assuming the transportation project.

"THIS IS WHAT the council is for, to further inter-governmental cooperation," Pahl said.

Daley's proposal made Monday is to set up a unified metropolitan transit system incorporating suburban bus lines with the CTA.

In the Northwest suburbs, this would tie the United Motor Coach of Des Plaines to the CTA extension in the Kennedy Expressway. An official of United Motor Coach was quoted Monday saying he would be interested in discussing the concept.

Pahl said Daley's proposal involves nine bus companies in the entire county.

Recapping his conversation with Daley, Pahl said they talked about combining bus companies and tying these in with the CTA to provide better transportation service to both city and suburbs.

THE CTA IS extending down both the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways and is seeking the legislature's help in finances. Bills pending in the legislature would allow Cook County to levy a 2-cent gasoline tax to finance its mass transit system.

Suburban bus companies are also expressing concern over lack of revenues and United Motor Coach officials recently mentioned dropping some bus service.

Pahl said COG is particularly suited to bring the transportation plan together as an association of governments representing all areas of Cook County. He cited four existing transportation studies going on from all sides of Cook County and a new one in DuPage County.

The Northwest Municipal Conference recently authorized a mass transit study for its 13 member area communities.

Pahl said the north suburbs have a transportation study group and a transportation committee was recently appointed in the DuPage Mayors and Managers Association, headed by Itasca Pres. Will Notke.

The south suburbs have a program to issue bonds to buy coaches, then lease them to the Illinois Central Railroad, he said.

Pahl said the council project will be "a very logical tie-in to the Northwest Municipal Conference study."

COG does not have a transportation division as this function had been left up to the Chicago Area Transportation Study (CATS) and Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPCC), Pahl said.

"BUT THERE IS no reason why we can't do this to give the best possible service to the citizens."

Since its beginning in late 1967, COG has hoped to attract Chicago as a council member. Pahl said transportation could be the attraction to join since Chicago is concerned with this and the council could be of help.

Form 3rd Standing Committee

A third standing committee — the municipal buildings committee — to be chaired by Trustee Virginia M. Hayter, was established by Hoffman Estates Village Board this week.

Working with fellow trustees in a committee-of-the-whole, Mrs. Hayter and the board will decide the necessary steps required toward construction of a municipal complex to house village offices as well as police and public works departments.

In related action, Trustee William Cowin was named chairman of the finance committee and Trustee Howard "Jack" Noble will head up the public works committee.

In announcing the appointments, Village Pres. Frederick E. Downey said he chose Cowin and Noble as committee chairman in order to draw on the experience of past board members.

MRS. HAYTER WAS chosen to chair the municipal buildings group because of her experience and involvement in building a number of schools while serving on the elementary board of education, Downey said.

The municipal buildings committee will hold its first meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the village hall, immediately following Noble will convene the first meeting of the public works committee.

On May 20 Cowin will meet with the finance committee at 8 p.m. also in the village hall.

In line with a May 15 deadline for submission of departmental budget estimates, established by Downey, the finance committee will begin preliminary work on the 1969-70 budget as rapidly as possible.

Stolen Car Recovered

Hanover Park police recovered an auto Sunday that was reported stolen from Berwyn Jan. 12. The car was found on Barrington Road just north of Route 19 by Patrolmen Gerald Bee and Leo Siciliano.

The car belongs to Hollis W. Huff of Berwyn. The seats, radio and spare tire were missing from the car, police said.

Jehovah's Witnesses: No Soliciting

by DAN JOHN

A little dust was raised in the Wheeling Herald offices Tuesday resulting from Monday's article concerning a group of Jehovah's Witnesses in the Wheeling police station.

The group went to the police station

Sunday to clarify with the police their position in regard to a village ordinance banning solicitations.

At that time they quoted U.S. Supreme Court and State Supreme Court rulings exempting Jehovah's Witnesses from any form of solicitation bans, explaining the position generally held by the faith, that Witnesses do not sell anything but preach their faith door to door.

James L. Staelens Sr., a representative of the Northbrook congregation, reiterated this position in the Herald offices, adding that he felt the tone of the article was detrimental to the image of the faith.

THIS EXPLANATION of the events was this. An officer stopped a man who had two children with him. The officer asked if they were soliciting. He was told yes, then after a minute, was told no, the man pointing out he was a minister in the faith.

This is a correction of part of the Herald article Monday stating "asked if he was soliciting, the man answered no at first, then said yes pointing out he was a minister in the faith."

Then, according to Staelens, the officer became "belligerent." Chief M. O. Horcher told the Herald Tuesday the officer simply made them aware of the solicitation ban. Then the minister asked to come to the station to have the matter clarified.

STAELENS SAID he had had a "long conversation" with Horcher Monday, mentioning that Horcher said the officer would be reprimanded.

Horcher told the Herald Tuesday there would be no action taken against the officer. He added, "The officer was only doing his duty in making them aware that if they were soliciting, they would have to stop."

The nub of the incident is the Wheeling village ordinance prohibiting solicitations. This is being decided in the Illinois Appellate Court.

The Jehovah's Witnesses' contention is they are covered under Supreme Court rulings, specifically mentioning them, as not solicitors, but as a religious group entitled to rights of speech and freedom of religion.

Chief Horcher said whether they come under this contested ordinance or not is to be decided upon after the Appellate Court resolves the case.

Index Pay Good

The passage of an index system for teachers' salaries in Dist. 211, "proves there were issues in the last two school board elections, regardless of what members of the school board said," Richard Chierico, a former district teacher said.

Chierico teaches at Elk Grove High School, and was defeated in Dist. 211 school board elections, the past two years.

"The salary change would not have been passed, if it weren't for charges raised in the last two campaigns. The board indicated there were no problems in the district, but the public was deceived," Chierico said.

The fact that the teachers approved the salary change by a vote of 201-11, proves they were unhappy, and the board's denial of a morale problem was unfounded, he stated.

THE MERIT system was unpopular with teachers, leading to a high turnover rate, Chierico said. To prove his point, he pointed to a letter from David Elder, research director of the Illinois Educational Association, and the Carrol Report, a study of the Dist. 211 curriculum, commissioned by the school board.

Elder, in a letter to Chierico dated May 3, 1966, said "I do not agree with the type of salary policy that exists for your district." "This is the official position of the IEA and the National Education Association."

Chierico pointed to page 140 of the Carrol Report, which said the merit system had two basic weaknesses. Salary ranges have not kept a proper relative pace with salaries in other suburban areas, and it is difficult to administer salaries equitably.

THE REPORT ALSO said the turnover rate could be moved from "indiscriminate" to a more planned type of turnover.

Pages 150 and 151 of the 1963 report said that the present system is not understood or accepted by the faculty. It is subjective and difficult to defend, the report showed Chierico said the Carrol report and Elder letter are available for anyone to see.

Chierico was glad the board passed the index system, but it confirms his well-founded charges of the last two years.

Chierico said he phoned Dist. 211 Supt. Gerald McElroy, requesting he be placed on Thursday night's board meeting agenda. McElroy granted the request.

"I WANT to make four suggestions," Chierico told the Herald. "I believe the agenda should provide a place for audience participation. This would give interested citizens a chance to ask questions."

He will also request that a stenographer or tape recorder be provided for the purpose of having "a more complete set of minutes."

The third request will call for an exchange of minutes between Dist. 211 and the elementary districts, park districts, and the village board, so they would have a more complete understanding of each others problems.

The fourth request calls for a copy of the agenda to be sent to newspapers, "so people can decide if they want to attend a board meeting."

CHIERICO SAID HE was informed by McElroy that the superintendent wrote the Palatine Village Board, that 211 would comply with a board request, asking for an exchange of minutes. The teacher said there was no such agreement until recent weeks, and added this is an "important step."

This was "done quietly," Chierico said. "Why was there no publicity?" he asked.

Meeting Is Called to Discuss Relocation of Road

Residents and officials from three counties will gather tomorrow in Schaumburg with state highway officials to give their views on the proposed relocation of Irving Park Road (Route 19), now called the Elgin-O Hare Expressway.

The public hearing starts at 2 p.m. in Schaumburg's Great Hall.

The proposed relocation between Elgin on the west and Route 83 on the east will specifically affect Bensenville, Wood Dale, Itasca and Roselle in DuPage County; Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Hanover Park and Bartlett in Cook County; and Elgin in Kane County.

This portion of the relocation of the expressway will be handled by the Dist. 1 Elgin state highway office. East of Route 83 will be handled by the Chicago Dist. 10 office.

HENRY YAMANAKA of the Dist. 10 office said plans for rerouting Illinois 19 from Illinois 83 east to Mannheim Road have not been completed.

"We hope to have something under way in the near future," he said, adding that a public hearing may be held in July.

The proposed expressway starts at the Elgin bypass and follows a southeasterly path parallel to the Milwaukee Road Ry lines, then goes northeasterly through Bartlett, extending easterly through the Rinne property in Hanover Park, through the Milwaukee Road industrial park in Schaumburg, south of Nerge Road through Roselle to Interstate 90 and then follows

Thorndale Road through the Wood Dale Moody Airport and ends at Route 83.

The expressway will have limited access, but frontage roads will be included on both sides.

The Dist. 1 office hopes to use a common corridor through DuPage County on which Commonwealth Edison has the property right-of-way options. This would locate the road and power lines through a common corridor.

INTERCHANGES for the expressway would come at Route 83, Wood Dale Road, Prospect Avenue, Arlington Heights Road, I-90, Meacham-Medina Road, Roselle Road, Springinguth Road, Barrington Road, Bartlett Road and Route 59. Present Irving Park Road would be turned over to local communities when the new expressway is completed.

The state has not given a timetable on beginning the relocation. Funds will have to come from the state legislature and none will be allocated sooner than July. The relocation could be many years away.

The state highway department wants to map out the route for the relocation now so rights of way may be purchased and communities will steer development away from the freeway.

Communities supporting the preferred relocation include Schaumburg and Elk Grove Village.

HANOVER PARK Mayor Richard Baker definitely plans to seek a different rerouting through that community. Hanover Park residents feel the preferred route will cut off village expansion to the south.

Baker plans to ask the highway department to locate the road further south of Hanover Park and Bartlett.

Superior Is Low

Superior Concrete Construction Co., Chicago, was the apparent low bidder yesterday on two Interstate-90 projects in DuPage and Cook counties.

The awarding of contracts is indefinite, pending Illinois House committee action on a $118 million emergency highway appropriation.

Bids on the projects were opened in the Chicago office of the Illinois Division of Highways.

Projects to be awarded include

—A bridge over Golf Road in Cook County.

—A grade separation and structure taking I-90 over relocated Wood Dale Road, a bridge taking relocated Wood Dale Road and Lake Street over Salt Creek and 54 miles of concrete paving on Wood Dale Road all in DuPage County.

Superior Concrete Construction Co. bid $1,180,511.55 for the bridge over Golf Road. It was the lowest of seven bids.

Superior bid $1,275,397.99 for the DuPage County project, the lowest of 10 bids.

BIDS WERE NOT opened, as had been expected, for a $12 million interchange with Illinois 83 U.S. Route 20, and Interstate 90.

Also, bids were not opened for construction of I-90 from Golf Road to Schaumburg Road.

Another bid letting is scheduled for May 21 on other I-90 projects.

A. C. Braming, assistant Dist. 10 highway engineer in charge of engineering, said that, ordinarily, contracts are awarded within two weeks of bid opening.

However, these contracts awards are awaiting emergency appropriation in the Illinois House, he said.

Braming added that 62 jobs from an

April 11 bid opening have not been awarded yet, also because of funding.

"THE ILLINOIS Division of Highways is seeking a $125 million emergency appropriation. It passed the House committee once but was cut down in the Senate to $118 million.

Braming indicated he expects the emergency appropriation to pass but cannot award contracts until it has.

The legislature appropriates a certain amount of money each year for highways.

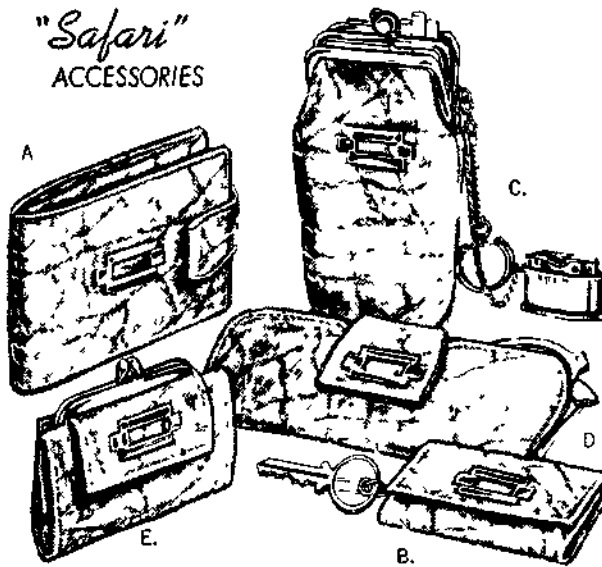

In other I-90 related business, a public hearing is scheduled for Friday to consider the proposed closing of portions of 29 streets in Addison and Bloomingdale townships in DuPage County.

The hearing will be held at 10 a.m. in the Addison Village Hall.

Bill To Ban Dog Sales Brings Yelps

by MARSHA HEFFERAN

A bill to prevent sale of animals by private individuals has been tabled in committee in the state legislature following yelps from Illinois dog lovers.

In response to growls received from pet owners in the Northwest suburbs, the Herald contacted Sen. William Lyons, D-52nd District, Gillespie, and Rep. Louis Capuzi, R-19th District, Chicago, in Springfield to learn what all the barking is about.

Both legislators submitted identical bills that would prevent the sale of all vertebrate household pets by persons or retail stores "unless the care, training, breeding, keeping or selling of household pets constitutes the principal business of such persons."

Lyons recommended his bill be tabled in committee after an unexpected avalanche of mail from hobby breeders of dogs throughout the state. This response was triggered by Dog World Magazine, which sent copies of the bill to all subscribers in the state.

CAPUZI'S legislation, HB 1939, is due out of committee this week. Contacted in Springfield, Capuzi told the Herald that he wasn't prepared for the opposition he is receiving.

"I promised Irene Castle, founder of Orphans of the Storm, that I would work to introduce legislation prohibiting the sale of pets by dime stores, drug stores, and other retailers who are not equipped to care for them," said Capuzi, "but with the response I'm getting I might introduce a motion to table the bill myself."

He said he was "unaware of the effect" the bill would have on small-scale dog breeders throughout the state or the monopoly it would create for large retail outlets specializing in puppies. He claimed that he did not realize that dogs and cats are not considered personal property in Illinois until after the bill was presented on the floor.

His main interest, he stressed, is to fulfill his promise to dog-lover Irene Castle, who died last year.

However the secretary of Orphans of the Storm, a shelter for homeless pets, doesn't feel the organization could support Capuzi's bill because it would prohibit the sale or advertisement of dogs by private breeders, including owners of mixed breeds. This would overwhelm the shelter with pleas from people who couldn't dispose of their mixed litters.

AT PRESENT THE shelter is able to place only 10 per cent of the dogs it receives.

But the biggest howl has come from the hobby breeders themselves. Most do not breed dogs for profit, but to defray the expenses of keeping, showing, and caring for their prize stock.

If Capuzi's bill should pass, these breeders could no longer sell or advertise their dogs; instead, they might have to wholesale them to kennels or volume outlets like Puppy Palace, a franchise financed by Mars Candy.

"Most kennels are not in the market for other breeders' dogs, and chain outlets specialize in litter lots of 'pet quality.' I would have no market for my show stock," remarked a local Cocker fancier.

"The private breeder is the backbone of the purebred dog fancy," said Helen Nowicki, editor of Dog World. "If this bill should pass, it would change the whole structure of the dog world in Illinois. The only people who benefit from this bill are the volume puppy dealers who are interested in a profit. Registered kennels can't supply the demand for quality dogs, and if hobby breeders can't sell their stock, prospective buyers might have to deal with the volume outfits. Since they would have a monopoly on the dog market, they would be able to set their own price."

A check of large retail distributors in the Chicago area shows that the going rate for Miniature Schnauzers of pet quality is between $175 and $225. A hobby breeder has show quality stock advertised for $150.

Large distributors now buy their puppies in litter lots, often from 'puppy mills,' concerns that own many females and one male. The bitches are bred each time they come in season, producing stock for the ready pet market. These outfits usually purchase a champion stud, past his prime for kennel use, so they can advertise "champion stock," an officer of a local breed club said.

"ALL THE PUPPY mills now in operation can't fill the demand of a dog-minded public," Miss Nowicki said. "The big distributors are trying to tap the potential market provided by the home breeder. All exhibitors at the Chicago International Dog Show have received requests for puppies from volume dealers, but few will do business with them. They are especially interested in the miniature breeds because they are very salable and can be marketed at a lower overhead. The editors of Dog World are vigorously opposed to this bill."

Dr. and Mrs. Harry Rymer are representative of the many people in Illinois who raise purebred dogs as a hobby. Rymer, an astronomer, is chairman of the physics department at Kendall College in Evanston. His wife is a math instructor. They raise Saluki Hounds and have many champions.

"This legislation is most harmful to any breed of dog," said Rymer, "and it could ruin the popular breeds whose strains are being weakened by indiscriminate breeding encouraged by large dealers and chain outlets."

Asked if he would sell his stock to a retail outlet if Capuzi's bill passes, Rymer replied, "Definitely not. I would find out-of-state buyers or arrange sales through local kennels. But we enjoy a national reputation. It's the beginner, who is the foundation of the breeding hobby, who would have difficulty placing his stock.

"The negative results of this bill are astronomical, a term I don't use lightly," quipped Rymer.

"IF THE RESULTS of this bill are harmful for purebred dogs, they are disastrous for mixed breeds," said a local veterinarian. "It could mean that people would give away registered puppies rather than sell them to outlets. This would leave few homes for the mixed-breeds."

"If a large male mates with a female of a smaller breed, her owners occasionally have to pay for surgical delivery, because the puppies are too large for her to deliver naturally. If owners can't recover their expenses from direct sales to pet homes, these dogs could end up on the research market."

"It is ironic that legislation with that possible consequence would be proposed in the name of Irene Castle, one of the most vehement anti-vivisectionists of our time. In my opinion, Capuzi's bill is a 'dog,'" said the veterinarian.

Homeowners Ask Privacy Fence

At the request of a group of local homeowners, Village Engineer George Holt will ask Intercontinental Development Corp., builders of a large apartment complex, to consent to put up a privacy fence separating their development from adjacent single-family homes.

MRS. ROBERT L. Wilhelm, 283 Aloca Lane, appeared before the village board Monday to request consideration of the privacy fence and cited noise and construction hazards as prime concerns of neighbors in the area.

She was asked to present a supportive statement signed by neighbors sharing the concern at next week's board meeting at which time Holt will report on his contact with the builder.

Almost a Divorcee, Woman Needs Assistance

give her some advice and some help. The lawyer was using pressure tactics, legal blackmail. And the longer the delay, the more her children would suffer.

Worried and confused, she sought help from family, friends, her family physician and her priest. Her priest offered some counsel, but the church frowned upon divorce and he couldn't give her any help. The rules of the faith were the rules.

The family physician gave her as much help and advice as he could. He donated his time and his talents to the family, and he suggested that she seek help from welfare agencies in the area. He, too, could do only so much. The situation enraged her, especially the lawyer's attitude.

"THE LAWYER doesn't have an ounce of professional integrity," the doctor complained. "The situation is so discouraging and disappointing. Just to know that this lawyer will sacrifice a family in trouble for a financial profit."

Her neighbors have tried their best to provide as much as possible in the way of aid and advice. But neighbors have families to raise themselves and financial responsibilities to meet. They were doing as much as possible.

Her family in Wisconsin had been sending money to keep her and the children from starving, but their own funds were limited. Besides her family still lived in Madison, and without any money, the distance seemed so much farther.

She contacted county and township welfare agencies, and only the township was quick to come to her aid. When her bank account was depleted, they gave her a food allotment from the emergency fund. They could contribute $10 per person for a two-week period.

The township promised to pay the utility bills, if the companies threatened to discontinue service. (The phone had been taken out months ago.) The township case worker promised to investigate some of the county agencies that could help, but processing all the papers and conducting the investigations take time. Time she really couldn't afford.

SHE CONTACTED 11 welfare agencies herself in hopes that someone could help or at least give her some advice, especially legal advice. The county legal department couldn't help because she already had a lawyer. They couldn't even give her any advice. And her lawyer couldn't help either because he wanted his money.

Other agencies couldn't come to her aid because technically she had a house and property. On paper, she wasn't destitute. In reality, she didn't know where the money would come from that would provide for her children. She did have assets, but they were tied up tighter than a drumhead because the divorce hadn't been completed.

The welfare agencies seemed to be hanging themselves on legal technicalities and bureaucratic red tape. They had their rules and their investigations, too. They were limited by law only to do so much.

THE BANK THAT held the mortgage on the house threatened to foreclose. The payments were due. She inquired about a loan on the mortgage, but the bank needed both her husband's signature as well as hers. The house was held in joint tenancy. She couldn't borrow any money because she had no income or salary.

The bank, too, had its policies.

The welfare agencies had their rules and regulations. Her financial status was a stumbling block for case workers. She was appealing for aid, and yet she owned a house, the comfortable tri-level with the aluminum siding, in suburbia.

She's one of the many property owners in an above-average income neighborhood in the Northwest suburbs where financial problems of this kind are supposedly the least likely to happen.

SHE DOESN'T FIT into the suburban divorce mold: the comfortable divorcee who becomes just another statistic in the broken-marriage column.

The lawyer, the priest and the case workers walked past the house. Just like the stranger, they didn't stop to steal a glimpse of the residents in the comfortable tri-level home with the aluminum siding.

Super Board To View Colleges

The Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) yesterday voted to set up a special committee to evaluate the state's need for new senior colleges.

The "super board" accepted recommendations of acting executive director Arthur D. Browne that the committee include technical experts begin its work in the summer and pinpoint by January 1970 how many — and where — new senior state colleges are needed.

Sure to be among the areas to get close scrutiny is the suburban Northwest nosed out by the south suburban Park Forest area when one new metropolitan area senior college was authorized by the General Assembly in 1967.

BROWNE'S WRITTEN recommendations

tions said the needs for new state schools should be "analyzed without regard to community pressures for location of such institutions."

His report said the survey should be statewide, it should give primary emphasis to the need for commuter institution — as recommended in the state's Master Plan for Higher Education, and should include special intensive studies in areas "where the need is great."

Ray Page, state superintendent of public instruction, making one of his infrequent appearances as an IBHE member, was present as the "super board" approved the study without comment.

Page got the IBHE to go along with his opposition to passage of House Bill 1708, which calls for giving the State Scholarship Commission, rather than the superintendent of public instruction, the responsibility for administering county, veterans and General Assembly scholarships. The bill calls for need to be a factor in granting the scholarships.

PAGE SUGGESTED that further study is needed before a shift in the scholarships be made.

Among those present at the meeting was E. Ernie Jones of Palatine, who headed a 1966 IBHE scholarship study committee that recommended all state scholarships be granted on the basis of need.

Two new Harper Junior College programs, to train practical nurses and food service personnel, were approved by the IBHE at Tuesday's meeting in the La Salle Hotel Chicago.

Senate Split is Showing in the ABM Hassle

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The proposed Safeguard Anti-Ballistic Missile ABM System is starting to fracture the normal unity on the powerful Senate Armed Services Committee.

Dissenting members are now talking privately about filing dissenting views against the ABM when the defense procurement bill is reported — a step virtually unprecedented on this most monolithic of congressional committees.

ABM foes say they can count at least four and possibly eight votes against the Safeguard on the 17-member panel not enough to defeat it but suffice to justify a separate minority report.

Furthermore, some members claim the differences extend beyond the ABM program, which is the focal point of congressional efforts to reduce the $80 billion defense budget.

Other major weapons systems, such as the manned strategic bomber, are being severely scrutinized. Even the committee's guiding principle — that errors should be made on the side of national security — is for the first time being questioned.

In the past, the armed services panel could be counted on for solid support for defense spending requests. Minority reports were virtually unheard of, since the committee has made a fetish of presenting a unified view to Congress on national security matters.

The ABM issue has not exactly split the committee into two hostile camps. Some of its members, particularly junior senators and those with large military complexes to protect in their states, still have qualms about challenging the committee leadership openly.

To less experienced senators, it takes more than a little courage to look a four-star general in the eye, after he insists the national security is in danger, and tell him he is wrong.

But there are some early indications of turmoil.

Democratic members, who felt duty bound to support former President Johnson's defense budget, now are receiving an opposite political pressure from the party's new leaders — former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, Sen. Edmund Muskie, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy — who oppose the ABM and favor a negotiated arms control settlement with the Soviet Union.

Moreover, Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., the committee's second-ranking Democrat, has vowed to fight the ABM and to reduce U.S. overseas military commitments. Symington has shown no signs of leading a revolt. But some members would be surprised if his views on the ABM went unrecorded when the defense procurement bill is reported. If he chooses to force a committee showdown on the question, he will have several allies.

Oil Interests Face a Fight

By BILL MULLINS

The oil industry is one of many that has been evaluating the changing makeup of Congress as a result of the population shift to the cities and the reapportionment ordered by the U.S. Supreme Court.

And like some other business, it is not entirely satisfied with its findings.

There are—and will continue to be for the foreseeable future — powerful congressmen who are from oil producing states and therefore sympathetic to the petroleum industry.

But there are a growing number of consumer and urban-oriented congressmen who are not sympathetic to legislation long cherished by the oil industry, including the oil import program and the oil depletion allowance.

Senators Edmund Muskie and Edward Kennedy are both in the midst of a battle with oil interests over a proposal for a refinery in Maine that would use foreign oil and service New England.

The government is involved because the trade zone board must grant permission before Occidental Petroleum Corporation can import oil from Libya for the refinery.

The New England delegations to Congress are pressing hard for the refinery and have some ugly things to say about the opposition of the petroleum industry.

The proposed deep-water port and refinery at Machiasport would have negligible impact outside the state of Maine and New England, Muskie said.

"But it aroused the fears of domestic oil producers and the enmity of the major oil companies, which enjoy a virtual stranglehold on the importation of foreign crude for the domestic market," he said.

Sen. John Pastore of Rhode Island termed the current delay in deciding on the application for a foreign trade zone for the refinery "scandalous and sickening." He said the New England consumer is paying the cost.

Rep. Bertram Podell of New York is harsh in his view of the oil depletion allowance. He criticized both it and other tax benefits, calling them "the great oil robbery."

Podell warned to his subject with even rougher language.

"How can they keep polluting our beaches, killing wildlife, keeping out cheap foreign oil and taking that 27 1/2 percent depletion allowance on a pitiful diet of filet mignon and pate de fois gras," he asked.

Who Rates College Aid?

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI)—Should the son of a man worth millions have Uncle Sam pay interest on a loan he gets for college tuition?

Should Uncle Sam do the same for the child of a person who has adjusted income not exceeding $15,000, or a parent with family savings in the bank?

Uncle Sam is doing it, under a 1965 provision, and Allen Marshall, president of United Student Aid Funds Inc., feels that such practices will short-change really needy students in the long run. But it's a tough question.

The son of the man worth millions is not eligible for income not beyond $15,000 and a scholarship eligible. The child of the family with savings is eligible because he has the loan on his signature and father has not involved.

Why should the dad in either case tie up money that earns them interest when the government will pay during the student years?

Marshall said some other parents are aware of this help from government, prefer to let children get loans on their own signatures. The reason: "Why should I get a loan and pay interest when Uncle Sam will pay the interest?"

The aid fund is a nonprofit organization that has been endorsing low-cost loans since 1961. Usually these were needy students who started paying back up to $7,500 upon graduation. Payments ranging from $30 to $100 a month.

Since 1965 and the free interest loans, Marshall fears a kind of financial madness in the student loan field.

If Marshall could have his way, no loan program would cover all college tuition. "It's too big a debt to face on graduation," he said.

In case of real need a student ought to be able to get a grant to cover a part of the college expenses, he said. Then if he needs more, he ought to have the chance to get a modest loan.

How students go about paying off their loans remains a subject of great debate among those involved in college aid, according to Marshall.

Under one suggested plan a student would repay over 10 years a small percentage of income earned each year.

Those with large incomes would balance off payments from those who earn less — providing a steady source of new loan money.

But what happens when John, with his loan, marries Jane, with her loan, and she stops working?

John, as things now stand, will have two college loan payments to face each month.

STANDARD OF THE WORLD

Cadillac

The 1969 Coupe de Ville. Cadillac Motor Car Division

If it's the only time you have to yourself, make the most of it.

After a long business day, it's a wonderful feeling to enter the relaxing and luxurious world of Cadillac. For no other motor car so completely insulates its owner from unnecessary distractions and undue demands.

The inherent quietness of a Cadillac is immediately apparent. You sense it in the solid, precise sound of the closing door, in the whisper-quiet response of the big engine, in the isolation from road noise, in the surprisingly muted sounds of street traffic.

As you lean back, enjoying the comfort of the contoured cushions with the seat adjusted to the position of your preference, you experience a most welcome release from the tensions of the day.

And how reassuring it is, as you blend effortlessly into the flow of the freeway, to have at your command the precise, sure response of Cadillac's variable-ratio power steering and power front disc brakes.

At the end of your journey you arrive home, pleasantly refreshed and relaxed, ready to enjoy the evening. And, chances are, you'll be looking forward to the advent of another day and to another quiet hour with your Cadillac.

Vigilante Groups

A local state representative's bill to repeal an old Illinois law allowing vigilante groups seems headed for approval in the Illinois legislature.

Sponsored by Rep. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, the House sent to the Senate on a 136-11 vote a bill that would outlaw vigilante groups in Illinois, according to United Press International.

The 1885 law Regner's bill seeks to repeal allows 10 or more men to form a posse to pursue and apprehend horse thieves.

REGNER SAID HE is asking for repeal of the law "because although there doesn't seem to be any problem under the original intent of the act, it is still legal for vigilante groups to form whose purpose today is quite something else."

A Senate version repealing the same act passed that body with little opposition and is in the House.

TV Eye Glue

by Ed Landwehr

Eye strain from television viewing is a frequent complaint, and folks ask us at LANDWEHR TV, 218 N. Dunton, Arlington Heights about it. Actually, when you consider the number of hours some of us stay "glued" to a TV screen, we should be amazed at the strength of the human eye. Watching a baseball game or reading a book for the same amount of time would cause the same tiredness. Nature intends that, when we overwork any part of our body, to warn us by giving our nervous system an uncomfortable feeling.

However, sometimes TV viewing can be made easier by softer, non-reflective lighting. The steadiness and hold of your picture screen helps for better viewing, too. Often, the cathode tube's life is depleting and should be replaced. Phone Clearbrook 5-0700 for your next service call and let us completely readjust your set for its full value. Perhaps we can give you some ideas about the lighting effect, too.

Long School Day Backed By Chamber

The longer school day and school year proposals won hearty applause at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce convention in Washington, D. C. recently.

Both school calendar changes were endorsed by Secretary of Health Education and Welfare Robert H. Finch.

Finch told the chamber leadership to stress use of schools 18 hours a day, 12 months a year and to promote the junior college concept in their home communities.

JOHN W. LETSON, superintendent of schools in Atlanta, Ga., reported that a four-quarter, year-round school year is winning wide support from students and parents in that Southern city.

Finch also warned delegates to avoid developing a junior college system that becomes just a feeder system for four-year colleges.

Teachers Want Legal Voice

Teachers, like lawyers and doctors, should have a legal voice in governing the standards for entrance into their profession.

This is the conclusion of the National Commission on Teacher Education and Professional Standards (NCTEPS) in a position paper released today.

The NCTEPS paper points out that teaching is the only major profession in the United States that does not legally govern its own standards of entrance. It declares that the organized profession can no longer accept the position that policies governing certification and accreditation be left to those outside the profession.

THE COMMISSION, a unit of the National Education Association, calls for each state to have a legally established professional standards board, charged with the responsibilities for licensure of educational personnel, accreditation of teacher education, and promotion of research to improve teacher education.

"Such boards are essential," says Dorothy V. Meyer, chairman of NCTEPS and a junior high school teacher, "if the teaching profession is to assume responsibility and accountability for its own destiny."

The NCTEPS position paper recommends that the governor or chief state school officer of each state appoint the board, that its membership be broadly representative of the teaching profession, and that continuity be assured.

DID YOU EVER WONDER WHY

—Why so few tennis and golf players are able to make it down to the state finals in Champaign each year? Out of the thousands that participate in these two sports, only the two best singles players and two best doubles teams of each tennis district qualify for state, and only the top team and two best individuals qualify for state in golf from each district.

Those are pretty severe limitations. In some districts, like the New Trier and Arlington Districts in tennis, you're keeping out individuals who could be or are better than much of the competition from other districts. In golf, this year's New Trier West District will boast a half dozen of the top 20 teams in the state — but only one team and two individuals will take the trip to Champaign next weekend.

There are studies going on right now, though, that should help this situation. Arlington tennis coach Tom Pitchford reports that he is a member of a committee to study realignment of districts and possible changes in the number of individuals to qualify. And L. "Mac" McMillan, coach of last year's state championship Glenbrook South golf team, says that golf coaches are also seeking change.

—Why area athletic directors and the Illinois High School Association can't get together with whoever it is who schedules the College Board tests and arrange make-up dates for athletes?

Who knows how many college-bound athletes the past two weekends were forced to sit out ballgames or the tennis districts because of these tests? Last weekend, when I showed up at Arlington to take in the district tennis meet, I was astounded by the number of cars around the school. But those weren't the cars of prep tennis buffs; no, they were all high school students taking College Boards.

Who knows how many of them were college-bound athletes forced to sit out the tennis district or a crucial baseball game or track meet?

—Why parents will turn out in droves for Little League or Midget Football games, but very few will take the time to see their boys at high school games? I am reminded of this every time I go to a baseball game in the area: there are a few like Lou Schmeizer, father of Arlington's Dean Schmeizer, who show up at every game possible. But only a few.

Every team has at least 15-20 players on it, which means that there should be at least that many parents at each game. The most I've ever seen is eight or ten. Don't you suppose that one of the reasons that Dean Schmeizer, who has received a scholarship to Southern Illinois, is such a fine athlete is because he knows his mom and dad are interested in what he's doing, and because they encourage him by showing up at his games?

Being interested in a son shouldn't stop after Little League. He needs support just as much — if not more — during his high school years, when he's making the change from boyhood to manhood.

Don't you think your boy deserves all the support you can give him?

Drawing May 10th For Scholarships

The final drawing for scholarships to the Mickey Owens Baseball School will be held on Saturday, May 10, at 10 a.m. in the lobby of the Suburban National Bank in Palatine.

Jack L. Kemmerly of Kemmerly Real Estate is providing all-expense paid, two-week scholarships to the Mickey Owens School in Miller, Mo.

These scholarships, awarded to winners by a blind draw, provide round-trip fare to the school, board and two weeks of intensive training-camp type of baseball instruction, practice and play.

All boys from eight to 18 are eligible for the scholarships.

The boys will be given thorough supervision throughout their stay at the baseball school. They will be instructed by some of the best baseball teachers in the country.

The following boys have already been selected and are making their plans for this summer: Fred Smith, 274 W. Michigan Ave., and Brad Byker, 106 Arlene, Palatine.

Boys may register at the Kemmerly Real Estate offices.

THE SPIN AND THE RELEASE. Arlington's Jim Ulrich, an All-State football tackle, whirls and delivers the discus in a recent area track meet. The state qualifying distance in the discus is 150 feet. Boys earning state meet berths by either finishing first or second in the districts or by finishing third, fourth or fifth and equalling or surpassing this 150 foot distance.

The announcement of Ratcliff's appointment came Monday from Fremd athletic director Dick Welty. The announcement ended a five-month search which sought a man to replace Dick Gavigan who resigned as head coach in January.

Gavigan resigned to devote more time to his social studies teaching duties and to earn a Master's Degree.

Before taking over as head coach Ratcliff, 44, was junior varsity coach at Jeffersonville (Ind.) for four years, line coach at Battle Creek Central (Mich.) High School for four years and was line coach at Benton Harbor for two years.

Ratcliff's two best teams at Benton Harbor, 1962 and 1963, were distinctly different.

"In 1962," Ratcliff said, "we had a strong defense. In fact, we gave up only 24 points that year. Then in 1963 we scored a lot but gave up a lot of points, too."

Ratcliff admits that he would rather have a strong defensive team and he hopes he can install one at Fremd.

"We'll use an eight-man front. What I mean is, we'll have three deep backs and eight front men — either six linemen (and two linebackers) or four linemen (and four linebackers).

"We'll put a lot of pressure on from the outside and try and keep teams from getting outside on us."

Offensively, Ratcliff will use what he calls a "variable I."

Palatine Shades Hersey, 2-0

Pirates' Dempster Fires One-Hitter

by LARRY MLYNCZAK

He did not throw a no-hitter, but John Dempster still pitched the best seven innings seen in the Mid-Suburban League this year.

Dempster was nothing short of magnificent as he handcuffed Hersey's bats as Palatine's Pirates scored two unearned runs in the first inning while beating the Huskies 2-0 to take over sole possession of first place, three games behind first place Wheeling.

Dempster gave up one hit... a Texas League single to center field by Steve Tonneff (who was hitting .087 going into the game) in the third inning. Tonneff was the only base runner Dempster allowed.

THE MOST incredible aspect of Dempster's performance was his control. He did not walk a single batter. In fact, only 17 of his pitches were not strikes — 17 balls in seven innings of work. Dempster fanned 12 batters.

Dempster, a lanky lefthander, had his fastball popping, but it was his curve that kept Hersey's batters off balance. Hersey coach Steve Chernicky said of Dempster's performance:

"If we had played 20 innings I don't think we would have scored off him. He was really snapping off his curve. I don't think anyone could have hit him today."

HERSEY PITCHER Paul Elisco also hurled an excellent game. The southpaw who pitches with a motion which reminds one of Juan Marichal with his high kick, yielded only three hits and the two runs he gave up were unearned.

Crain Pitches Triumph; 12th Straight for 'Cats

by KEITH REINHARD

Marty Crain posted two big victories Monday afternoon.

The smooth-throwing senior suppressed both Prospect and a pesky case of the seventh-inning doldrums while pitching Wheeling's Wildcats to their 12th consecutive triumph of the current campaign 8-2.

The win was somewhat of a milestone. The 'Cats have successfully met and turned back every team in the conference now while cultivating a 9-0 Mid-Suburban league slate.

CRAIN HAS CORNERED the decision in exactly half of the dozen verdicts his team has rung up overall without a loss this season.

Up until Monday however, Crain had run into trouble in the last frame of each of his five outings. Of the 17 total runs the big right hander had been tapped for, all but four had come across against Wheeling in the last stanza.

Twice — by Deerfield and Fremd — final frame rallies had ruined shutout bids.

PROSPECT AVERTED a shutout. But they never really had a chance after a big six-run first-inning outburst by the host Wildcats. And Crain couldn't have had a better finish, whiffing three straight Knights on four pitches apiece to run his conference slate to four distance-going decisions without a defeat.

The big spoiler was Mike Wulbecker,

Walk, Don't Run

Ron Santo of the Chicago Cubs shares a league record by leading the National League in walks for three consecutive years. Santo led the league in walks in 1966, 1967 and 1968. He shares the record with George Burns, Mel Ott, Floyd Vaughan and Eddie Mathews.

who lofted a leadoff circuit blast in the fourth, smacking a Crain letter high fast ball hard enough to send it glancing off the top of the fence in left center field.

Wheeling was already on top 8-0 at the time, thanks mainly to a four-bagger the hard way by Jack Bastable. After Salm had reached first on an error to open the home half of the first, and Don Wright had walked, Bastable lined a shot between the right and center fielders and dashed all the way around to chalk up his first home run of the season.

IT ALSO TURNED out to be his only hit of the day though plummeting his batting average down to .613.

Dino Sheridan continued the first frame fireworks by reaching on a miscue, Dan Hull then walked, Gary Schweitzer singled and all three then came across on Bob Fitzgerald's walk, Crain's fielder's choice and Salm's single.

In the third Salm singled and Bastable was hit by a pitch and both eventually tallied on throwing errors.

The Knights picked up a second run in the sixth when Dave Somers slapped a hard shot off the second baseman that went for a triple. A throwing error on Wulbecker's grounder allowed Somers to scamper home.

THE BEST IN

"We will use two tight ends most of the time and we'll flip flop them, keeping one end to the same side of the swing back. In that way we'll have the same receivers on the same side of the field and the boys won't have to know two different combinations of patterns."

Ratcliff named the advantages of using the 'I' formation when he said, "From the 'I' formation you can run your best ball carrier to both sides of the line with equal advantages. In the 'I' you can have your best blocking back right in front of your best runner and you can hit outside better because you have an extra two steps in the 'I'."

"We'll use a reverse pivot and it brings more deception and makes it harder on the linebackers to find the ball."

Ratcliff is an advocate of short and concise practices which emphasize organization, fundamentals, execution and contact. I like to have my boys get as much contact in practice, in fact more contact in practice, than they would in a game.

"From the first day we're going to work on defense, especially pass defense. From the looks of the scores in that league last year, there must have been a lot of good offenses."

It is the wish of every coach taking over as head coach at a job to make its team a power. It is also the wish of Al Ratcliff. But at least Al Ratcliff knows what it takes to build a winner. He's had more than one before.

walk a single batter.

It was one of the few times in the history of the Mid-Suburban League that an entire game was played without one batter reaching base on a walk.

The Racing Scene

by JOHN F. KLUSMANN

UNDEFEATED MAJESTIC Prince, the handsome, red chestnut colt from California, returned to his native state to win the famed Kentucky Derby last Saturday. The fast-stepping colt by Raise a Native - Gay Hostess showed that he has all the stamina and courage of the classic distance runner as he came up with one of the most determined stretch runs in the history of the Derby.

The Prince received a superb ride from Bill Hartack, riding his fifth winner in nine Derby tries, got every ounce of strength from a gallant horse who had everything to give.

Majestic Prince and Arts and Letters locked together in a furious battle all the way down the home lane, neither giving an inch. At the eighth pole the Prince had the lead with Arts and Letters driving along the rail and Dike coming from behind like an express train. Hartack whipped, pushed and drove Majestic Prince under the wire with a neck advantage over Arts and Letters Dike, who appeared to hang a bit, was up for third.

The Derby was the eighth victory in eight trips to the post for Majestic Prince. Former riding great Johnny Longden, the Prince's trainer, says he is the best horse he has seen since Count Fleet. Longden won the Triple Crown aboard Count Fleet in 1935.

About Bill Hartack one can only say that he doesn't talk to sports writers but he sure can ride race horses, especially Derby contenders.

Terrible Tiger picked up his 129 pound impost and won the Nash Memorial Handicap at Sportsman's last Saturday. The 1-1 16 mile event was the second $30,000 Handicap in a row for Terrible Tiger. American Native won the first two $30,000 Handicaps at the Cicero Oval, then stayed in the barn for Terrible Tiger's two triumphs. Doug Richard, the meeting's leading rider, was aboard the winner in all four of these races.

The $75,000 added Illinois Derby will be run at Sportsman's Park on closing day this Saturday. The 1-1 8 mile event will be a good race with many fine three-year-olds shipping in specifically for the 14th renewal of the stakes feature.

The two leading contenders are Fast Hilarious, winner of the Hibiscus Stakes in Florida, and Indian Emerald, winner of the To Market Stakes and runner-up to Ack Ack in the Kentucky Derby Trial. Ogden Phipps' King of the Castle may come to Chicago for the Illinois Derby. The Bold Ruler colt won the Louisiana Derby and was second in the Arkansas Derby.

Arlington Park opens on Monday. Many fine stakes races have been scheduled for the first 30-day Balmoral Meeting. The Clang Handicap, traditional opening day feature, has been changed to the Balmoral Inaugural Handicap. It is still a $25,000 added, 5-1/2 furlong dash over the turf course for three-year-olds and older.

Horses to Watch

The first few weeks at the beginning of a meeting can be rather difficult for the player because the horses have not established form at that particular track. The following is a list of horses now racing in the Chicago area or Florida that figure to do well at Arlington Park soon after the season opens on Monday.

Gypsy Ben — Getting older now but can still turn on the speed in allowance sprints.

Tasitlo — Van Berg claimer boasts an impressive record so far this year. $4,000-$5,000 claiming races at a mile are the right conditions.

Red Spice II — Put in a long hard campaign in Florida. Won five turf races in a row then finished second. Should be rested awhile then win his share of races over the Arlington grass.

Ainbil — His last race at Sportsman's was good. Will win some higher priced claiming events at Arlington. Prefers a distance of ground but has the speed to go in sprints.

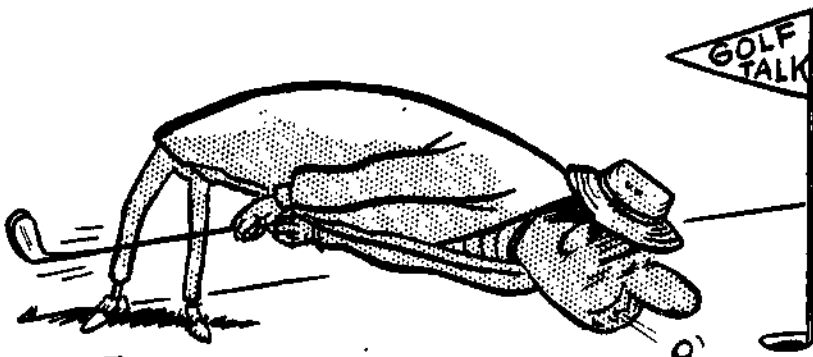

Highlands Kid — Racing in New Jersey now but usually comes to Arlington Park during the summer and wins several races. Always pays a nice price. Can run on dirt or turf, short or long.

Terra Sands — Two-year-old by Terra Firma is improving with every race. Should win several allowance sprints this summer.

Polk Along — Two-year-old by Killoqua with plenty of speed. Killoqua was one of the fastest horses out of the gate in America several years ago. His son runs the same way.

Gary G. — Can lead from flag drop to wire in middle distance races over the turf. Will be dangerous in overnight handicaps and allowance races.

Rob Roy Golf Club

(Editor's note: This is one in a series of articles which will introduce the pro or manager, his course and what the two have available to Paddock area golfers.)

by PAUL LOGAN

A golf course in the city can resemble an oasis to the beleaguered golfer who's looking for a break in his grueling, desert-like work schedule.

But how many times have you driven into an oasis-like atmosphere only to find that all the proprietor was interested in was getting his money and moving you along.

However, there's one course in the area that prides itself in having cheerful surroundings and personnel — Rob Roy Golf Club.

Head professional Bob McDonald explained the course's uniqueness this way:

"It's a friendly atmosphere... everybody knows everybody. Some of these guys have been playing out here since I've been a kid."

And Bob should know because he was brought up on the 46-year old layout. His father Pat Sr., who stepped down from the head pro duties last January, brought the course in the mid-1940's. He had held the position of head pro at Rolling Green Country Club before taking charge of the Prospect Heights course.

Bob is now the head pro with his brother Pat, Jr. handling the manager duties and brother Mike also being a pro.

Still another P.G.A. professional, who has been associated with the McDonald establishment for over 10 years, has a dual role at the Rob Roy driving range — Roy Lindquist. This veteran pro, besides giving lessons, is in charge of what the McDonalds proudly label "the world's largest grass driving range."

The 40 acres of grass can accommodate a tremendously large number of golfers. It also has a pair of pitching and putting greens so that the golfer can work on any part of his game. The range and the extra nine holes — which is a par 35, 2,800 yards long — was built in 1962 to make Rob Roy a 27-hole layout.

Of the three McDonald brothers, Bob was probably the most fortunate golf-wise in high school, for his team went all the way to the state title in 1956. Bob was the district medalist at Old Orchard carding an even par 71.

But he added that there were only about five or 10 spots open with about 250 guys competing from all over the country.

Speaking of tournaments, Bob pointed out that Rob Roy's big tourney takes place in October — the Fall Sweeper. Usually there are 250 entered in the amateur bash which has been held for about a decade and is "very popular" with area golfers, according to McDonald.

Bob turned pro in 1959 and has attempted to compete in "about 16 tournaments a year." In 1963 he got his P.G.A. card. Asked if he's tried to get into the Western Open, he said, "Almost every year I try."

Bob McDonald

Rob Roy's 18 hole layout, which measures out to 6,242 and is a par 71, is a sporting challenge to most golfers. Plenty of trees border the fairways with a sprinkling of sandtraps and a creek making play interesting.

The creek comes into play on seven of the holes, with the 15th — a par four, 421 yarder — having a big duck pond guarding the front approach to the green. This hole is ranked No. 1 in the handicap column of the scorecard, but Bob believes another hole offers a more difficult challenge — the 408 yard, par four, fifth.

"I've seen that one bogeyed more than any on this course," McDonald said. "The reason No. 5 is so tough is that you're almost always playing against a South-west wind. You always have a long iron into a small green. It's a hard hole to par."

Only a couple of golfers have really had banner days at Rob Roy. One of them was Ed Moehling, the pro host for the Western Open next month at Midlothian Country Club, who had a 63 to share the course record.

This season there are 12 golf leagues trying to break par. The two big ones, according to Bob, are the Tuesday and Thursday women's leagues.

In the summer, the McDonalds throw open the nine-hole course to a large group of junior golfers (10-14) on Mondays. "They're there from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.," Bob said with a chuckle.

Rob Roy also is the home course for three high school teams — St. Viator, Notre Dame of Niles and Maine East.

The clubhouse is the center of Rob Roy's friendly atmosphere. In it there is a good size dining area where anything from hamburgers to steaks are served. Besides a complete pro shop, the clubhouse contains a large circular bar to quench the thirst of any golfer. Seeing to it that everyone is taken care of is the McDonald family's dog — Bret.

The 18-hole rate on weekdays is $5 and on the weekends $6. After 1 p.m. the rate drops to $5 on weekends and after 4 p.m. it plummets to $3.

On the nine hole course the rate is $2 on weekdays and $2.50 on weekends.

(Next week: Nordie Hills Country Club in Itasca.)

Pirates Fall to Lancers on Links

In a team sport, balance is often the difference.

It was Thursday as Lake Park downed Palatine 156-162 in a dual meet at the Medinah Country Club.

The number one and two men for both the Lancers and Pirates turned in identical 38's and 39's. But whereas all seven Lancers were within three strokes of each other, the top four for the Pirates were six strokes apart.

Jay Bechtold, as usual, led the winners with a 38. Right behind were Carter Notke and Bill Kenney with 39's and Randy Waters with a 40. And just one stroke back were Jim Vranek, Bob Dohse, and Joe Benda.

For Palatine, Matt Riley carded a 38 and Tom Schrickel 39. Jim Graham and Ray Drasga were the final counters with 41 and 44 respectively.

"This was our best total team performance," said Lake Park coach Jerry Wiseman, "although it isn't our best counter score."

The victory left the Lancers with a 9-3 season mark.

In the frosh-soph meet, Lake Park chalked up a 9-stroke victory, 163-202.

Grove Trackmen Take 2nd at R-B

Next year should be Elk Grove's year.

The last three times the Grenadiers have taken part in the third annual Riverside-Brookfield Relays, they've moved up in the final team standings. And 1970 should be the year for the first place trophy.

Last Monday afternoon Coach Rich Bader's crew took part in the eight-team meet and finished second to the hosting Bulldogs, 134-59.

In 1968 the Grove was third and in 1967, fifth. Since the Grenadiers have shown steady improvement, next year should see them out the three-time champions.

The meet, which was originally scheduled to be held on April 19 but was cancelled by flooding, almost was washed out again. A heavy downpour hit just before the relays began but, despite the sixth lane under water and an overall soggy track, the show went on.

The Grenadiers chalked up one first and that was good for a record. The frosh-soph mile medley team of Steve Boggs, John Ford, Greg Smith and Jim Ottinger toured the cinder oval in 3:52.6 breaking the old mark of 3:56.0 set by Hinsdale South in 1967.

The sole second place finish went to the varsity mile medley combination of John Flesch, Mike Michela, Bob Texidor and Bob Bachus. They ran a 3:47.4 just finishing a second and a half behind the winning Bulldogs.

Two thirds were posted — Pat Texidor in the high hurdles and the frosh-soph sprint medley team. Texidor flew over the sticks in 16.9 and the team of Mike Harvey, Boggs, Ford and Smith covered their distance in 1:45.4.

In the two-mile relay the Grove finished fourth. Bringing home a time of 8:58.1 were Pat Dunning, Gary Shick, Bob Flesch and Bill Buckholz.

The Grove also had two fifths — in the individual two-mile and the frosh mile relay. Jeff Piero posted a 10:28 in the eight lap affair and the foursome of Mike Bachus, Larry Cyrier, Tom Zifra and Jim Leopardo came in with a 4:06 in the four-lapper.

Last year Jim Opti was named the athlete of the meet for his fine efforts for Elk Grove. This time around Steve Glutting of Riverside-Brookfield was bestowed the honor.

The final team standings were:

1. Riverside-Brookfield	134
2. Elk Grove	59
3. Crown	51 1/2
4. Benet Academy	47 1/2
5. Holy Cross	36
6. Oak Lawn	33
7. Kaneland	22
8. Joliet East	18

Lions Explode

by JIM EWART

Coach Pat Mahoney should be appointed traffic control commissioner of Arlington Heights.

Directing base paths busier than a freeway during rush hour, Mahoney conducted an almost endless parade of Lions around the diamond for a 16-6 win over Marist Friday afternoon.

St. Viator took the match in the sixth as they scored their 16th run to end the contest on the ten run margin rule. Lion hitting was explosive throughout the day as they pounded out 15 hits including three homers, one triple, and in the second inning five consecutive singles.

Wasting no time, St. Viator counted five runs in the first as Mike Pettenuzzo blasted a ball deep into left field with two men on and crossed the plate before the ball was retrieved for the big effort.

Winning pitcher Mark Walinski aided his own cause in the second by belting a triple after a rash of hits that added six more runs.

Ken Preski's first homer was the Lions' only score of the third frame, and Preski's second four base hit gave St. Viator a three run fourth.

The game-ending run came in the sixth as Jack Brawley singled and was driven home on a Jim Hynes hit.

Marist collected their six runs in the second and third stanza on five hits. Tor Hardiman drove in four for the losers on a pair of hits, and a double by Roger Mentzer was the only extra base tag Marist could manage.

MONTHLY NEWS

A message from George Harris,
Your Pharmacist

WHEN DOES BABY HAVE FEVER?

In a healthy baby the body temperature does not stay at 98.6. It is always varying a little up and down -- lowest in early morning, highest in late afternoon. It will also change with activity and could go to 100 after running around for several minutes.

RECTAL VS. ORAL TEMPERATURE

The body has different temperatures. Rectal temperature is always a little higher, perhaps 1/2 of one degree. When telling your doctor about fever always tell him by which method it was taken.

RECTAL VS. ORAL THERMOMETER

The only difference between the two is in the shape of the bulb. The rectal is round so that it will not be too sharp. The oral is longer and thinner so it will be warmed more quickly by the mouth. The markings are exactly the same. Do not use an oral thermometer in rectum. The bulb can break.

HOW LONG SHOULD IT TAKE?

Most thermometers register well enough in a minute in the rectum. Orally it will take 1 1/2 to 2 minutes because the bulb is surrounded by air.

USE A HIGH QUALITY THERMOMETER

We stock both rectal and oral thermometers made by reputable manufacturers. We suggest you have one of each in your family medicine cabinet.

Their Specialty — Giving Advice on Draft

By GORDON F. JOSELOFF

NEW YORK (UPI) — "To whom it may concern: I am being held a prisoner in the United States Army. I need your help."

The return address on the penciled, nearly illegible letter was the Fort Dix, N.J., Stockade.

A Long Island housewife wrote:

"I am writing to you out of desperation since I do not know where to turn. My husband has just been drafted and there is no money to support me or my children."

These and dozens of similar pleas for help arrive daily at the small, midtown Manhattan office of the New York Draft and Military Law Panel, an antiwar legal help organization for draft age men, reservists and those on active duty.

The group, like similar organizations in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Boston, is nonprofit and supported by voluntary contributions.

The panel was formed last June as a joint effort of the National Emergency Civil Liberties Committee and the National Lawyers Guild. It has 120 member lawyers with an additional 300 cooperating attorneys across the country who can be called on for assistance.

Founders of the group say it was mainly a response to the increasing opposition to the Vietnam war and the need for legal specialists in the complicated field of draft and military law who were sympathetic to antiwar views.

Operating out of a cramped, ninth floor office on East 26th Street, the panel has only one full-time employee — a pretty, dark-haired, 23-year-old former Vista volunteer named Loni Levy.

"Our main goal is to provide competent counsel for those politically and morally opposed to the Vietnam war," says Miss Levy, who has the title of panel coordinator.

In its brief history, the group has handled about 100 cases. Most have involved persons who believed they had either been illegally drafted, unfairly reclassified I-A or deprived of a deferment, and those who had refused induction, gone AWOL, or deserted.

"Many cases can be handled merely by a phone call or letter to the proper official," says Miss Levy. "Others wind up in the courts."

Lately, she says, the panel has received many inquiries from graduate students seeking some means to continue their studies even though local draft boards no longer grant them deferments.

Those who have sought panel help include:

A 27-year-old laborer, married and the father of four, who was called for his physical and inducted the same day. Panel lawyers are seeking his discharge on the grounds he is over 26, is the sole supporter of his family and was given his physical and inducted the same day, a violation of regulations.

A reservist who moved from one city to another and tried but failed to get into a new unit and was subsequently activated. A panel attorney helped him get his reserve status restored and obtain a place in a new unit.

Numerous reservists who have attempted to block their activation and shipment to Vietnam through various means. None of these appeals have been successful.

Two reservists threatened with activation because they refused to cut their hair which they said had to be long for their civilian work as musicians. The case is pending.

The panel also does legal research into draft and military cases, issues detailed memoranda on the subject, holds seminars for draft counselors and lawyers, and publishes a monthly bulletin.

Future projects include legal challenges to army regulations which the panel feels infringe on an individual's rights. Cited by Miss Levy as examples are a ban on participation of a soldier in any public demonstration, either in or out of uniform, and an order to clear all printed matter with base officials before distributing it on the post.

Lawyers are not paid any fee for their panel work, receiving only out of pocket expenses. All but one or two are in their late 20s or early 30s, and every one is sympathetic to the antiwar views of their clients—although not always their tactics.

How does Miss Levy assess the panel's work?

"We've had our share of successes," she says, "but they are only important in how they help those who resist in the future."

"Some day the government will learn it can't tell you how to live—or die."

TV Dull? Call the British

by RICK DU BROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—It's always nice to know the British are around to pick a fellow up after a difficult television season.

Just when you are ready to start mulling to yourself over the quality of various video series, there are the British—in spring and summer—to add a little class to the proceedings.

Over at NBC-TV, for instance, "The Saint" is back on Friday nights, with Roger Moore deftly tossing off lines with precisely the right unimportance they deserve.

If he keeps playing his cards right, Mr. Moore may be around longer than Mickey Rooney.

Over at CBS-TV, meanwhile, Patrick McGeehan is scheduled to return very soon in his second season of a series called "The Prisoner," an Orwellian tale of a man held captive in a Disneyland-type mystery village with thought control.

Mr. McGeehan, of course, is the fellow who gained a very loyal following in a previous series, "Secret Agent," which was one of the most stylish weekly shows television ever presented.

Although there is presently a concern over sex and violence in British television—just as there is in America—McGeehan was way ahead of the game in playing down mayhem, even way back in "Secret Agent."

A strong-minded fellow, he personally deplored excessive violence, and did in his fictional foes with a minimum of shooting and fistfights.

McGeehan fans will also be pleased to know he made rather a large impression in the recent movie "Ice Station Zebra."

There used to be a third summer British series—along with "The Saint" and "Secret Agent"—that made vacation viewing more pleasant. And that was ABC-TV's "The Avengers."

Eventually, however, "The Avengers" worked its way into the network's regular season schedule, where it has been all this past season. Unfortunately, however, it seems to be running out of gas, and is getting killed in the ratings.

Nevertheless, we owe the British some thanks for giving us, in recent summers—and sometimes more often—three droll, stylish leading men who excel at the mystery-adventure-spy-private eye type of role: Patrick McGeehan, Roger Moore and Patrick Macnee of "The Avengers."

They all look splendid in conservative clothes, and know how to carry off their roles with an inner sense of elan. England may be swinging, as the slick magazines keep telling us—but you still can't beat a fellow who gives you the impression that he'd really rather keep it to himself.

Hunting Buried Treasure—Gangland Style

by BARNEY SEIBERT

CHICAGO (UPI)—Like pirates of old, the passing of the warlords of Chicago's bloody Prohibition Era has sparked legends of hidden treasure.

But if treasure exists, it is proving even more elusive than the doubloons buried by 17th century buccaneers.

The overlords of Chicago's underworld kept their plunder spread through banks in safety deposit boxes rented under assumed names. Even if the boxes were found, there is a good chance that someone else would have gotten there first.

Among the hidden hoard currently sought by federal and local authorities is that of Murray "the Camel"

Humphreys, who helped convert the late Alphonse Capone's underworld empire into a sophisticated business operation—equally ruthless but far more suave.

Last year, wreckers of the old Victoria Hotel combed fruitlessly through the rubble for riches rumored to have been concealed in its walls by a one-time tenant, the Capone gang.

But perhaps the biggest treasure trove, if it is ever found, would be that of the late Joseph Imburgio, high flying mouthpiece for "the outfit," who used to boast he was a millionaire before he was 30.

Imburgio had two wives, two families, two homes and a twin-engine $100,000 airplane so he could shuttle between them.

But after the plane crashed during a trip between wives, an inventory filed in probate court listed his entire estate as just $7,463 in cash, a few shares of stock, two cars and a Missouri cave—total value less than $1,000.

Subsequently, authorities found $60,000 in cash in a safe owned by Imburgio, also known as Joseph I. Bulger. The money was turned over to a suburban park district of which Imburgio Bulger was secretary.

Cook County state's attorneys investigators have estimated that in the six years before Imburgio's death in 1966, some $300,000 was siphoned from the park district.

As for Humphreys, federal authorities believe he may have hidden as much as $10 million before a heart attack took him in 1965.

The only clue to the alleged Humphreys hoard, if it is a clue, are the numbers, 46-400 at 20, scrawled in a notebook found in his skyscraper apartment.

Humphreys' visible estate was valued at a mere $100,000, representing barely a couple of years' outgo in the style to which he was accustomed. Federal agents maintain the $100,000 is only a small fraction of the Camel's actual wealth.

In addition to his underworld income sources, they say Humphreys was believed to have owned substantial interests in two Las Vegas gambling casinos.

Internal Revenue Service agents who prepared a tax case against Humphreys pegged his known income from 1957-62 at $452,000. Under the name of Lewis Hart, he also owned a $250,000 mansion in Key Biscayne, Fla., where President Nixon now has a vacation home.

Humphreys' heirs are as eager as the authorities to locate any hidden wealth. After all, the government wouldn't get all of it.

So, presumably, are the several claimants to the Imburgio-Bulger estate.

Imburgio, among his many achievements, was a one time supreme president of the Unione Siciliana, identified by some authorities as the American branch of the Mafia at one time and supplier of much of the illicit alcohol consumed during the Prohibition Era.

Some of Imburgio's suspected millions could be hidden somewhere in Cuba. He owned a hacienda there and was a power in Cuban gambling operations until they were closed down by Fidel Castro, who also seized the Hacienda.

Imburgio came to Chicago while still in his teens from his native New Orleans. He settled in suburban Melrose Park before World War I, married, and became the town's mayor during a period when it allegedly had more than 100 illegal alcohol stills.

During the Depression, Imburgio studied law at night while carrying on a real estate and insurance business and operating the Italian village night club at the 1933-34 Chicago World's Fair. On graduation in 1938, he changed his name to Bulger.

Bulger's legal career was meteoric. Six years after finishing law school, a time of life when most young attorneys are barely emerging from clerkdom, Bulger was defending the likes of Willie Biol against charges stemming from a multi-million dollar motion picture extortion racket.

Authorities say he became a trusted emissary of the mob in its dealings with other branches of the Mafia. Some believe he was the real boss of the Chicago operation.

A new interest entered Bulger's life. At a race track he met a 20-year-old blonde model. She later told reporters Bulger assured her he was a widower and they were married in Reno, Nev., in 1939. Ten years later she gave birth to a son and Bulger moved his second family south—first to Florida, then to Cuba. She and the boy fled Cuba in 1961.

Bulger commuted back and forth to Florida, then to Cuba, and once again to Florida to visit his second family. He was en route to Florida when his plane crashed onto a Tennessee farm during a sleet storm.

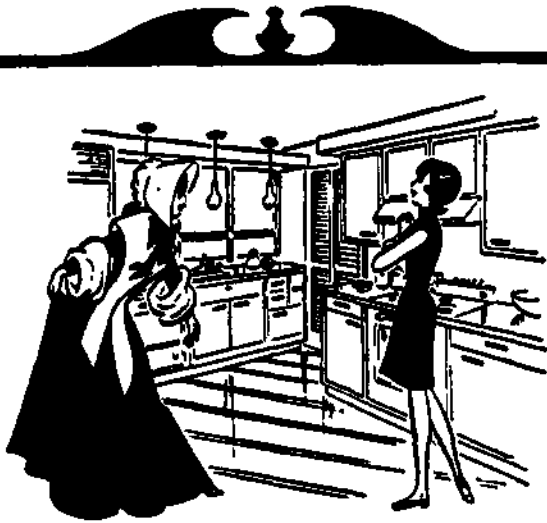

By the time Chicago police and federal agents learned of the crash, eight brief cases carried in the plane had been torn open and the contents removed.

One item was recovered—a small black notebook. It contained combinations of postal boxes and numbers of safety deposit boxes. But it did not tell the names of the banks or the location of the postal boxes.

There were other entries in the book but they were in a code which police have been unable to break.

If treasure troves of Humphreys and Imburgio are concealed in safety deposits, they may turn up in 1980 and 1981, respectively Illinois law permits opening of safety deposit boxes when rents on them have not been paid for 15 years.

But if there were such boxes, and others possessed keys to them, the wealth of Chicago's outlaw barons may be as permanently lost as Captain Kidd's treasure.

A Car With Two Bathtubs?

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI)—The car of the future may have two bathtubs in the passenger compartment—and there's a chance it will be powered by a steam engine.

That is—if the way teen-agers jammed around vehicles featuring such things at the International Auto Show in New York are any index.

Crowds around exhibits featuring these were so thick you would have thought the Beatles were giving away money, records and kisses.

By contrast, around new cars geared for the youth market, a person could move around in wide open space. The appeal to youth was via such things as the names of paint jobs—"AntiEstablishment Blue" or "Freudian Gilt."

Judging from the "oh, dynamite" reactions from teen-agers in the customized car section you may have velvet couches instead of bathtubs in your car of the future.

The "Pink Panther," by Bob Reisner, of Long Beach, Calif., had these couches, placed sideways. They separated a bar and a record-playing center at front and back ends.

The car with the modern-day steam engine was entered by William P. Lear, of Lear Motors Corp. The designer is intent on developing and building smog-free steam powerplants to replace internal combustion engines.

His steam-powered race car was said to be a "competitive demonstrator" of the best things represented by steam power.

A police cruiser currently is being fitted with such a power system and it will be tried out and evaluated by the California Highway Patrol.

A similar powerplant is being adapted for buses to be used for study by one Metropolitan Transit System.

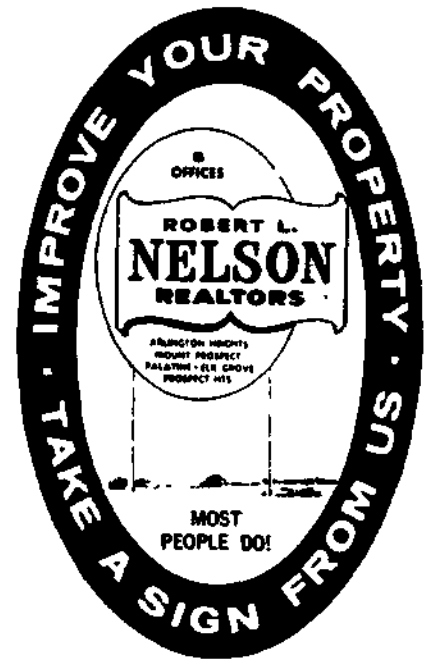

The idea is not all that new.

Oliver Evans—inventor of the 18th century horse and buggy days—predicted vehicles powered by steam one day would enable humans to travel as fast as a bird flies, "maybe 15 to 20 miles an hour."

Recently the U.S. Senate Commerce Committee, in a report, termed steam cars efficient, practical and a good bet in

"Yes I'm surprised. I was expecting a car!"

Court-Martial Out

WASHINGTON — A court of inquiry recommended that Cmdr. Lloyd Bucher be court-martialed for the loss of the intelligence ship Pueblo, but the civilian Navy Secretary yesterday ruled out punishment of Bucher or any of his crew because "they have suffered enough."

At a news conference after Navy Secretary John H. Chaffee overruled the five-admiral board and decreed that there would be no discipline of Bucher or his crew, E. Miles Harvey, Bucher's lawyer, said, "As far as we're concerned, Commander Bucher has been cleared."

141 North Viets Die

SAIGON — U.S. officers said Tuesday night at least 141 Communist troops were killed and 29 captured in a furious assault by a regiment of North Vietnamese on a U.S. outpost near Cambodia. They predicted even heavier fighting in the frontier area northwest of Saigon.

Nine Americans were killed and 62 wounded in the overnight battle at Camp Carolyn, a U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division outpost 63 miles northwest of Saigon.

Moon Via Color TV?

CAPE KENNEDY — The three moon-bound Apollo 10 astronauts rehearsed their May 18 launch procedures yesterday and then tested a new color television camera they hope will show earthlings the spectacular hues of space.

Thomas P. Stafford, John W. Young and Eugene A. Cernan tried out the new 12-pound camera by flashing a color cartoon from their spacecraft to the Houston Control Center. Project officials said initial reports were that the color pictures were received satisfactorily in Houston.

Marchers See Aid OK'd

SPRINGFIELD — About 200 chanting welfare recipients marched 12 blocks from a tent village to the statehouse yesterday where they watched the House Public Welfare Committee approve bills to increase public aid payments and benefits by a 14 to 4 vote.

About 2,000 demonstrators had been expected, according to Robert Taylor, march organizer. The bills would eliminate the $90-a-month rent ceiling, exclude Social Security benefits from recipients' payments, boost public aid grants and expand free school lunch programs.

Real Bargaining Seen

PARIS — A tacit agreement among the Vietnam peace negotiators in Paris to stop threatening each other gave impetus Tuesday to reports that the conference is inching toward real bargaining.

Careful analysis of statements made by Allied and Communist negotiators showed a de-escalation of verbal attacks and threats routinely made in the initial stages of the conference. This change in tone, noted by diplomats on both sides, coincided with mounting reports in diplomatic circles in Paris that delegates were slowly moving toward a breakthrough.

Tiny Army Increases

VATICAN CITY — Twenty-four recruits were sworn in yesterday for two-year hitch in the world's smallest, most old-fashioned and most photographed army — the Pope's 75-man-strong Swiss Guards.

The recruits took their oath of duty in a steady rainfall in the Belvedere Courtyard of the Vatican, dressed in the billowy yellow, orange, and blue uniforms the artist Michelangelo designed for them four centuries ago.

The Elgin-O'Hare Expressway (Route 19) will probably be relocated along Line 1.

Road Relocation Meet

Residents and officials from three counties will gather tomorrow in Schaumburg with state highway officials to give their views on the proposed relocation of Irving Park Road (Route 19), now called the Elgin-O'Hare Expressway.

The public hearing starts at 2 p.m. in Schaumburg's Great Hall.

The proposed relocation between Elgin on the west and Route 83 on the east will specifically affect Bensenville, Wood Dale, Itasca and Roselle in DuPage County; Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Hanover Park and Bartlett in Cook County; and Elgin in Kane County.

This portion of the relocation of the expressway will be handled by the Dist. 1 Elgin state highway office. East of Route 83 will be handled by the Chicago Dist. 10 office.

HENRY YAMANAKA of the Dist. 10 office said plans for rerouting Illinois 19 from Illinois 83 east to Mannheim Road have not been completed. "We hope to have something under way in the near future," he said, adding that a public hearing may be held in July.

The proposed expressway starts at the Elgin bypass and follows a southeasterly path parallel to the Milwaukee Road Ry. lines, then goes northeasterly through Bartlett, extending easterly through the Rinne property in Hanover Park, through the Milwaukee Road industrial park in Schaumburg, south of Nerge Road through Roselle to Interstate 90 and then follows Thorndale Road through the Wood Dale Moody Airport and ends at Route 83.

The expressway will have limited access, but frontage roads will be included on both sides. The Dist. 1 office hopes to use a common corridor through DuPage County on which Commonwealth Edison has the property right-of-way options. This would locate the road and power lines through a common corridor.

INTERCHANGES for the expressway would come at Route 83, Wood Dale Road, Prospect Avenue, Arlington Heights Road, I-90, Meacham-Medinah Road, Roselle Road, Springinguth Road, Barrington Road, Bartlett Road and Route 59.

Present Irving Park Road would be turned over to local communities when the new expressway is completed.

The state has not given a timetable on beginning the relocation. Funds will have to come from the state legislature and none will be allocated sooner than July. The relocation could be many years away.

The state highway department wants to map out the route for the relocation now so rights of way may be purchased and communities will steer development away from the freeway.

Communities supporting the preferred relocation include Schaumburg and Elk Grove Village.

HANOVER PARK Mayor Richard Baker definitely plans to seek a different rerouting through that community. Hanover Park residents feel the preferred route will cut off village expansion to the south. Baker plans to ask the highway department to locate the road further south of Hanover Park and Bartlett.

Reappoint Webb, Goranson

Edward Webb and Sam Goranson will continue to head Hoffman Estates Department of Civil Defense through April 1970.

Reappointment of both Webb and Goranson was announced by Village Pres. Frederick E. Downey Monday and ratified by the village board.

In accordance with an administrative recommendation, the Civil Defense codirectors will present a written report at the fourth board meeting of each month.

In other action, trustees accepted the resignation of Lyle Johnson as a director of the village youth commission.

DOWNEY EXPLAINED that Johnson, because of many other duties, will be unable to continue as a commission member. In addition to many other activities, Johnson is a member of the High School Dist. 211 Board of Education.

Clearing up other administrative detail, board members agreed to terminate the services of Benjamin & Lang as village financial consultants to the village and employed Mrs. Donna Lundell as part-time secretary to Downey at an hourly salary of $2.25.

Other action this week included reconfirmation of travel expenses totaling $350 for attendance of Municipal Finance Officials Convention, to be held later this month in Toronto, by Village Treasurer Mrs. Laura Reedy, and ratified salaries of the public works department arrived at for the coming year by the former board headed by retired Pres. Roy L. Jenkins.

Superior Is Low

Superior Concrete Construction Co., Chicago, was the apparent low bidder yesterday on two Interstate-90 projects in DuPage and Cook counties.

The awarding of contracts is indefinite, pending Illinois House committee action on a $118 million emergency highway appropriation.

Bids on the projects were opened in the Chicago office of the Illinois Division of Highways.

Projects to be awarded include: —A bridge over Golf Road in Cook County.

—A grade separation and structure taking I-90 over relocated Wood Dale Road; a bridge taking relocated Wood Dale Road and Lake Street over Salt Creek and 54 miles of concrete paving on Wood Dale Road, all in DuPage County.

Superior Concrete Construction Co. bid $1,130,511.55 for the bridge over Golf Road. It was the lowest of seven bids.

Superior bid $1,275,597.99 for the DuPage County project, the lowest of 10 bids.

BIDS WERE NOT opened, as had been expected, for a $125 million interchange with Illinois 83, U.S. Route 20, and Interstate 90.

Also, bids were not opened for construction of I-90 from Golf Road to Schaumburg Road.

Another bid letting is scheduled for May 23 on other I-90 projects.

A. C. Braming, assistant Dist. 10 highway engineer in charge of engineering, said that, ordinarily, contracts are awarded within two weeks of bid opening. However, these contracts awards are awaiting emergency appropriation in the Illinois House, he said.

Braming added that 62 jobs from an April 11 bid opening have not been awarded yet, also because of funding.

"THE ILLINOIS Division of Highways is seeking a $125 million emergency appropriation. It passed the House committee once but was cut down in the Senate to $118 million."

Braming indicated he expects the emergency appropriation to pass but cannot award contracts until it has.

The legislature appropriates a certain amount of money each year for highways.

In other I-90 related business, a public hearing is scheduled for Friday to consider the proposed closing of portions of 29 streets in Addison and Bloomingdale townships in DuPage County.

The hearing will be held at 10 a.m. in the Addison Village Hall.

Parade Theme: 'Big Top'

"Under the Circus Big Top" is the theme for this year's Hoffman Estates Independence Day parade.

All organizations are invited to enter a float in specialty, patriotic, theme or visitor's categories. Applications have been mailed to the civic and social organizations in the township that participated in the past.

Theme choices are given on a first-come basis and no theme idea can be duplicated.

The Fourth of July committee also advises that non-competitive commercial float entries are welcome, but must be decorative.

Any organization that wishes to enter a float may receive an application by calling Thomas Fulton at 694-6715.

THIS WILL BE the village's ninth celebration with a day designed for a safe, sane, stay-at-home Fourth. The first Independence Day celebration originated in 1961 at a meeting of the Christian Family Movement.

The World Just Walks By

by GERRY DeZONNA

(In this second and concluding part of "Divorce Suburban Style," Gerry DeZonna, Paddock staff writer, describes where a suburban mother of five turns when her money runs out as she waits for her divorce to become final.)

For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried.

There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce,

Divorce Suburban Style

he would file a lien against the property. He would be guaranteed his wages once the house was sold. The house would have to be sold within 90 days from the day that the decree was filed, so he said.

She was left in an unfortunate position. There was no money, and there wouldn't be any income until the divorce was settled. She was living in a state in which she had only lived for seven years. She didn't know the procedures as well as for her native state of Wisconsin. Her family still lived in Madison, and she didn't know where to turn or who to go to for help and advice.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW if she should sign the lien, despite the lawyer's asking price. Without the divorce, there would be no money at all. Her financial situation was already at rock bottom. It seemed as though there was no alternative but to sign the lien. She thought that it would be better to be in the frying pan rather than the fire.

But there had to be someone who could

Team Finds Dist. 54 Adequate

(Various curriculum areas in the Dist. 54 educational program were evaluated by a state team of visiting educators. Today the social studies report is examined.)

According to the social studies section of the state evaluation report, the present social studies curriculum in Dist. 54 is adequately meeting the recommended standards set forth by the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

However, the report urges more cooperation and communication with area secondary schools in order to provide a comprehensive social studies program.

Other recommendations mentioned were:

—A supervisor or coordinator of social studies should definitely be appointed.

—Careful consideration should be given to the development of a comprehensive social studies program for grades kindergarten through eight inclusive.

—THE DISTRICT'S social studies program should make provisions for emphasis on the specific contributions of the Negro and other ethnic groups in American History. (House Bill 19H) —More in-service training for Dist. 54 teachers should be provided through Title III, NDEA workshops.

Two Dist. 54 assistant principals, James Oberg and Leonard Sirotzki, are responsible for planning the social studies curriculum for the district's elementary and junior high schools.

At the junior high level, social studies instruction is departmentalized with seventh grade pupils taking world geography, and eighth grade pupils studying U.S. History.

A MAJOR INNOVATION employed in Dist. 54 for social studies teaching is the multi-text plan for third and fourth grades. Under this approach, seven copies of five different textbooks are provided for each class. In this way students are taught fundamental techniques of research and the importance of seeking out different sources for information.

"Role-playing" in the discussion of social studies problems is another classroom technique used in some Dist. 54 classes. In studying about the founding of the colonies, for example, students pretended they had formed a colony on another planet.

The time spent on social studies instruction in Dist. 54 elementary schools varies from 150 minutes per week for the lower grades, to between 225 and 250 minutes per week for the fifth and sixth grades.

AL DIST. 154 pupils also study a unit on the history and government of Schaumburg Township. This unit was prepared by R. K. Driggers, program development coordinator.

The state evaluation team recommended that a district curriculum council serve as a steering committee in writing guidelines for the various curriculum areas, including social studies.

This steering committee would consist of administrators, teachers, and a curriculum director.

According to Driggers, the bulk of the district's audio-visual resources library consists of social studies and science materials.

"We are building up our weak areas of social studies materials through the purchase of new library books and audio-visual materials," Driggers said.

TOMORROW: Mathematics Report.

Trustees Vote to OK Hamill, Kelley

Five of six Hoffman Estates trustees voted today to ratify the appointments of Thomas Hamill and John P. Kelley as village prosecutors.

Mrs. Virginia M. Hayter voted against Kelley's reappointment and abstained from the vote cast for Hamill asking Pres. Frederick E. Downey if all future appointments would be made in the same manner.

"The trustees would be opening the door for those in the community who might be interested in the position," she commented.

Downey explained that Kelley's reappointment and Hamill's assuming the post would provide continuity in the early transitional phases of his administration.

Earlier all board members had unanimously accepted the resignation of Robert Burke as village prosecutor.

HAMILL, 36, of Palatine, is a former member of the Dist. 54 Board of Education and presently serves as trustee on the Harper Junior College Board. Former residents of Hoffman Estates, Hamill and his wife, Myrna, are parents of six children.

He received a BME from Georgia Tech, Atlanta, Ga. in 1956 and earned an LL.B. from George Washington University, Washington, D.C. in 1960.

A member of the Illinois State Bar and Chicago Patent Law Association, Hamill worked as corporate attorney for Teletype Corp. in Skokie from 1960 to 1963.

He then entered private practice with the Chicago law firm of Wallace, Kinzer, & Dorn and is now with Anderson, Luedeka, Fitch, Even & Tabiri.

HAMILL HAS BEEN active in church work in both Hoffman Estates and Palatine, and is also associated with PTA, Human Relations and Cub Scout organizations.

Kelley, 38, who has lived in Hoffman Estates since 1958, has served as village prosecutor for the past five years.

He holds BS and JD degrees from Loyola University and is licensed to practice in both state and federal courts.

From 1954 to 1960 he was a member of the staff of Touche, Ross, Bailey & Smart, certified public accountants, and since then has practiced law with offices in Chicago and Schaumburg.

He is presently associated with the firm of Johnson, Colmar, DePree, Ambrose & Kelley, and is a member of the American, Illinois, Chicago and Northwest Suburban bar associations, as well as the American Institute of CPA's and the Illinois Society of CPA's.

KELLEY WAS AN unsuccessful candidate for village trustee in 1959, ran without success for Schaumburg Township Justice of the Peace in 1961, and lost the Democratic Committeeman race in 1962.

Presently he serves as president of Schaumburg Township Democratic Organization and is a member of the lay advisory board of St. Viator High School.

He serves as legal counsel for Schaumburg Township Associated Blood Bank (STABB), The Guild Players, Hoffman Estates Police and Hoffman Estates Police Benevolent Association.

Kelley and his wife, Patricia, are parents of eight children and members of St. Hubert Catholic Church.

Day Gets Scholarship

A Streamwood youth who is a senior at Elgin's Larkin High School is a recipient of a Milburn P. Akers merit scholarship given by the Chicago Sun-Times.

Richard J. Day, 18, of 101 Crestwood Drive, plans to enroll at the University of Illinois and major in journalism.

Day, a straight-A student, ranks seventh in the graduating class. He transferred to Larkin last year from a school in Decatur. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Day.

View Teen Center Status

Village Pres. Frederick E. Downey and three new trustees were briefed on the current status of a teen center planned for the community by Frank Alexa, chairman of Hoffman Estates Youth Commission, and Charles Cedarholm, architect, this week.

According to Alexa, preliminary plans and drawings have been prepared by Cedarholm, and a minimum site of 2.5 acres will be needed for the building, construction of which has been estimated at $80,000.

According to present planning, the building would be constructed of heavy timber with masonry or concrete walls, although, according to Cedarholm, "the keynote is flexibility."

Adaptable to any site, the 4,500 square foot building will house 400 to 500 and will be adaptable for use as both an auditorium and a place for teen dances.

THE PROJECT is being handled by a committee of students attending Conant High School working with members of the youth commission.

Approximately $20,000 has been placed in an escrow account to assist in financing the teen project; most of the money was raised by the teenagers assisted by the Jaycees and several other civic organizations. Several builder donations have also been secured.

Village Atty. Edward Hofert requested a copy of the escrow agreement and village board meeting minutes of the escrow establishment in order to advise the board accordingly in further action.

At the suggestion of Trustee Mrs. Virginia M. Hayter, the board may decide to attempt a voluntary contribution of a minimum five acre site for the planned center.

Park Boxing Program Takes Fall; What About Round 2?

by DON MICHAEL
Hanover Park Park District's boxing program received a setback when volunteer coach Tom Manassis announced recently that he will be unable to continue coaching the area's successful young pugilists.

Reason: He is planning to make a comeback in professional boxing.

Larry Celeste, co-coach of the area boxing team, announced at Monday's park commission meeting that he is still interested in continuing the boxing program. Celeste said he feels for the good of the athletes that a cooperative program sponsored by both the Hanover Park Fraternal Order of Police and the park district should be established.

So far there is little progress reported in the two groups achieving a meeting of the minds concerning whether either or both will sponsor the local boxing program.

Park Pres Harold Humphreys indicated he is not totally satisfied with recent events concerning the boxing program. He noted an upcoming event, which is advertised as being sponsored by the policemen's group. It will be a program between the "Hanover Park Boxing Team" and the Chicago CYO team, to be held June 7 at Tefft Junior High School.

HUMPHREYS commented, "Three years ago, the park district agreed to try the boxing program. We invested some money — not a great deal — but we helped get it started. This year the team had some success (two area youths won Golden Gloves championships) and suddenly, it seems the park district is gradually losing its sponsorship."

He also remarked that the program poster (which is displayed around the village, and also in the Longmeadows Activity Center, park district headquarters) does not credit the park district as being a sponsor.

Jim Kamradt, director of parks and recreation, remarked that the team is still working out, under Celeste, in the Ahlstrand field house. "As long as they are using park district facilities, I consider the park district to be the sponsor of the boxing program."

Celeste said that he did not care to get "in the middle" of a controversy between park and the police association. "I just want to have a good program for the boxers, and I feel a cooperative arrangement between the park board and police association would work out best," he said. Humphreys and Kamradt agreed such an association would be ideal, and the president said he would attempt to set up discussions of the situation with police association officials.

KAMRADT SUGGESTED that "as a good will gesture," the park district help the police association sell tickets for the June boxing program. Humphreys said the idea would be considered.

Celeste commented that boxing teams are gaining in popularity in area suburbs. Carpentersville and Glen Ellyn are setting up such programs, and the former has a regulation ring. "Until we get a boxing ring," Celeste said, "the program will not attract a great many boys."

Celeste said he feels intense local rivalry and interest could be generated by holding boxing meets between local youths and other area teams.

Park Board Briefs

Hanover Park Park District Pres Harold Humphreys reported Monday that legislation is being considered by the state which would permit park districts to increase taxes, without referendum, from the present .05 to .075. The levy limit, with voter approval, would be increased to .09. Humphreys said such legislation is expected to pass, according to reports at a recent seminar he attended, sponsored by the Illinois Association of Park Districts. "This would increase our non-referendum taxing power by 50 per cent," Humphreys said.

The park commission formally thanked the Hanover Park Women's Club for its donation of two blackboards for the tiny tots program.

Women's softball registration will be held at Longmeadows Activity Center on Saturday May 17, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Fee is $3 per person. Teams are asked to register in groups.

Park Budget Of $47,360 Is Approved

Hanover Park Park Com. John Morrissey Monday presented a "balanced budget" to the district, totalling $47,360: $34,360 for corporate expenses and $13,000 for recreation. It was passed unanimously.

Administrative and legal salaries total $8,920 broken down as follows: secretary, $1,080; treasurer, $1,440; part-time director, $3,150; summer full-time director, $1,500; and attorney fees, $1,800.

OTHER MAJOR anticipated expenses: general administrative, $1,000; maintenance salaries, $3,750; additional capital improvements, $22,000. The latter item is reflected by $2,000 in tax money and a hoped-for $20,000 in donations.

Harold Humphreys, board president, said the new budget is needed at this time so the district can operate properly, since it is now in fiscal year 1969-70. The appropriation ordinance for the year will be passed at the next meeting, May 19.

It was pointed out that more than the budgeted amounts probably will be spent on park activities, predominately financed by self-sustaining programs, paid for by fees charged to program participants.

Frank Borman Resigns

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Apollo 8 astronaut Frank Borman who commanded mankind's first trip around the moon, has resigned from the astronaut corps.

Borman will accept a post in the space agency's program to develop orbiting space stations. His resignation leaves the space agency with 50 astronauts.

Food for Hungry

WASHINGTON — President Nixon, declaring that hunger in America is "embarrassing and intolerable," asked Congress Tuesday to make food available free to the nation's poorest and to nearly double spending on food stamps for the hungry.

Under the proposal, families with an income of about $30 a month would receive food stamps at no cost. Families with incomes of about $4,000 a year would receive stamps for no more than 30 per cent of their income.

No-Confidence Vote

LONDON — Dissident Labor members of Parliament circulated a motion yesterday calling for a vote of no-confidence in Prime Minister Harold Wilson, after voters dealt the Labor party another setback in local elections.

The opposition Conservative party gained 34 local council seats after the first day's polling in the week-long local elections.

Court-Martial Out

WASHINGTON — A court of inquiry recommended that Cmdr Lloyd Bucher be court-martialed for the loss of the intelligence ship Pueblo, but the civilian Navy Secretary yesterday ruled out punishment of Bucher or any of his crew because "they have suffered enough."

At a news conference after Navy Secretary John H. Chaffee overruled the five-admiral board and decreed that there would be no discipline of Bucher or his crew, E. Miles Harvey, Bucher's lawyer, said, "As far as we're concerned, Commander Bucher has been cleared."

Real Bargaining Seen

PARIS — A tacit agreement among the Vietnam peace negotiators in Paris to stop threatening each other gave impetus Tuesday to reports that the conference is inching toward real bargaining.

Careful analysis of statements made by Allied and Communist negotiators showed a de-escalation of verbal attacks and threats routinely made in the initial stages of the conference. This change in tone, noted by diplomats on both sides, coincided with mounting reports in diplomatic circles in Paris that delegates were slowly moving toward a breakthrough.

Tiny Army Increases

VATICAN CITY — Twenty-four recruits were sworn in yesterday for two-year hitch in the world's smallest, most old-fashioned and most photographed army — the Pope's 75-man-strong Swiss Guards.

The recruits took their oath of duty in a steady rainfall in the Belvedere Courtyard of the Vatican, dressed in the billowy yellow, orange, and blue uniforms the artist Michelangelo designed for them four centuries ago.

Marchers See Aid OK'd

Deny Soliciting

by DAN JOHN

A little dust was raised in the Wheeling Herald offices Tuesday, resulting from Monday's article concerning a group of Jehovah's Witnesses, in the Wheeling police station.

The group went to the police station Sunday to clarify, with the police, their position in regard to a village ordinance banning solicitations.

At that time they quoted U.S. Supreme Court and State Supreme Court rulings exempting Jehovah's Witnesses from any form of solicitation bans, explaining the position generally held by the faith, that Witnesses do not sell, anything but preach their faith door-to-door.

James L. Staelens Sr., a representative of the Northbrook congregation, reiterated this position in the Herald offices, adding that he felt the tone of the article was detrimental to the image of the faith.

HIS EXPLANATION of the events was this: An officer stopped a man who had two children with him. The officer asked if they were soliciting. He was told yes, then after a minute, was told no, the man pointing out he was a minister in the faith.

This is a correction of part of the Herald article Monday stating "asked if he was soliciting, the man answered no, at first, then said yes, pointing out he was a minister in the faith."

Then, according to Staelens, the officer became "belligerent." Chief M. O. Horcher told the Herald Tuesday the officer simply made them aware of the solicitation ban. Then the minister asked to come to the station to have the matter clarified.

STAELENS SAID he had had a "long conversation" with Horcher Monday, mentioning that Horcher said the officer would be reprimanded.

Horcher told the Herald Tuesday there would be no action taken against the officer. He added, "The officer was only doing his duty in making them aware that if they were soliciting, they would have to stop."

The nub of the incident is the Wheeling village ordinance prohibiting solicitations. This is being decided in the Illinois Appellate Court.

The Jehovah's Witnesses' contention is they are covered under Supreme Court rulings, specifically mentioning them, as not solicitors, but as a religious group entitled to rights of speech and freedom of religion.

Chief Horcher said whether they come under this contested ordinance or not is to be decided upon after the Appellate Court resolves the case.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted "No" in committee on all three aid to nonpublic school bills now before the state legislature.

Mrs. Chapman told The Herald Tuesday that after much soul-searching, she voted against the bills because they did not provide tight enough state standards to control the caliber of education in the nonpublic schools.

"We would be encouraging schools offering inadequate programs," Mrs. Chapman said. She said she did not anticipate flack from her parochial-school oriented constituents provided she could get the reason for her vote across to them.

Two of the three bills received a "Do Pass" from the House Education Committee and will be introduced onto the floor of the house sometime next week.

THE BILLS passed from committee are House Bill 2116 and House Bill 2350. H.B. 2116 will give a tuition grant to private schools of approximately $60 per elementary student and $90 per high school student.

Mrs. Chapman says this bill would in some cases give more aid to nonpublic than some public schools. Although it would require certification of newly-hired nonpublic school teachers, after two years it sets "no other standard," Mrs. Chapman said.

The second bill, H.B. 2350, would provide a tuition grant to parents of nonpublic school children of $48 for elementary and $60 for high school students — the same as public schools' grants. It would also require schools getting the grants to meet standards set for state accreditation of private schools.

MRS. CHAPMAN contends this bill also does not set stringent enough standards.

The bill voted down in committee, H.B. 46, would give a tuition grant in money to nonpublic schools equivalent to what the student would get if he were attending a public school in the district.

The state aid is determined by the tax base of the district and "two districts side by side of varying financial ability would receive different grants" Mrs. Chapman says. This would cause unequal distribution of money among rich and poor districts, she said.

Mrs. Chapman said these bills could provide "innumerable administrative problems."

She said she favors providing a good framework of aid to private schools before passing out state money.

Trailer for Migrants OK'd

by MARY DRESSER

The Buffalo Grove Village Board reversed its position on migrant housing at the golf course Monday and passed an ordinance allowing installation of a trailer.

Following an appearance by golf course director Don Hannan who pleaded with new board members to understand the course's position, the two new board members, Ed Fabish and Gary Armstrong, voted to allow the trailer.

New board member, Mrs. Beverly Armstrong cast the only dissenting vote. Approval of the controversial ordinance came at 12:35 a.m. following a marathon discussion of garbage collection and an executive session.

MOST OF THE audience had gone home by the time the golf course trailer ordinance came up.

Hannan insisted he needed the trailer on the course to house six migrant workers from Texas and Mexico.

The old board had approved writing a special ordinance tailor-made for the course, to allow low income housing.

Warner, Armstrong, and Fabish joined When the new board was seated, Mrs. Trustee Kenneth Felten in voting down the trailer because they contended it set a precedent. Trustees Robert Gleason and Al Thorud, and Village Pres. Donald Thompson have favored allowing the trailers since the beginning of the hassle.

When Mrs. Warner cast the dissenting vote, a member of the then depleted audience said, "That little woman is the only one to stick to her guns."

DURING THE APRIL campaign Mrs. Warner said she opposed the trailer at the course. Fabish told The Herald at one time trailers would set a dangerous precedent "like a temporary tax." Later he modified his position, saying the trailer he voted against the trailer and Monday night he reversed himself and voted for it.

Before the election, Armstrong opposed the trailer because it set a precedent. He told The Herald in April, "Assume that I have a like need and I go before the board. You better believe that one of the first things I start pointing at is the trailer over there."

Hannan's plea to the board was hard-ship. He said he could find no other place to house his migrant workers and explained he had already purchased the trailer and hooked it up to a septic tank in anticipation of board approval.

A LETTER FROM course owner Harold Friedman to the board said "I have been in the village three years and have made contributions."

During the discussion, Hannan admitted workers have been living in the trailer for a week in violation of the village code.

Hannan contends his migrant workers are not being paid below a minimum wage and that they prefer golf course work to farm work.

He has guaranteed the American consulate in Mexico that he would provide jobs for the Mexican citizens.

"Living facilities are not available for transient workers," he told the board. "I would like to provide what I can as they are good people."

"I THINK IT is an eye sore," Armstrong told Hannan. "We would have to grant other requests if we granted yours."

Hannan said he had searched throughout the northwest suburban area and was unable to find housing for the laborers.

"Is every farm house booked solid for the summer?" Armstrong quipped.

"We're being forced into a position," complained Armstrong, before voting yes.

Study CTA Link

The Council of Governments of Cook County (COG) may pick up Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's idea of tying suburban bus service into the Chicago Transit Authority (CTA).

COG Chairman Jack Pahl, Elk Grove Village president, said he also hopes to pick up Chicago membership in the voluntary association of governments.

Pahl said he discussed the combined bus-mass transit plan with Daley yesterday. The local Mayor said he will set up a meeting with Daley to talk further on the idea of COG assuming the transportation project.

"THIS IS WHAT the council is for, to further inter-governmental cooperation," Pahl said.

Daley's proposal made Monday is to set up a unified metropolitan transit system incorporating suburban bus lines with the CTA.

In the Northwest suburbs, this would tie the United Motor Coach of Des Plaines to the CTA extension in the Kennedy Expressway. An official of United Motor Coach was quoted Monday saying he would be interested in discussing the concept.

Pahl said Daley's proposal involves nine bus companies in the entire county.

Recapping his conversation with Daley, Pahl said they talked about combining bus companies and tying these in with the CTA to provide better transportation service to both city and suburbs.

THE CTA IS extending down both the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways and is seeking the legislature's help in finances. Bills pending in the legislature would allow Cook County to levy a 2-cent gasoline tax to finance its mass transit system.

Suburban bus companies are also expressing concern over lack of revenues and United Motor Coach officials recently mentioned dropping some bus service.

Pahl said COG is particularly suited to bring the transportation plan together as an association of governments representing all areas of Cook County. He cited four existing transportation studies going on from all sides of Cook County and a new one in DuPage County.

The Northwest Municipal Conference recently authorized a mass transit study for its 13 member area communities.

Pahl said the north suburbs have a transportation study group and a transportation committee was recently appointed in the DuPage Mayors and Managers Association, headed by Itasca Pres. Will Nottke.

The south suburbs have a program to issue bonds to buy coaches, then lease them to the Illinois Central Railroad, he said.

Pahl said the council project will be "a very logical tie-in to the Northwest Municipal Conference study."

COG does not have a transportation division as this function had been left up to the Chicago Area Transportation Study (CATS) and Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPCC), Pahl said.

"BUT THERE IS no reason why we can't do this to give the best possible service to the citizens."

Since its beginning in late 1967, COG has hoped to attract Chicago as a council member. Pahl said transportation could be the attraction to join since Chicago is concerned with this and the council could be of help.

The World Just Walks By

(In this second and concluding part of "Divorce Suburban Style," Gerry DeZonna, Paddock staff writer, describes where a suburban mother of five turns when her money runs out as she waits for her divorce to become final.)

For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried.

There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce, he would file a lien against the property,

Divorce Suburban Style

He would be guaranteed his wages once the house was sold. The house would have to be sold within 90 days from the day that the decree was filed, so he said.

She was left in an unfortunate position. There was no money, and there wouldn't be any income until the divorce was settled. She was living in a state in which she had only lived for seven years. She didn't know the procedures as well as for her native state of Wisconsin. Her family still lived in Madison, and she didn't know where to turn or who to go to for help and advice.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW if she should sign the lien, despite the lawyer's asking price. Without the divorce, there would be no money at all. Her financial situation was already at rock bottom. It seemed as though there was no alternative but to sign the lien. She thought that it would be better to be in the frying pan rather than the fire.

But there had to be someone who could

House Approves Con-Con Bill

The Illinois House of Representatives approved a state Constitutional Convention bill Tuesday, but State Rep. Eugene Schlickman's R-Arlington Heights, vote was not with the majority.

Schlickman explained his "no" vote was aimed not at constitutional reform but at "no features of a conference committee report which was, in effect, the bill before the House. One objection was to a provision that will give the north and northwest suburbs four separate elections this fall.

The committee had been charged with compromising both House and Senate Con-Con bills and recommended Tuesday that no other election, referendum or issue be voted on the same day as Con-Con elections.

SCHLICKMAN WAS CONTACTED soon after the 132 to 22 vote on Con-Con was taken. State Rep. Eugene Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted with the committee report.

Also interviewed, Mrs. Chapman said she was "truly proud" of the House action and said she anticipates a "slew" of candidates running for the two delegate positions from the Third District.

The conference committee report setting up machinery for a convention became, in effect, the Con-Con bill the House had to vote on. This report, Schlickman said, was given legislators only that morning.

Though the Con-Con measure passed the House, it must still be approved in the Senate. Con-Con legislation bogged down in the last month when the House and Senate revised differently the original legislation of the Constitutional Study Commission.

When the bills were approved in one House and moved to another, they came back with amendments identical to each other's bill.

Approved Tuesday, the "compromise"

bill calls for a convention convening at noon Dec. 8 in the Illinois House, Springfield. A primary to select four candidates will be Sept. 23 and a run-off election to select two delegates from each Senate district will be Nov. 18.

Schlickman said his second objection to the bill was a requirement for two elections. He said he favored the House's bill that would automatically elect a primary candidate if that candidate gets 40 per cent of the vote.

"MY VOTE AGAINST the conference committee report was for a consolidation of elections and against the number of elections the north and northwest suburbs will have," Schlickman explained.

Two Con-Con and two congressional elections will diminish voter interest in the races and impose an unnecessary burden on citizens of the 13th District, he added.

"My record has been one of long-term support of Con-Con and constitutional reform."

Schlickman is considered a likely candidate for the office of 13th District congressman. The congressional post is expected to be vacated by Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, who is Pres. Richard Nixon's choice for director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

ESP Expert To Appear

Clifford M. Royse Jr., the high priest of extra sensory perception (ESP), will make a one-night stand at Randhurst Saturday beginning at 8 p.m. in the town hall room.

CLIFFORD M. ROYSE

Royse is director of the Chicago Psychic Center, 32 N. State Street. Nationally recognized as an authority on ESP, he is the sixth generation of psychics in his family.

He is known for his world predictions, which are always made at least one year in advance.

SOME OF HIS predictions were that President Johnson would not re-run for office, that Martin Luther King would be assassinated and the circumstances surrounding his death, that Richard Nixon would be the Republican candidate for president and that he would go on to win, and that Charles DeGaulle of France would vacate his office and be succeeded by an even less cooperative world affairs.

Royse contends anyone can develop ESP through proper training, practice and usage.

The lecture slated for Saturday, entitled "You and the World of ESP," will explore what this extra sensory ability is, who has it, how it works and how to develop it.

As proof of his ESP ability, Royse will make a public demonstration at the end of the lecture. Everyone is invited.

To Hire 3 Inspectors

The Buffalo Grove Village Board gave Village Mgr. William Bannister the green light Monday night to hire three more building inspectors.

Bannister was authorized to hire a full-time building commissioner and two building inspectors. Edward Venetianer, part-time Buffalo Grove building commissioner and part-time employee of the federal government, will thus either have to quit his government job and become a full-time commissioner, or abandon the Buffalo Grove post.

Bannister said he will begin advertising immediately for qualified people to fill the three positions, and will conduct personal interviews soon.

"The best people for these positions are carpenters who have come up through the trade and are familiar with the construction business," Bannister said.

Salary for each inspector will be about $650 a month, and the building commissioner will earn $9,000 a year, according to Bannister. Chief duties of the commissioner will be to issue building permits and make sure that buildings in the area comply with local building codes.

Neighbors Like Radar

Communities in the suburban Northwest are reacting generally favorably to Arlington Heights' approval of a purchase of two radar sets for tornado watching.

The two radar sets, to be purchased from United Air Lines for $3,500, may be installed in the village and could provide local radar information for surrounding communities if a tornado hits the area.

Carmen Vineziano, civil defense director for Rolling Meadows, said a joint operation agreement, if approved in the future, would be a "terrific idea." He said he would be willing to look into support for Arlington Heights civil defense director Lt. Jack Benson, who is one of the backers of the project.

Vineziano wondered out loud if matching funds might not be available to help pay for the radar.

LARRY PAIRITZ, director of the Mount Prospect Civil Defense unit, said he thought the decision to purchase small radar units was a "worthwhile experiment," but Mount Prospect has no immediate plans to participate in the program.

Pairitz explained that many CD units rely on the U.S. Weather Bureau and a system of skywatchers who are expected to alert local authorities at the approach of a tornado.

Wheeling Village Pres. Ted Scanlan said he knew nothing of the Arlington Heights plan, but he will look into its feasibility for Wheeling. He added he was more than interested in it. "We would be interested in doing anything to safeguard our citizens."

However, use of the radar will be up to a committee of the Arlington Heights Village Board, which will decide shortly how, if at all, the equipment will be used.

George Burlingame, an Arlington Heights trustee and a pilot for United, was the man who arranged for the purchase of the equipment at a three-fourths reduction in cost. Burlingame learned that United was abandoning its Viscount airliners and much of the equipment in the planes would be sold.

HE INQUIRED IN Washington about Arlington Heights purchasing the equipment. United Air Lines agreed to put aside two sets of radar until May 11.

He then contacted Allen Aircraft Radio, Inc., in Elk Grove Village. The firm told him that it could supply parts and maintenance for the units.

Burlingame then presented his proposal to the village. It took a last-minute agenda supplement to bring the matter up for consideration Monday.

After the approval Monday, Burlingame furnished that the village administration had tried to sidetrack his proposal.

In the meeting, Burlingame presented the proposal while stressing that the village's $50,000 siren system was worthless without a clear-cut immediate storm detection system.

The village receives radar information on storm conditions from a center in Kansas City, Mo., and it receives regional information from various local agencies. However, there is no in-village system that can locate a tornado immediately at close range.

Burlingame said installation would slightly boost the cost of the project, but learning to operate radar was a relatively simple procedure.

VILLAGE PRES. John Walsh said it was "absolutely outside procedures we've followed" to buy the equipment on short notice, but he stressed that questions of use should be resolved at a later session. Finally, the board approved the purchase and agreed with Walsh that the use of the equipment should be considered later. The money for the set comes from the village's contingency fund.

Benson later explained that the radar system was merely one of many kinds of radar in use and that it could eliminate a gap in coverage of possible local tornadoes.

Part of the system considered by Arlington Heights could be mounted on top of the municipal building. A basket-type rotating net would transmit and receive signals.

Signals are sent out from the unit, and when they hit a solid object, they are returned. To spot a tornado, the signals bounce off the dust particles in the tornado.

John Baer, associate editor of Plane and

Emergency Power Plant Is Pondered

The Wheeling Village Board is considering an emergency power system to be installed in the new municipal building.

The proposed system would serve as an emergency auxiliary source in case of power failure.

Three systems are now under study by the board.

ONE SYSTEM, a 30-kilowatt system for use by the police, has no capacity for a larger load. It costs $5,261.60.

A SLIGHTLY larger system, a 37.5-kilowatt generator, at a cost of $9,200, would provide power for the police plus minor other needs.

The largest of the three, a 125-kilowatt system, would provide power not only for the police, but the entire building, at a cost of $21,000.

Pres. Ted C. Scanlan said he would like the board to consider the future needs of the village in making this decision.

Park Pool Passes Are Now on Sale

Season pool passes are now on sale at the Mount Prospect Park District office, 600 See Gwon, Monday through Friday until 5 p.m.

Rates for season passes are as follows: families $18, adults $10 and children 7 years old to 13, $6.50.

FOR NONRESIDENTS the rates are: families, $36, adults, $20 and children $13. Swimming lessons will run eight weeks, from June 30 to Aug. 22. Cost is $2 per child.

Children six or younger will be admitted to the pools free when accompanied by an adult.

Finance Planning Seminar Slated

The Financial Service Corp. of Arlington Heights recently announced that FSC will hold a seminar at the Community Church, 400 N. Elmhurst Road, Prospect Heights, on May 15, at 8 p.m.

"Balanced financial planning" will be the subject of the lecture by Harold A. Hobson Jr., regional vice president of the Crosby Corp.

The public is invited to the seminar, sponsored by FSC, which provides financial planning services.

Pilot Magazine, a periodical for professional and amateur fliers, told the Herald the system would be difficult to use in Arlington Heights alone.

HE SAID THE range of a Bendix radar set is about 100 miles. With tornadoes averaging between 25 and 40 miles per hour in speed, it would be difficult to spot the tornado in time, if observation is limited to the Arlington Heights village limits.

He explained that equipment the village has purchased is regarded as sound in the aviation industry. Weather radar is required in all commercial aircraft, and it is used both for weather observation and landings.

Baer explained that the radar can easily be adapted for ground usage, but a skilled person is needed to interpret data which appears on the radar screens.

Benson said that similar equipment is used by a United Air Lines office in the area, but it does release data on local storms to either public or private agencies. He commented that the problem of liability makes United hesitant to release any information.

Monday night, Arlington Heights Village Atty. Jack Siegel explained that if an agreement should ever be reached between villages for use of the equipment, it would be necessary to include a disclaimer of liability to eliminate a legal danger for Arlington Heights.

However, the use of radar equipment is still in the future. Initially, it will be up to Arlington Heights to determine what to do — if anything — with its new equipment.

Nominating Unit Selects Officers

The nominating committee for the Prospect Heights Improvement Association has selected 12 area residents to be on the slate of officers for the coming year.

Those nominated by the committee include: Ralph Van Petten as president; Richard P. Schulz, vice-president; Mrs. Richard Cooney, secretary; Andy M. Palm, treasurer; Henry G. Zedd, financial secretary.

Man Gets Ticket After Auto Crash

Wheeling police cited Charles Lahoda 1832 S. Elmwood, Berwyn, in a three car accident Saturday on Valley Stream Drive, Wheeling.

A car, driven by Lillian Strzika, 942 Norman, Wheeling, stopped at the corner of Valley Stream Drive and Colonial to make a left turn, while another car, behind her, driven by Paul Schmid, 8048 Ozanam, Niles, also stopped. Lahoda, according to police reports, collided with the Schmid car and the impact caused that car to hit the back end of the car driven by Strzika.

Likes Taba Class

Edward Grodsky, superintendent of schools in Dist. 23, said Monday night he favors the adoption of the contra costa social studies program in the district schools.

The method, developed by the late Hilda Taba of San Francisco State College, is now operating on a pilot basis in grades one through five at John Muir School.

Fred Miller of the Elk Grove Training and Development Center; Carmen DeAngelis, pilot study coordinator for Dist. 23; and Mrs. Mary Hryczuk and Mrs. Helen Armstrong, district teachers, discussed the Taba project at a committee-of-the-whole meeting of the Dist. 23 Board of Education held Monday in MacArthur Junior High School.

Grodsky said he supports a plan under which 20 district teachers would receive formal and individualized in-service training in the Taba method one day a week for 10 months during the next school year.

MILLER WOULD PROVIDE the instruction, working with teachers singly and in pairs during the day conducting large group and team sessions after school for approximately 75 minutes.

In districts familiar with the Taba method personnel would assist Miller, providing abbreviated formal in-service training for 20 teachers in alternate weeks.

Miller estimated it would cost the district $3,755 to implement the plan in grades one through five in the district schools next year. Approximately $2,500 of this amount would pay for Miller's services and the rest would be used for secretarial help and participant and instructional materials.

"As more and more teachers in the district became familiar with the Taba method, I would envision that more of my services could be performed by the people of your district," Miller told board members.

Mrs. Armstrong read a statement from Dist. 23 teachers which recommended the introduction of the Taba method in social studies in grades one through five in the district, provisions for in-service training of teachers in the method and introduction of the Taba method in courses other than social studies.

"THE PORTION OF district teachers who are not in favor of the system is small and the criticisms made have been concerned with means of implementation for the most part, not with the method itself," DeAngelis remarked.

He added that a survey of children in the third, fourth and fifth grades taught by the Taba method revealed that the children were overwhelmingly in favor of this system of instruction.

Under the Taba system, children are given a set of facts about a certain subject and are then encouraged to discover additional facts and concepts through their own exploration. The aim of the method is to teach children to think critically and independently.

Adoption of the Taba method is on the agenda for discussion at the regular Dist. 23 Board of Education meeting May 12.

Village Officials Sworn-In Monday

The newly elected Wheeling Village officials were formally sworn in Monday night at a regular meeting of the board.

After the swearing in of Trustee Roger Stricker, Trustee John Koeppe, Trustee William Hart, Clerk Evelyn Diens, and Village Pres. Ted S. Scanlon, the president addressed the meeting with a few remarks on the future of the village.

SCANLON SAID HE had watched the village grow, attributing the progress to a collective effort by the board and citizens, adding if there were no great gains made, the voters would surely let the electees know.

Scanlon also said he had watched other municipalities grow and adequately handle their problems, and urged the new board to become more responsive to the needs, present and future, of the village.

Meeting Is Called to Discuss Relocation of Road

Residents and officials from three counties will gather tomorrow in Schaumburg with state highway officials to give their views on the proposed relocation of Irving Park Road (Route 19), now called the Elgin-O'Hare Expressway.

The public hearing starts at 2 p.m. in Schaumburg's Great Hall.

The proposed relocation between Elgin on the west and Route 83 on the east will specifically affect Bensenville, Wood Dale, Itasca and Roselle in DuPage County; Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Hanover Park and Bartlett in Cook County; and Elgin in Kane County.

This portion of the relocation of the expressway will be handled by the Dist. 1 Elgin state highway office. East of Route 83 will be handled by the Chicago Dist. 10 office.

HENRY YAMANAKA of the Dist. 10 office said plans for rerouting Illinois 19 from Illinois 83 east to Mannheim Road have not been completed.

"We hope to have something under way in the near future," he said, adding that a public hearing may be held in July.

The proposed expressway starts at the Elgin bypass and follows a southeasterly path parallel to the Milwaukee Road Ry lines, then goes northeasterly through Bartlett, extending easterly through the Rinne property in Hanover Park, through the Milwaukee Road industrial park in Schaumburg, south of Nerge Road through Roselle to Interstate 90 and then follows

Thorndale Road through the Wood Dale Moody Airport and ends at Route 83.

The expressway will have limited access, but frontage roads will be included on both sides.

The Dist. 1 office hopes to use a common corridor through DuPage County on which Commonwealth Edison has the property right-of-way options. This would locate the road and power lines through a common corridor.

INTERCHANGES for the expressway would come at Route 63, Wood Dale Road, Prospect Avenue, Arlington Heights Road, I-90, Meacham-Medinah Road, Roselle Road, Springinguth Road, Barrington Road, Bartlett Road and Route 59.

Present Irving Park Road would be turned over to local communities when the new expressway is completed.

The state has not given a timetable on beginning the relocation. Funds will have to come from the state legislature and none will be allocated sooner than July. The relocation could be many years away.

The state highway department wants to map out the route for the relocation now so rights of way may be purchased and communities will steer development away from the freeway.

Communities supporting the preferred relocation include Schaumburg and Elk Grove Village.

HANOVER PARK Mayor Richard Baker definitely plans to seek a different rerouting through that community. Hanover Park residents feel the preferred route will cut off village expansion to the south.

Baker plans to ask the highway department to locate the road further south of Hanover Park and Bartlett.

Superior Is Low

Superior Concrete Construction Co., Chicago, was the apparent low bidder yesterday on two Interstate-90 projects in DuPage and Cook counties.

The awarding of contracts is indefinite, pending Illinois House committee action on a $118 million emergency highway appropriation.

Bids on the projects were opened in the Chicago office of the Illinois Division of Highways.

Projects to be awarded include:

—A bridge over Golf Road in Cook County.

—A grade separation and structure taking I-90 over relocated Wood Dale Road; a bridge taking relocated Wood Dale Road and Lake Street over Salt Creek and 54 miles of concrete paving on Wood Dale Road, all in DuPage County.

Superior Concrete Construction Co. bid $1,130,511.55 for the bridge over Golf Road. It was the lowest of seven bids.

Superior bid $1,275,597.99 for the DuPage County project, the lowest of 10 bids.

BIDS WERE NOT opened, as had been expected, for a $12 million interchange with Illinois 83, U.S. Route 20, and Interstate 90.

Also, bids were not opened for construction of I-90 from Golf Road to Schaumburg Road.

Another bid letting is scheduled for May 23 on other I-90 projects.

A. C. Braming, assistant Dist. 10 highway engineer in charge of engineering, said that, ordinarily, contracts are awarded within two weeks of bid opening.

However, these contracts awards are awaiting emergency appropriation in the Illinois House, he said.

Braming added that 62 jobs from an

April 11 bid opening have not been awarded yet, also because of funding.

"THE ILLINOIS Division of Highways is seeking a $125 million emergency appropriation. It passed the House committee once but was cut down in the Senate to $118 million.

Braming indicated he expects the emergency appropriation to pass but cannot award contracts until it has.

The legislature appropriates a certain amount of money each year for highways.

In other I-90 related business, a public hearing is scheduled for Friday to consider the proposed closing of portions of 29 streets in Addison and Bloomingdale townships in DuPage County.

The hearing will be held at 10 a.m. in the Addison Village Hall.

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Apollo 8 astronaut Frank Borman who commanded mankind's first trip around the moon, has resigned from the astronaut corps.

Borman will accept a post in the space agency's program to develop orbiting space stations. His resignation leaves the space agency with 30 astronauts.

Food for Hungry

WASHINGTON — President Nixon, declaring that hunger in America is "embarrassing and intolerable," asked Congress Tuesday to make food available free to the nation's poorest and to nearly double spending on food stamps for the hungry.

Under the proposal, families with an income of about $30 a month would receive food stamps at no cost. Families with incomes of about $4,000 a year would receive stamps for no more than 30 per cent of their income.

No-Confidence Vote

LONDON — Dissident Labor members of Parliament circulated a motion yesterday calling for a vote of no-confidence in Prime Minister Harold Wilson, after voters dealt the Labor party another setback in local elections.

The opposition Conservative party gained 34 local council seats after the first day's polling in the week-long local elections.

Court-Martial Out

WASHINGTON — A court of inquiry recommended that Cmdr. Lloyd Bucher be court-martialed for the loss of the intelligence ship Pueblo, but the civilian Navy Secretary yesterday ruled out punishment of Bucher or any of his crew because "they have suffered enough."

At a news conference after Navy Secretary John H. Chaffee overruled the five-admiral board and decreed that there would be no discipline of Bucher or his crew, E. Miles Harvey, Bucher's lawyer, said, "As far as we're concerned, Commander Bucher has been cleared."

Real Bargaining Seen

PARIS — A tacit agreement among the Vietnam peace negotiators in Paris to stop threatening each other gave impetus Tuesday to reports that the conference is inching toward real bargaining.

Careful analysis of statements made by Allied and Communist negotiators showed a de-escalation of verbal attacks and threats routinely made in the initial stages of the conference. This change in tone, noted by diplomats on both sides, coincided with mounting reports in diplomatic circles in Paris that delegates were slowly moving toward a breakthrough.

Tiny Army Increases

VATICAN CITY — Twenty-four recruits were sworn in yesterday for two-year hitch in the world's smallest, most old-fashioned and most photographed army — the Pope's 75-man-strong Swiss Guards.

The recruits took their oath of duty in a steady rainfall in the Belvedere Courtyard of the Vatican, dressed in the billowy yellow, orange, and blue uniforms the artist Michelangelo designed for them four centuries ago.

Marchers See Aid OK'd

SPRINGFIELD — About 200 chanting welfare recipients marched 12 blocks from a tent village to the statehouse yesterday where they watched the House Public Welfare Committee approve bills to increase public aid payments and benefits by a 14 to 4 vote.

Deny Soliciting

by DAN JOHN

A little dust was raised in the Wheeling Herald offices Tuesday, resulting from Monday's article concerning a group of Jehovah's Witnesses, in the Wheeling police station.

The group went to the police station Sunday to clarify, with the police, their position in regard to a village ordinance banning solicitations.

At that time they quoted U.S. Supreme Court and State Supreme Court rulings exempting Jehovah's Witnesses from any form of solicitation bans, explaining the position generally held by the faith, that Witnesses do not sell, anything but preach their faith door-to-door.

James L. Staelens Sr., a representative of the Northbrook congregation, reiterated this position in the Herald offices, adding that he felt the tone of the article was detrimental to the image of the faith.

HIS EXPLANATION of the events was this: An officer stopped a man who had two children with him. The officer asked if they were soliciting. He was told yes, then after a minute, was told no, the man pointing out he was a minister in the faith.

This is a correction of part of the Herald article Monday stating "asked if he was soliciting, the man answered no, at first, then said yes, pointing out he was a minister in the faith."

Then, according to Staelens, the officer became "belligerent." Chief M. O. Horcher told the Herald Tuesday the officer simply made them aware of the solicitation ban. Then the minister asked to come to the station to have the matter clarified.

STAELENS SAID he had had a "long conversation" with Horcher Monday, mentioning that Horcher said the officer would be reprimanded.

Horcher told the Herald Tuesday there would be no action taken against the officer. He added, "The officer was only doing his duty in making them aware that if they were soliciting, they would have to stop."

The nub of the incident is the Wheeling village ordinance prohibiting solicitations. This is being decided in the Illinois Appellate Court.

The Jehovah's Witnesses' contention is they are covered under Supreme Court rulings, specifically mentioning them, as not solicitors, but as a religious group entitled to rights of speech and freedom of religion.

Chief Horcher said whether they come under this contested ordinance or not is to be decided upon after the Appellate Court resolves the case.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted "No" in committee on all three aid to nonpublic school bills now before the state legislature.

Mrs. Chapman told The Herald Tuesday that after much soul-searching, she voted against the bills because they did not provide tight enough state standards to control the caliber of education in the nonpublic schools.

"We would be encouraging schools offering inadequate programs," Mrs. Chapman said. She said she did not anticipate flack from her parochial-school oriented constituents provided she could get the reason for her vote across to them.

Two of the three bills received a "Do Pass" from the House Education Committee and will be introduced onto the floor of the house sometime next week.

THE BILLS passed from committee are House Bill 2116 and House Bill 2350. H.B. 2116 will give a tuition grant to private schools of approximately $60 per elementary student and $90 per high school student.

Mrs. Chapman says this bill would in some cases give more aid to nonpublic than some public schools. Although it would require certification of newly-hired nonpublic school teachers, after two years it sets "no other standard," Mrs. Chapman said.

The second bill, H.B. 2350, would provide a tuition grant to parents of nonpublic school children of $48 for elementary and $60 for high school students — the same as public schools' grants. It would also require schools getting the grants to meet standards set for state accreditation of private schools.

MRS. CHAPMAN contends this bill also does not set stringent enough standards.

The bill voted down in committee, H.B. 46, would give a tuition grant in money to nonpublic schools equivalent to what the student would get if he were attending a public school in the district.

The state aid is determined by the tax base of the district and "two districts side by side of varying financial ability would receive different grants" Mrs. Chapman says. This would cause unequal distribution of money among rich and poor districts, she said.

Mrs. Chapman said these bills could provide "innumerable administrative problems."

She said she favors providing a good framework of aid to private schools before passing out state money.

Trailer for Migrants OK'd

by MARY DRESSER

The Buffalo Grove Village Board reversed its position on migrant housing at the golf course Monday and passed an ordinance allowing installation of a trailer.

Following an appearance by golf course director Don Hannan who pleaded with new board members to understand the course's position, the two new board members, Ed Fabish and Gary Armstrong, voted to allow the trailer.

New board member, Mrs. Beverly Armstrong cast the only dissenting vote. Approval of the controversial ordinance came at 12:35 a.m. following a marathon discussion of garbage collection and an executive session.

MOST OF THE audience had gone home by the time the golf course trailer ordinance came up.

Hannan insisted he needed the trailer on the course to house six migrant workers from Texas and Mexico.

The old board had approved writing a special ordinance tailor-made for the course, to allow low income housing.

Warner, Armstrong, and Fabish joined When the new board was seated, Mrs. Trustee Kenneth Felten in voting down the trailer because they contended it set a precedent. Trustees Robert Gleason and Al Thorud, and Village Pres. Donald Thompson have favored allowing the trailers since the beginning of the hassel.

When Mrs. Warner cast the dissenting vote, a member of the then depleted audience said, "That little woman is the only one to stick to her guns."

DURING THE APRIL campaign Mrs. Warner said she opposed the trailer at the course. Fabish told The Herald at one time trailers would set a dangerous precedent "like a temporary tax." Later he modified his position, saying the trailer could be tried out for a year. On April 28 he voted against the trailer and Monday night he reversed himself and voted for it.

Before the election, Armstrong opposed the trailer because it set a precedent. He told The Herald in April, "Assume that I have a like need and I go before the board. You better believe that one of the first things I start pointing at is the trailer over there."

Hannan's plea to the board was hardship. He said he could find no other place to house his migrant workers and explained he had already purchased the trailer and hooked it up to a septic tank in anticipation of board approval.

A LETTER FROM course owner Harold Friedman to the board said "I have been in the village three years and have made contributions."

During the discussion, Hannan admitted workers have been living in the trailer for a week in violation of the village code.

Hannan contends his migrant workers are not being paid below a minimum wage and that they prefer golf course work to farm work.

He has guaranteed the American consulate in Mexico that he would provide jobs for the Mexican citizens.

"Living facilities are not available for transient workers," he told the board. "I would like to provide what I can as they are good people."

"I THINK IT is an eye sore," Armstrong told Hannan. "We would have to grant other requests if we granted yours."

Hannan said he had searched throughout the northwest suburban area and was unable to find housing for the laborers.

"Is every farm house booked solid for the summer?" Armstrong quipped.

"We're being forced into a position," complained Armstrong, before voting yes.

Study CTA Link

The Council of Governments of Cook County (COG) may pick up Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's idea of tying suburban bus service into the Chicago Transit Authority (CTA).

COG Chairman Jack Pahl, Elk Grove Village president, said he also hopes to pick up Chicago membership in the voluntary association of governments.

Pahl said he discussed the combined bus-mass transit plan with Daley yesterday. The local Mayor said he will set up a meeting with Daley to talk further on the idea of COG assuming the transportation project.

"THIS IS WHAT the council is for, to further inter-governmental cooperation," Pahl said.

Daley's proposal made Monday is to set up a unified metropolitan transit system incorporating suburban bus lines with the CTA.

In the Northwest suburbs, this would tie the United Motor Coach of Des Plaines to the CTA extension in the Kennedy Expressway. An official of United Motor Coach was quoted Monday saying he would be interested in discussing the concept.

Pahl said Daley's proposal involves nine bus companies in the entire county.

Recapping his conversation with Daley, Pahl said they talked about combining bus companies and tying these in with the CTA to provide better transportation service to both city and suburbs.

THE CTA IS extending down both the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways and is seeking the legislature's help in finances. Bills pending in the legislature would allow Cook County to levy a 2-cent gasoline tax to finance its mass transit system.

Suburban bus companies are also expressing concern over lack of revenues and United Motor Coach officials recently mentioned dropping some bus service.

Pahl said COG is particularly suited to bring the transportation plan together as an association of governments representing all areas of Cook County. He cited four existing transportation studies going on from all sides of Cook County and a new one in DuPage County.

The Northwest Municipal Conference recently authorized a mass transit study for its 13 member area communities.

Pahl said the north suburbs have a transportation study group and a transportation committee was recently appointed in the DuPage Mayors and Managers Association, headed by Itasca Pres. Will Notke.

The south suburbs have a program to issue bonds to buy coaches, then lease them to the Illinois Central Railroad, he said.

Pahl said the council project will be "a very logical tie-in to the Northwest Municipal Conference study."

COG does not have a transportation division as this function had been left up to the Chicago Area Transportation Study (CATS) and Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPPC), Pahl said.

"BUT THERE IS no reason why we can't do this to give the best possible service to the citizens."

Since its beginning in late 1967, COG has hoped to attract Chicago as a council member. Pahl said transportation could be the attraction to join since Chicago is concerned with this and the council could be of help.

The World Just Walks By

by GERRY DeZONNA

(In this second and concluding part of "Divorce Suburban Style," Gerry DeZonna, Paddock staff writer, describes where a suburban mother of five turns when her money runs out as she waits for her divorce to become final.)

For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried.

There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce, he would file a lien against the property.

Divorce Suburban Style

He would be guaranteed his wages once the house was sold. The house would have to be sold within 90 days from the day that the decree was filed, so he said.

She was left in an unfortunate position. There was no money, and there wouldn't be any income until the divorce was settled. She was living in a state in which she had only lived for seven years. She didn't know the procedures as well as for her native state of Wisconsin. Her family still lived in Madison, and she didn't know where to turn or who to go to for help and advice.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW if she should sign the lien, despite the lawyer's asking price. Without the divorce, there would be no money at all. Her financial situation was already at rock bottom. It seemed as though there was no alternative but to sign the lien. She thought that it would be better to be in the frying pan rather than the fire.

But there had to be someone who could

House Approves Con-Con Bill

The Illinois House of Representatives approved a state Constitutional Convention bill Tuesday, but State Rep. Eugene Schlickman's R-Arlington Heights vote was not with the majority.

Schlickman explained his "no" vote was aimed not at constitutional reform but at two features of a conference committee report which was, in effect, the bill before the House. One objection was to a provision that will give the north and northwest suburbs four separate elections this fall.

The committee had been charged with compromising both House and Senate Con-Con bills and recommended Tuesday that no other election, referendum or issue be voted on the same day as Con-Con elections.

SCHLICKMAN WAS CONTACTED soon after the 112 to 22 vote on Con-Con was taken. State Rep. Eugene Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted with the committee report.

Also interviewed, Mrs. Chapman said she was "truly proud" of the House action and said she anticipates a "slew" of candidates running for the two delegate positions from the Third District.

The conference committee report setting up machinery for a convention became, in effect, the Con-Con bill the House had to vote on. This report, Schlickman said, was given legislators only that morning.

Though the Con-Con measure passed the House, it must still be approved in the Senate. Con-Con legislation bogged down in the last month when the House and Senate revised differently the original legislation of the Constitutional Study Commission.

When the bills were approved in one house and moved to another, they came back with amendments identical to each other's bill.

Approved Tuesday, the "compromise"

bill calls for a convention convening at noon Dec. 8 in the Illinois House. Springfield A primary to select four candidates will be Sept. 23 and a run-off election to select two delegates from each Senate district will be Nov. 18.

Schlickman said his second objection to the bill was a requirement for two elections. He said he favored the House's bill that would automatically elect a primary candidate if that candidate gets 40 per cent of the vote.

"MY VOTE AGAINST the conference committee report was for a consolidation of elections and against the number of elections the north and northwest suburbs will have," Schlickman explained.

Two Con-Con and two congressional elections will diminish voter interest in the races and impose an unnecessary burden on citizens of the 13th District, he added.

"My record has been one of long-term support of Con-Con and constitutional reform."

Schlickman is considered a likely candidate for the office of 13th District congressman. The congressional post is expected to be vacated by Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, who is Pres. Richard Nixon's choice for director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

ESP Expert To Appear

Clifford M. Royse, Jr., the high priest of extra sensory perception (ESP), will make a one-night stand at Randhurst Saturday beginning at 8 p.m. in the town hall room.

CLIFFORD M. ROYSE

Royse is director of the Chicago Psychic Center, 32 N. State Street.

Nationally recognized as an authority on ESP, he is the sixth generation of psychics in his family.

He is known for his world predictions, which are always made at least one year in advance.

SOME OF HIS predictions were that President Johnson would not re-run for office, that Martin Luther King would be assassinated and the circumstances surrounding his death, that Richard Nixon would be the Republican candidate for president and that he would go on to win, and that Charles DeGaulle of France would vacate his office and be succeeded by one even less cooperative in world affairs.

Royse contends anyone can develop ESP through proper training, practice and usage.

The lecture slated for Saturday, entitled "You and the World of ESP," will explore what this extra sensory ability is, who has it, how it works and how to develop it.

As proof of his ESP ability, Royse will make a public demonstration at the end of the lecture. Everyone is invited.

To Hire 3 Inspectors

The Buffalo Grove Village Board gave Village Mgr. William Bannister the green light Monday night to hire three more building inspectors.

Bannister was authorized to hire a full-time building commissioner and two building inspectors. Edward Venetianer, part-time Buffalo Grove building commissioner and part-time employee of the federal government, will thus either have to quit his government job and become a full-time commissioner, or abandon the Buffalo Grove post.

Bannister said he will begin advertising immediately for qualified people to fill the three positions, and will conduct personal interviews soon.

"The best people for these positions are carpenters who have come up through the trade and are familiar with the construction business," Bannister said.

Salary for each inspector will be about $650 a month, and the building commissioner will earn $9,000 a year, according to Bannister. Chief duties of the commissioner will be to issue building permits and make sure that buildings in the area comply with local building codes.

Neighbors Like Radar

Communities in the suburban Northwest are reacting generally favorably to Arlington Heights' approval of a purchase of two radar sets for tornado watching.

The two radar sets, to be purchased from United Air Lines for $3,500, may be installed in the village and could provide local radar information for surrounding communities if a tornado hits the area.

Carmen Vinezano, civil defense director for Rolling Meadows, said a joint operation agreement, if approved in the future, would be a "terrific idea." He said he would be willing to look into support for Arlington Heights civil defense director Lt. Jack Benson, who is one of the backers of the project.

Vinezano wondered out loud if matching funds might not be available to help pay for the radar.

LARRY PAIRITZ, director of the Mount Prospect Civil Defense unit, said he thought the decision to purchase small radar units was a "worthwhile experiment," but Mount Prospect has no immediate plans to participate in the program.

Pairitz explained that many CD units rely on the U.S. Weather Bureau and a system of skywatchers who are expected to alert local authorities at the approach of a tornado.

Wheeling Village Pres. Ted Scanlan said he knew nothing of the Arlington Heights plan, but he will look into its feasibility for Wheeling. He added he was more than interested in it. "We would be interested in doing anything to safeguard our citizens."

However, use of the radar will be up to a committee of the Arlington Heights Village Board, which will decide shortly how, if at all, the equipment will be used.

George Burlingame, an Arlington Heights trustee and a pilot for United, was the man who arranged for the purchase of the equipment at a three-fourths reduction in cost. Burlingame learned that United was abandoning its Viscount airliners and much of the equipment in the planes would be sold.

HE INQUIRED IN Washington about Arlington Heights purchasing the equipment. United Air Lines agreed to put aside two sets of radar until May 11.

He then contacted Allen Aircraft Radio, Inc., in Elk Grove Village. The firm told him that it could supply parts and maintenance for the units.

Burlingame then presented his proposal to the village. It took a last-minute agenda supplement to bring the matter up for consideration Monday.

After the approval Monday, Burlingame fumed that the village administration had tried to sidetrack his proposal.

In the meeting, Burlingame presented the proposal while stressing that the village's $50,000 siren system was worthless without a clear-cut immediate storm detection system.

The village receives radar information on storm conditions from a center in Kansas City, Mo., and it receives regional information from various local agencies. However, there is no in-village system that can locate a tornado immediately at close range.

Burlingame said installation would slightly boost the cost of the project, but learning to operate radar was a relatively simple procedure.

VILLAGE PRES. John Walsh said it was "absolutely outside procedures we've followed" to buy the equipment on short notice, but he stressed that questions of use should be resolved at a later session.

Finally, the board approved the purchase and agreed with Walsh that the use of the equipment should be considered later. The money for the set comes from the village's contingency fund.

Benson later explained that the radar system was merely one of many kinds of radar in use and that it could eliminate a gap in coverage of possible local tornadoes.

Part of the system considered by Arlington Heights could be mounted on top of the municipal building. A basket-type rotating net would transmit and receive signals.

Signals are sent out from the unit, and when they hit a solid object, they are returned. To spot a tornado, the signals bounce off the dust particles in the tornado.

John Baer, associate editor of Plane and

Pilot Magazine, a periodical for professional and amateur fliers, told the Herald the system would be difficult to use in Arlington Heights alone.

HE SAID THE range of a Bendix radar set is about 100 miles. With tornadoes averaging between 25 and 40 miles per hour in speed, it would be difficult to spot the tornado in time, if observation is limited to the Arlington Heights village limits.

He explained that equipment the village has purchased is regarded as sound in the aviation industry. Weather radar is required in all commercial aircraft, and it is used both for weather observation and landings.

Baer explained that the radar can easily be adapted for ground usage, but a skilled person is needed to interpret data which appears on the radar screens.

Benson said that similar equipment is used by a United Air Lines office in the area, but it does release data on local storms to either public or private agencies. He commented that the problem of liability makes United hesitant to release any information.

Monday night, Arlington Heights Village Atty. Jack Siegel explained that if an agreement should ever be reached between villages for use of the equipment, it would be necessary to include a disclaimer of liability to eliminate a legal danger for Arlington Heights.

However, the use of radar equipment is still in the future. Initially, it will be up to Arlington Heights to determine what to do — if anything — with its new equipment.

Man Gets Ticket After Auto Crash

Wheeling police cited Charles Lahoda 1832 S. Elmwood, Berwyn, in a three car accident Saturday on Valley Stream Drive, Wheeling.

A car, driven by Lillian Strzka, 942 Norman, Wheeling, stopped at the corner of Valley Stream Drive and Colonial to make a left turn, while another car, behind her, driven by Paul Schmid, 8048 Ozanam, Niles, also stopped. Lahoda, according to police reports, collided with the Schmid car and the impact caused that car to hit the back end of the car driven by Strzka.

Winning pictures, as well as other entries, are on display in the children's section of the Wheeling Public Library, 24 S. Milwaukee Ave., Wheeling.

Emergency Power Plant Is Pondered

The Wheeling Village Board is considering an emergency power system to be installed in the new municipal building.

The proposed system would serve as an emergency auxiliary source in case of power failure.

Three systems are now under study by the board.

ONE SYSTEM, a 30-kilowatt system for use by the police, has no capacity for a larger load. It costs $5,261.60.

A SLIGHTLY larger system, a 37.5-kilowatt generator, at a cost of $9,200, would provide power for the police plus minor other needs.

The largest of the three, a 125-kilowatt system, would provide power not only for the police, but the entire building, at a cost of $21,000.

Pres. Ted C. Scanlan said he would like the board to consider the future needs of the village in making this decision.

Frank Borman Resigns

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Apollo 8 astronaut Frank Borman who commanded mankind's first trip around the moon, has resigned from the astronaut corps.

Borman will accept a post in the space agency's program to develop orbiting space stations. His resignation leaves the space agency with 50 astronauts.

Food for Hungry

WASHINGTON — President Nixon, declaring that hunger in America is "embarrassing and intolerable," asked Congress Tuesday to make food available free to the nation's poorest and to nearly double spending on food stamps for the hungry.

Under the proposal, families with an income of about $30 a month would receive food stamps at no cost. Families with incomes of about $4,000 a year would receive stamps for no more than 30 per cent of their income.

No-Confidence Vote

LONDON — Dissident Labor members of Parliament circulated a motion yesterday calling for a vote of no-confidence in Prime Minister Harold Wilson, after voters dealt the Labor party another setback in local elections.

The opposition Conservative party gained 34 local council seats after the first day's polling in the week-long local elections.

Court-Martial Out

WASHINGTON — A court of inquiry recommended that Cmdr Lloyd Bucher be court-martialed for the loss of the intelligence ship Pueblo, but the civilian Navy Secretary yesterday ruled out punishment of Bucher or any of his crew because "they have suffered enough."

At a news conference after Navy Secretary John H. Chaffee overruled the five-admiral board and decreed that there would be no discipline of Bucher or his crew E. Miles Harvey Bucher's lawyer, said, "As far as we're concerned, Commander Bucher has been cleared."

Real Bargaining Seen

PARIS — A tacit agreement among the Vietnam peace negotiators in Paris to stop threatening each other gave impetus Tuesday to reports that the conference is inching toward real bargaining.

Careful analysis of statements made by Allied and Communist negotiators showed a de-escalation of verbal attacks and threats routinely made in the initial stages of the conference. This change in tone, noted by diplomats on both sides, coincided with mounting reports in diplomatic circles in Paris that delegates were slowly moving toward a breakthrough.

Tiny Army Increases

VATICAN CITY — Twenty-four recruits were sworn in yesterday for two-year hitch in the world's smallest, most old-fashioned and most photographed army — the Pope's 75-man-strong Swiss Guards.

The recruits took their oath of duty in a steady rainfall in the Belvedere Courtyard of the Vatican, dressed in the billowy yellow, orange, and blue uniforms the artist Michelangelo designed for them four centuries ago.

Marchers See Aid OK'd

SPRINGFIELD — About 200 chanting welfare recipients marched 12 blocks from a tent village to the statehouse yesterday where they watched the House Public Welfare Committee approve bills to increase public aid payments and benefits by a 14 to 4 vote.

Against Parochial Aid

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted "No" in committee on all three aid to nonpublic school bills now before the state legislature.

Mrs. Chapman told The Herald Tuesday that after much soul-searching, she voted against the bills because they did not provide tight enough state standards to control the caliber of education in the nonpublic schools.

"We would be encouraging schools offering inadequate programs," Mrs. Chapman said. She said she did not anticipate flack from her parochial-school oriented constituents provided she could get the reason for her vote across to them.

Two of the three bills received a "Do Pass" from the House Education Committee and will be introduced onto the floor of the house sometime next week.

THE BILLS passed from committee are House Bill 2116 and House Bill 2350. H.B. 2116 will give a tuition grant to private schools of approximately $60 per elementary student and $90 per high school student.

Mrs. Chapman says this bill would in some cases give more aid to nonpublic than some public schools. Although it would require certification of newly-hired nonpublic school teachers, after two years it sets "no other standard," Mrs. Chapman said.

The second bill, H.B. 2350, would provide a tuition grant to parents of nonpublic school children of $48 for elementary and $60 for high school students — the same as public schools' grants. It would also require schools getting the grants to meet standards set for state accreditation of private schools.

MRS. CHAPMAN contends this bill also does not set stringent enough standards.

The bill voted down in committee, H.B. 46, would give a tuition grant in money to nonpublic schools equivalent to what the student would get if he were attending a public school in the district.

The state aid is determined by the tax base of the district and "two districts side by side of varying financial ability would receive different grants" Mrs. Chapman says. This would cause unequal distribution of money among rich and poor districts, she said.

Mrs. Chapman said these bills could provide "innumerable administrative problems."

She said she favors providing a good framework of aid to private schools before passing out state money.

Trailer for Migrants OK'd

by MARY DRESSER

The Buffalo Grove Village Board reversed its position on migrant housing at the golf course Monday and passed an ordinance allowing installation of a trailer.

Following an appearance by golf course director Don Hannan who pleaded with new board members to understand the course's position, the two new board members, Ed Fabish and Gary Armstrong, voted to allow the trailer.

New board member, Mrs. Beverly Armstrong cast the only dissenting vote. Approval of the controversial ordinance came at 12:35 a.m. following a marathon discussion of garbage collection and an executive session.

MOST OF THE audience had gone home by the time the golf course trailer ordinance came up.

Hannan insisted he needed the trailer on the course to house six migrant workers from Texas and Mexico.

The old board had approved writing a special ordinance tailor-made for the course, to allow low income housing. Warner, Armstrong, and Fabish joined. When the new board was seated, Mrs. Trustee Kenneth Felten in voting down the trailer because they contended it set a precedent. Trustees Robert Gleeson and Al Thorud, and Village Pres. Donald Thompson have favored allowing the trailers since the beginning of the hassle.

When Mrs. Warner cast the dissenting vote, a member of the then depleted audience said, "That little woman is the only one to stick to her guns."

DURING THE APRIL campaign Mrs. Warner said she opposed the trailer at the course. Fabish told The Herald at one time trailers would set a dangerous precedent "like a temporary tax." Later he modified his position, saying the trailer could be tried out for a year. On April 28 he voted against the trailer and Monday night he reversed himself and voted for it. Before the election, Armstrong opposed the trailer because it set a precedent. He told The Herald in April, "Assume that I have a like need and I go before the board. You better believe that one of the first things I start pointing at is the trailer over there."

Hannan's plea to the board was hard-ship. He said he could find no other place to house his migrant workers and explained he had already purchased the trailer and hooked it up to a septic tank in anticipation of board approval.

A LETTER FROM course owner Harold Friedman to the board said "I have been in the village three years and have made contributions."

During the discussion, Hannan admitted workers have been living in the trailer for a week in violation of the village code.

Hannan contends his migrant workers are not being paid below a minimum wage and that they prefer golf course work to farm work.

He has guaranteed the American consulate in Mexico that he would provide jobs for the Mexican citizens.

"Living facilities are not available for transient workers," he told the board. "I would like to provide what I can as they are good people."

"I THINK it is an eye sore," Armstrong told Hannan. "We would have to grant other requests if we granted yours."

Hannan said he had searched throughout the northwest suburban area and was unable to find housing for the laborers.

"Is every farm house booked solid for the summer?" Armstrong quipped.

"We're being forced into a position," complained Armstrong, before voting yes.

Study CTA Link

The Council of Governments of Cook County (COG) may pick up Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's idea of tying suburban bus service into the Chicago Transit Authority (CTA).

COG Chairman Jack Pahl, Elk Grove Village president, said he also hopes to pick up Chicago membership in the voluntary association of governments.

Pahl said he discussed the combined bus-mass transit plan with Daley yesterday. The local Mayor said he will set up a meeting with Daley to talk further on the idea of COG assuming the transportation project.

"THIS IS WHAT the council is for, to further inter-governmental cooperation," Pahl said.

Daley's proposal made Monday is to set up a unified metropolitan transit system incorporating suburban bus lines with the CTA.

In the Northwest suburbs, this would tie the United Motor Coach of Des Plaines to the CTA extension in the Kennedy Expressway. An official of United Motor Coach was quoted Monday saying he would be interested in discussing the concept.

Pahl said Daley's proposal involves nine bus companies in the entire county.

Recapping his conversation with Daley, Pahl said he talked about combining bus companies and tying these in with the CTA to provide better transportation service to both city and suburbs.

THE CTA IS extending down both the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways and is seeking the legislature's help in finances. Bills pending in the legislature would allow Cook County to levy a 2-cent gasoline tax to finance its mass transit system.

Suburban bus companies are also expressing concern over lack of revenues and United Motor Coach officials recently mentioned dropping some bus service.

Pahl said COG is particularly suited to bring the transportation plan together as an association of governments representing all areas of Cook County. He cited four existing transportation studies going on from all sides of Cook County and a new one in DuPage County.

The Northwest Municipal Conference recently authorized a mass transit study for its 13 member area communities.

Pahl said the north suburbs have a transportation study group and a transportation committee was recently appointed in the DuPage Mayors and Managers Association, headed by Itasca Pres. Will Nottke.

The south suburbs have a program to issue bonds to buy coaches, then lease them to the Illinois Central Railroad, he said.

Pahl said the council project will be "a very logical tie-in to the Northwest Municipal Conference study."

COG does not have a transportation division as this function had been left up to the Chicago Area Transportation Study (CATS) and Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC), Pahl said.

"BUT THERE IS no reason why we can't do this to give the best possible service to the citizens."

Since its beginning in late 1967, COG has hoped to attract Chicago as a council member. Pahl said transportation could be the attraction to join since Chicago is concerned with this and the council could be of help.

REHEARSING FOR "Three on the Town," the fourth annual variety show at Jack London Junior High School, are Carl Wagner, top, and Bonnie Dechambre. The 4-act musical will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, in the Jack London gymnasium. Tickets $1 for adults and 50 cents for students and may be purchased at the door.

Deny Soliciting

by DAN JOHN

A little dust was raised in the Wheeling Herald offices Tuesday, resulting from Monday's article concerning a group of Jehovah's Witnesses, in the Wheeling police station.

The group went to the police station Sunday to clarify, with the police, their position in regard to a village ordinance banning solicitations.

At that time they quoted U.S. Supreme Court and State Supreme Court rulings exempting Jehovah's Witnesses from any form of solicitation bans, explaining the position generally held by the faith, that Witnesses do not sell, anything but preach their faith door-to-door.

James L. Staelens Sr., a representative of the Northbrook congregation, reiterated this position in the Herald offices, adding that he felt the tone of the article was detrimental to the image of the faith.

HIS EXPLANATION of the events was this: An officer stopped a man who had two children with him. The officer asked if they were soliciting. He was told yes, then after a minute, was told no, the man pointing out he was a minister in the faith.

This is a correction of part of the Herald article Monday stating "asked if he was soliciting, the man answered no, at first, then said yes, pointing out he was a minister in the faith."

Then, according to Staelens, the officer became "belligerent." Chief M. O. Horcher told the Herald Tuesday the officer simply made them aware of the solicitation ban. Then the minister asked to come to the station to have the matter clarified.

STAELENS SAID he had had a "long conversation" with Horcher Monday, mentioning that Horcher said the officer would be reprimanded.

Horcher told the Herald Tuesday there would be no action taken against the officer. He added, "The officer was only doing his duty in making them aware that if they were soliciting, they would have to stop."

The nub of the incident is the Wheeling village ordinance prohibiting solicitations. This is being decided in the Illinois Appellate Court.

The Jehovah's Witnesses' contention is they are covered under Supreme Court rulings, specifically mentioning them, as not solicitors, but as a religious group entitled to rights of speech and freedom of religion.

Chief Horcher said whether they come under this contested ordinance or not is to be decided upon after the Appellate Court resolves the case.

The World Just Walks By

by GERRY DeZONNA

(In this second and concluding part of "Divorce Suburban Style," Gerry DeZonna, Paddock staff writer, describes where a suburban mother of five turns when her money runs out as she waits for her divorce to become final.)

For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried.

There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce, he would file a lien against the property.

Divorce Suburban Style

He would be guaranteed his wages once the house was sold. The house would have to be sold within 90 days from the day that the decree was filed, so he said.

She was left in an unfortunate position. There was no money, and there wouldn't be any income until the divorce was settled. She was living in a state in which she had only lived for seven years. She didn't know the procedures as well as for her native state of Wisconsin. Her family still lived in Madison, and she didn't know where to turn or who to go to for help and advice.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW if she should sign the lien, despite the lawyer's asking price. Without the divorce, there would be no money at all. Her financial situation was already at rock bottom. It seemed as though there was no alternative but to sign the lien. She thought that it would be better to be in the frying pan rather than the fire.

But there had to be someone who could

There are now 50 reputed street gang members under indictment in courts. Of 28 indictments returned between 1967 and this year, 22 charged murder, eight attempted murder and four intimidation.

Food for Hungry

WASHINGTON — President Nixon, declaring that hunger in America is "embarrassing and intolerable," asked Congress Tuesday to make food available free to the nation's poorest and to nearly double spending on food stamps for the hungry.

Under the proposal, families with an income of about $30 a month would receive food stamps at no cost. Families with incomes of about $4,000 a year would receive stamps for no more than 30 per cent of their income.

No-Confidence Vote

LONDON — Dissident Labor members of Parliament circulated a motion yesterday calling for a vote of no-confidence in Prime Minister Harold Wilson, after voters dealt the Labor party another setback in local elections.

The opposition Conservative party gained 34 local council seats after the first day's polling in the week-long local elections.

Court-Martial Out

WASHINGTON — A court of inquiry recommended that Cmdr Lloyd Bucher be court-martialed for the loss of the intelligence ship Pueblo, but the civilian Navy Secretary yesterday ruled out punishment of Bucher or any of his crew because "they have suffered enough."

At a news conference after Navy Secretary John H. Chaffee overruled the five-admiral board and decreed that there would be no discipline of Bucher or his crew, E. Miles Harvey, Bucher's lawyer, said, "As far as we're concerned, Commander Bucher has been cleared."

Real Bargaining Seen

PARIS — A tacit agreement among the Vietnam peace negotiators in Paris to stop threatening each other gave impetus Tuesday to reports that the conference is inching toward real bargaining.

Careful analysis of statements made by Allied and Communist negotiators showed a de-escalation of verbal attacks and threats routinely made in the initial stages of the conference. This change in tone, noted by diplomats on both sides, coincided with mounting reports in diplomatic circles in Paris that delegates were slowly moving toward a breakthrough.

Marchers See Aid OK'd

SPRINGFIELD — About 200 chanting welfare recipients marched 12 blocks from a tent village to the statehouse yesterday where they watched the House Public Welfare Committee approve bills to increase public aid payments and benefits by a 14 to 4 vote.

PALATINE COMMUNITY Council members could decide at tonight's meeting that a memorial to local servicemen killed in Vietnam will be similar to this one in Northside Cemetery dedicated to unknown soldiers of other wars, or they might decide on an entirely different shape and size. The meeting begins at 8 p.m. in the village hall.

Summer Fogging May End

You almost needed a score card Monday night to follow the Palatine Board of Trustees discussion on a solution to the village's mosquito problem.

In reviewing recommendations of the local committee appointed last summer to investigate the pest problem, proposals ranging from purple martin nets to natural predators to a tax protest to disannexation from the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District were heard.

None of those took the form of a final decision, but local officials did decide to take several preliminary steps including:

—A presentation of the local committee's report and recommendations to the Northwest Municipal Conference.

—Officially requesting copies of monthly financial statements and board minutes from the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District (NMAD).

—Formal support of pending state legislation concerning mosquito districts.

"WHAT DOES IT TAKE to do away with the district?" asked Trustee Fred Zajonc, after reiterating the committee's conclusion that NMAD is conducting an ineffective control program against the mosquito.

Mrs. Clayton Brown, chairman of the committee said it would require 5 per cent of all voters in the district signing a petition to call a referendum.

She also said dissolving the district is not listed among the committee's recommendations.

Without final commitment, the board generally agreed NMAD fogging (a temporary control measure against the adult mosquito) should be discontinued in Palatine.

Pepler Elected

The Salt Creek Park District elected officers at its meeting Monday night. Walter Pepler is president; James Ehterton is vice president.

Patrick Grealish is treasurer, and the secretary is park district Atty. Richard Mugalun.

Playground equipment has been ordered for Unit 6 at a cost of approximately $2,600 uninstalled.

May 31 has been set as the date for the dedication of Steven Rose Park. Steven was a 14-year-old Palatine High School freshman who died after football warmup exercises at Ost Field, in September, 1967.

THE DISTRICT contacted the State Highway Department to seek a better entry into South Park in Rolling Meadows. The clover leaf to Route 53 has cut off the street normally used to gain access to the park.

A budget meeting will be held May 22, and the next regular meeting will be June 2.

"Fogging no longer can be considered an effective control measure," Mrs. Brown said.

"However, you can't eliminate spraying without putting some other method in its place," said Richard Dawson, a committee member and village director of environmental health.

That's when the board learned that purple martin birds are natural predators of the mosquito.

"Then, why don't we promote purple martins in the village?" asked Trustee Tom Kearns.

AFTER HE LEARNED that about $25,000 is spent in Palatine every year by NMAD he added, "We could take that $25,000 and buy everyone in town a purple martin house and probably do a better job."

Trustee Terry Leighty asked, "Would it

This area's annual battle with traffic, race track noise and the heavy influx of track devotees will be launched Monday with a variety of weapons, strategies and preparations.

Arlington Park's 103-day thoroughbred racing season runs from Monday through Sept. 8.

But local residents, particularly those on Fremont Street in Rolling Meadows, will have to wait at least a month to learn just what effect twilight racing — and the new lights at the track — will have.

From Monday through June 14, the track will be occupied by the Balmoral Jockey Club.

Post time each day, Monday through Saturday, will be 2 p.m., with a probable completion time of about 5:30 p.m.

ON JUNE 16, however, the Arlington Park Jockey Club will open its season of afternoon and early evening racing. Post times for the Arlington meeting, and also the Chicago Tribune Charities and Washington Park Jockey Club meetings, have not been set yet, although daily racing will be over by 7:30 p.m.

The biggest problem the track presents, other than the noise and whatever nuisance the lights might present, is the heavy traffic flow into and away from this area.

With a 5:30 p.m. completion time for the Balmoral, main thoroughfares in Palatine and Rolling Meadows will be even more crowded than they are during normal rush-hour periods.

Dozens of local police will meet the onslaught of traffic.

ROLLING MEADOWS Police Lt. Ralph Evans said the race track pays the city for the traffic control it provides at the track and the city, in turn, pays the policemen who accept the traffic assignment in addition to their regular duties and normal eight-hour day.

"They are paid for each time they go out on an assignment, whether it's for 20 minutes or two hours — as long as it takes to clear the traffic," Evans said.

The lieutenant added that the race track does not present many other problems of a police nature. Because of the state racing board's rule that police offenders are fired from race track jobs, the track employees are generally well behaved.

"The crime rate generally increases here during the summer," Evans said, "but that can't necessarily be attributed to the race track."

TAVERNS AND restaurants within 1½ miles of the track, questioned yesterday afternoon, indicated they view the coming racing season with mixed emotions.

One restaurant manager in Rolling Meadows, who did not want to be identified, said he tries to discourage race track clientele from visiting his business.

"I've had eight years of experience with the track and I don't want to have anything to do with it," he told the Herald.

He said he charges "outrageous prices" to discourage race track patrons.

The manager said business is generally negatively affected for a few weeks because people don't want to fight the race track traffic.

A Palatine tavern owner said he does nothing to attract the race track patrons.

"I'M MORE CONCERNED with keeping my regular customers happy," he said. "And I don't want the headaches the extra business brings."

A motel-restaurant manager said his business keeps a close eye on race track patrons "because one day they might be rich and the next day they may be running."

Annexation OK'd

Although the plan commission has recommended against annexation of four acres along South Quentin Road, Palatine's village board Monday unofficially approved the request which will bring a nursing home into the village.

Controversy and confusion have surrounded the case since Four Seasons Nursing Centers of America first petitioned for annexation and special use zoning.

The firm proposes to build a 200-bed home near the Quentin-Illinois Avenue intersection.

The plan commission's negative recommendation is based primarily on the belief the case is spot zoning since most of the surrounding property is zoned for single-family homes, according to chairman Tom Moody.

HE TOLD VILLAGE trustees, "It's a good use, but let them locate on property already zoned for business," referring to a spot near Quentin and Colfax which carries a covenant allowing construction of a nursing home.

Homeowners along South Quentin Road also object to the location of the nursing home because it's a residential area and because of possible traffic problems due to the proximity of Fremd High School.

But village trustees generally agreed a nursing home is a good use for a community and will help broaden the tax base.

"People ask why we don't have more business and commercial uses in Palatine and then when it's proposed, objections always are raised," Village Pres. John Moody said.

Confusion began a few weeks ago when representatives from the nursing home company said that since proper zoning already has been approved by the county board of commissioners, the firm probably would build even without annexation to the village.

THEN TWO WEEKS ago village officials were informed the county board actually had not approved special use zoning for the tract. This information came from Paul Marcy, secretary of the county zoning board of appeals.

But Monday night, an attorney for the petitioner said not only was the proper zoning approved by the county, but an ordinance has been passed and it will take county board action to repeal it.

The World Just Walks By

by GERRY DeZONNA

(In this second and concluding part of "Divorce Suburban Style," Gerry DeZonna, Paddock staff writer, describes where a suburban mother of five turns when her divorce is about to become final.)

For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried.

There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce, he would file a lien against the property. He would be guaranteed his wages once the house was sold. The house would have to be sold within 90 days from the day that the decree was filed, so he said.

She was left in an unfortunate position. There was no money, and there wouldn't be any income until the divorce was settled. She was living in a state in which she had only lived for seven years. She didn't know the procedures as well as for her native state of Wisconsin. Her family still lived in Madison, and she didn't know where to turn or who to go to for help and advice.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW if she should sign the lien, despite the lawyer's asking price. Without the divorce, there would be no money at all. Her financial situation was already at rock bottom. It seemed as though there was no alternative but to sign the lien. She thought that it would be better to be in the frying pan rather than the fire.

But there had to be someone who could

Visions of D.C.

by MARTHA KOPER

With a Congressional vacancy in the 13th District, some local Republicans in Palatine Township could be thinking big these days.

After all, they belong to one of the surer GOP strongholds in the northwest suburbs and election of a successor to Congressman Donald Rumsfeld most assuredly is a "Republican Matter."

So strong is the hold in Palatine that GOP candidates went unchallenged in last month's election. And even though Republican candidates in Rolling Meadows were defeated, the national political party now has officially entered the picture in the city.

So with their ego up, and their confidence strong, visions of Washington D.C. could be dancing in their heads.

A U.S. REPRESENTATIVE from Palatine is not beyond the realm of possibility, although admittedly it seems unlikely. Does a man known primarily for his local activities in a village of 25,000 people stand a chance in winning voter support throughout an area covering eight townships?

The competition is stiff. Already 8 to 10 Congressional hopefuls have indicated either an active or passive interest in the position. Most of them are known in more than one town.

So who in Palatine has the ambition and more importantly, the chance to enter the race?

Although it might seem automatic to look at Village Pres. John Moodie, it doesn't seem logical. A resident of Palatine for more than 17 years, he's firmly lodged in local concerns.

BUT OTHER MEMBERS of the village board could be thinking of the Congressional seat either for themselves or a fellow trustee.

In a social situation, I can see one local board member looking at the other and saying, "Why don't you try for the 13th District? What can you lose?"

A likely choice to direct his questions to could be Wendell Jones, who was top vote-getter of last month's five-man GOP slate. Not only did he poll more votes than the top of the ticket, but he has professional ties which have brought many acquaintances throughout the northwest suburbs.

He's ambitious. Beginning as a teacher in School Dist. 15 only nine years ago, he has escalated on the education scale up to the Cook County Superintendent of Schools office as assistant superintendent in charge of special education.

HE'S DIVERSIFIED. As a past president of Dist. 15's Educators Association, as a former Republican precinct captain, as a previous director of Dist. 15's special education department and as a member of the Palatine Jaycees, Jones also holds the distinction of being named 1967 Man of the Year in Palatine.

With a long list of qualifications, a man from Palatine going to Washington still seems more like a dream, even if he's the township committeeman, Wally Schaw, who hasn't shown the slightest interest in succeeding Rumsfeld.

In fact, Schaw thinks Palatine Township is in a good position for influencing the entire 13th District's choice of a candidate, since "we don't have a candidate running."

But as long as most of the other townships are putting their favorites into the running, Palatine Township officials at least can dream about joining the bandwagon.

sociation's $500 shopping spree. The Hedkes live at 308 E. Schaumburg Road, Schaumburg.

Neighbors Like Radar

Communities in the suburban Northwest are reacting generally favorably to Arlington Heights' approval of a purchase of two radar sets for tornado watching.

The two radar sets, to be purchased from United Air Lines for $3,500, may be installed in the village and could provide local radar information for surrounding communities if a tornado hits the area.

Carmen Vineziano, civil defense director for Rolling Meadows, said a joint operation agreement, if approved in the future, would be a "terrific idea." He said he would be willing to look into support for Arlington Heights' civil defense director Lt. Jack Benson, who is one of the backers of the project.

Vineziano wondered out loud if matching funds might not be available to help pay for the radar.

LARRY PAIRITZ, director of the Mount Prospect Civil Defense unit, said he thought the decision to purchase small radar units was a "worthwhile experiment," but Mount Prospect has no immediate plans to participate in the program. Pairitz explained that many CD units rely on the U.S. Weather Bureau and a system of skywatchers who are expected to alert local authorities at the approach of a tornado.

Wheeling Village Pres. Ted Scanlan said he knew nothing of the Arlington Heights plan, but he will look into its feasibility for Wheeling. He added he was more than interested in it. "We would be interested in doing anything to safeguard our citizens."

However, use of the radar will be up to a committee of the Arlington Heights Village Board, which will decide shortly how, if at all, the equipment will be used.

George Burlingame, an Arlington Heights trustee and a pilot for United, was the man who arranged for the purchase of the equipment at a three-fourths reduction in cost. Burlingame learned that United was abandoning its Viscount airliners and much of the equipment in the planes would be sold.

HE INQUIRED in Washington about Arlington Heights purchasing the equipment. United Air Lines agreed to put aside two sets of radar until May 11.

He then contacted Allen Aircraft Radio, Inc., in Elk Grove Village. The firm told him that it could supply parts and maintenance for the units.

Burlingame then presented his proposal to the village. It took a last-minute agenda supplement to bring the matter up for consideration Monday.

After the approval Monday, Burlingame fumed that the village administration had tried to sidetrack his proposal.

In the meeting, Burlingame presented the proposal while stressing that the village's $50,000 siren system was worthless without a clear-cut immediate storm detection system.

The village receives radar information on storm conditions from a center in Kansas City, Mo., and it receives regional information from various local agencies. However, there is no in-village system that can locate a tornado immediately at close range.

Burlingame said installation would slightly boost the cost of the project, but learning to operate radar was a relatively simple procedure.

VILLAGE PRES. John Walsh said it was "absolutely outside procedures we've followed" to buy the equipment on short notice, but he stressed that questions of use should be resolved at a later session.

Finally, the board approved the purchase and agreed with Walsh that the use of the equipment should be considered later. The money for the set comes from the village's contingency fund.

Benson later explained that the radar system was merely one of many kinds of radar in use and that it could eliminate a gap in coverage of possible local tornadoes.

Part of the system considered by Arlington Heights could be mounted on top of the municipal building. A basket-type rotating net would transmit and receive signals.

Signals are sent out from the unit, and when they hit a solid object, they are returned. To spot a tornado, the signals bounce off the dust particles in the tornado.

John Baer, associate editor of Plane and Pilot Magazine, a periodical for professional and amateur fliers, told the Herald the system would be difficult to use in Arlington Heights alone.

HE SAID THE range of a Bendix radar set is about 100 miles. With tornadoes averaging between 25 and 40 miles per hour in speed, it would be difficult to spot the tornado in time, if observation is limited to the Arlington Heights village limits.

He explained that equipment the village has purchased is regarded as sound in the aviation industry. Weather radar is required in all commercial aircraft, and it is used both for weather observation and landings.

Baer explained that the radar can easily

Deny Soliciting

by DAN JOHN

A little dust was raised in the Wheeling Herald offices Tuesday, resulting from Monday's article concerning a group of Jehovah's Witnesses, in the Wheeling police station.

The group went to the police station Sunday to clarify, with the police, their position in regard to a village ordinance banning solicitations.

At that time they quoted U.S. Supreme Court and State Supreme Court rulings exempting Jehovah's Witnesses from any form of solicitation bans, explaining the position generally held by the faith, that Witnesses do not sell, anything but preach their faith door-to-door.

James L. Staelens Sr., a representative of the Northbrook Congregation, reiterated this position in the Herald office, adding that he felt the tone of the article was detrimental to the image of the faith.

HIS EXPLANATION of the events was this: An officer stopped a man who had two children with him. The officer asked if they were soliciting. He was told yes, then after a minute, was told no, the man pointing out he was a minister in the faith.

This is a correction of part of the Herald article Monday stating "asked if he was soliciting, the man answered no, at first, then said yes, pointing out he was a minister in the faith."

Then, according to Staelens, the officer became "belligerent." Chief M. O. Horcher told the Herald Tuesday the officer simply made them aware of the solicitation ban. Then the minister asked to come to the station to have the matter clarified.

STAELENS SAID he had had a "long conversation" with Horcher Monday, mentioning that Horcher said the officer would be reprimanded.

Horcher told the Herald Tuesday there would be no action taken against the officer. He added, "The officer was only doing his duty in making them aware that if they were soliciting, they would have to stop."

The nub of the incident is the Wheeling village ordinance prohibiting solicitations. This is being decided in the Illinois Appellate Court.

The Jehovah's Witnesses' contention is they are covered under Supreme Court rulings, specifically mentioning them, as not solicitors, but as a religious group entitled to rights of speech and freedom of religion.

Chief Horcher said whether they come under this contested ordinance or not is to be decided upon after the Appellate Court resolves the case.

Votes No on Aid

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted "No" in committee on all three aid to nonpublic school bills now before the state legislature.

Mrs. Chapman told The Herald Tuesday that after much soul-searching, she voted against the bills because they did not provide tight enough state standards to control the caliber of education in the nonpublic schools.

"We would be encouraging schools offering inadequate programs," Mrs. Chapman said. She said she did not anticipate back from her parochial-school oriented constituents provided she could get the reason for her vote across to them.

Two of the three bills received a "Do Pass" from the House Education Committee and will be introduced onto the floor of the house sometime next week.

THE BILLS passed from committee are House Bill 2116 and House Bill 2350. H.B. 2116 will give a tuition grant to private schools of approximately $60 per elementary student and $90 per high school student.

Mrs. Chapman says this bill would in some cases give more aid to nonpublic than some public schools. Although it would require certification of newly-hired nonpublic school teachers, after two years it sets "no other standard," Mrs. Chapman said.

The second bill, H.B. 2350, would provide a tuition grant to parents of nonpublic school children of $48 for elementary and $60 for high school students — the same as public schools' grants. It would also require schools getting the grants to meet standards set for state accreditation of private schools.

MRS. CHAPMAN contends this bill also does not set stringent enough standards.

The bill voted down in committee, H.B. 16, would give a tuition grant in money to nonpublic schools equivalent to what the student would get if he were attending a public school in the district.

The state aid is determined by the tax base of the district and "two districts side by side of varying financial ability would receive different grants," Mrs. Chapman says. This would cause unequal distribution of money among rich and poor districts, she said.

Mrs. Chapman said these bills could provide "innumerable administrative problems."

She said she favors providing a good framework of aid to private schools before passing out state money.

Representatives from the Delta Ambulance Service visited Palatine Brownies from Sanborn-Wood Street school recently.

They visited the girls from Troop 91 and the following day, attended a meeting of Troop 924. The girls saw a demonstration of equipment and were presented with a first aid kit.

House Approves Con-Con Bill

The Illinois House of Representatives approved a state Constitutional Convention bill Tuesday, but State Rep. Eugene Schlickman's R-Arlington Heights, vote was not with the majority.

Schlickman explained his "no" vote was aimed not at constitutional reform but at two features of a conference committee report which was, in effect, the bill before the House. One objection was to a provision that will give the north and northwest suburbs four separate elections this fall.

The committee had been charged with compromising both House and Senate Con-Con bills and recommended Tuesday that no other election, referendum or issue be voted on the same day as Con-Con elections.

SCHLICKMAN was CONTACTED soon after the 142 to 22 vote on Con-Con was taken. State Rep. Eugene Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted with the committee report.

Also interviewed, Mrs. Chapman said she was "truly proud" of the House action and said she anticipates a "slew" of candidates running for the two delegate positions from the Third District.

The conference committee report setting up machinery for a convention became, in effect, the Con-Con bill the House had to vote on. This report, Schlickman said, was given legislators only that morning.

Though the Con-Con measure passed the House, it must still be approved in the Senate. Con-Con legislation bogged down in the last month when the House and Senate revised differently the original legislation of the Constitutional Study Commission.

When the bills were approved in one house and moved to another, they came back with amendments identical to each body's bill.

Approved Tuesday, the "compromise" bill calls for a convention convening at noon Dec. 8 in the Illinois House, Springfield. A primary to select four candidates will be Sept. 23 and a run-off election to select two delegates from each Senate district will be Nov. 18.

Schlickman said his second objection to the bill was a requirement for two elections. He said he favored the House's bill that would automatically elect a primary candidate if that candidate gets 40 per cent of the vote.

"MY VOTE AGAINST the conference committee report was for a consolidation of elections and against the number of elections the north and northwest suburbs will have," Schlickman explained.

Two Con-Con and two congressional elections will diminish voter interest in the races and impose an unnecessary burden on citizens of the 13th District, he added.

"My record has been one of long-term support of Con-Con and constitutional reform."

Schlickman is considered a likely candidate for the office of 13th District congressman. The congressional post is expected to be vacated by Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, who is Pres. Richard Nixon's choice for director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Index Pay Good

The passage of an index system for teachers' salaries in Dist. 211, "proves there were issues in the last two school board elections, regardless of what members of the school board said," Richard Chierico, a former district teacher said.

Chierico teaches at Elk Grove High School, and was defeated in Dist. 211 school board elections, the past two years.

"The salary change would not have been passed, if it weren't for charges raised in the last two campaigns. The board indicated there were no problems in the district, but the public was deceived," Chierico said.

The fact that the teachers approved the salary change by a vote of 201-11, proves they were unhappy, and the board's denial of a morale problem was unfounded, he stated.

THE MERIT system was unpopular with teachers, leading to a high turnover rate, Chierico said. To prove his point, he pointed to a letter from David Elker, research director of the Illinois Educational Association, and the Carrol Report, a study of the Dist. 211 curriculum, commissioned by the school board.

Elder, in a letter to Chierico dated May 5, 1966, said "I do not agree with the type of salary policy that exists for your district." "This is the official position of the IEA and the National Education Association."

Chierico pointed to page 140 of the Carrol Report, which said the merit system had two basic weaknesses. Salary ranges have not kept a proper relative pace with salaries in other suburban areas, and it is difficult to administer salaries equitably.

THE REPORT ALSO said the turnover rate could be moved from "indiscriminate" to a more planned type of turnover.

Pages 150 and 151 of the 1963 report said that the present system is not understood or accepted by the faculty. It is subjective and difficult to defend, the report showed Chierico said the Carrol report and Elder letter are available for anyone to see.

Chierico was glad the board passed the index system, but it confirms his well-founded charges of the last two years.

Chierico said he phoned Dist. 211 Supt. Gerald McElroy, requesting he be placed on Thursday night's board meeting agenda. McElroy granted the request.

"I WANT TO make four suggestions," Chierico told the Herald. "I believe the agenda should provide a place for audience participation. This would give interested citizens a chance to ask questions."

He will also request that a stenographer or tape recorder be provided for the purpose of having "a more complete set of minutes."

The third request will call for an exchange of minutes between Dist. 211 and the elementary districts, park districts, and the village board, so they would have a more complete understanding of each others problems.

The fourth request calls for a copy of the agenda to be sent to newspapers, "so people can decide if they want to attend a board meeting."

CHIERICO SAID HE was informed by McElroy that the superintendent wrote the Palatine Village Board, that 211 would comply with a board request, asking for an exchange of minutes. The teacher said there was no such agreement until recent weeks, and added this is an "important step."

This was "done quietly," Chierico said. "Why was there no publicity?" he asked.

City Reign of Terror

CHICAGO — Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan said Negro street gang warfare in Chicago has reached "malignant" proportions, and compared it to the reign of terror unleashed in the city by the Mafia in the 1920s and '30s.

There are now 30 reputed street gang members under indictment in courts of 28 indictments returned between 1967 and this year. 22 charged murder, eight attempted murder and four intimidation.

Frank Borman Resigns

SPACE CENTER. Houston — Apollo 8 astronaut Frank Borman who commanded mankind's first trip around the moon, has resigned from the astronaut corps.

Borman will accept a post in the space agency's program to develop orbiting space stations. His resignation leaves the space agency with 20 astronauts.

Food for Hungry

WASHINGTON — President Nixon, declaring that hunger in America is "embarrassing and intolerable," asked Congress Tuesday to make food stamps available free to the nation's poorest and to nearly double spending on food stamps for the hungry.

Under the proposal, families with an income of about $30 a month would receive food stamps at no cost. Families with incomes of about $4,000 a year would receive stamps for no more than 30 per cent of their income.

No-Confidence Vote

LONDON — Dissident Labor members of Parliament circulated a motion yesterday calling for a vote of no-confidence in Prime Minister Harold Wilson, after voters dealt the Labor party another setback in local elections.

The opposition Conservative party gained 34 local council seats after the first day's polling in the week-long local elections.

Court-Martial Out

WASHINGTON — A court of inquiry recommended that Cmdr Lloyd Bucher be court-martialed for the loss of the intelligence ship Pueblo, but the civilian Navy Secretary yesterday ruled out punishment of Bucher or any of his crew because "they have suffered enough."

At a news conference after Navy Secretary John H. Chaffee overruled the five-alarm board and decreed that there would be no discipline of Bucher or his crew, E. Miles Harvey, Bucher's lawyer, said, "As far as we're concerned, Commander Bucher has been cleared."

Real Bargaining Seen

PARIS — A tacit agreement among the Vietnam peace negotiators in Paris to stop threatening each other gave impetus Tuesday to reports that the conference is inching toward real bargaining.

Careful analysis of statements made by Allied and Communist negotiators showed a de-escalation of verbal attacks and threats routinely made in the initial stages of the conference. This change in tone, noted by diplomats on both sides, coincided with mounting reports in diplomatic circles in Paris that delegates were slowly moving toward a breakthrough.

Marchers See Aid OK'd

SPRINGFIELD — About 200 chanting welfare recipients marched 12 blocks from a tent village to the statehouse yesterday where they watched the House Public Welfare Committee approve bills to increase public aid payments and benefits by a 14 to 4 vote.

Friends To Seek Book Aid

The manilas are coming! The manilas are coming!

No, this is not a call to arms against an invading army of Philipinos, but the poster theme of the Rolling Meadows Friends of the Library's new book fund drive, May 15 through 31.

The posters are going to be placed in various stores of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center and at other locations beginning tomorrow.

Friends of the Library begin their annual drive for new book funds May 15 by going door to door asking Rolling Meadows residents to fill manila envelopes with contributions.

LAST YEAR the Friends of the Library collected $1,000.

According to Virginia Connell, Rolling Meadows librarian, the library should have 45,000 books but only has 21,000.

Chairman of the fund drive this year is Mrs. Edward Burdell. Mrs. Burdell is also vice president for the Friends of the Library.

Cardinal Open House

Cardinal Drive School will hold an open house from 7 to 9 p.m., May 13. Parents are invited to visit classrooms during these hours.

During the open house, the PTA will hold its annual bake sale and ice cream social in the school gym. There will be home-baked goods, ice cream and soft drinks on sale.

Delay Conduct Charge

A disorderly conduct charge against a 17-year old Rolling Meadows boy has been continued to June 10, at Arlington Heights Municipal Court, by Magistrate Francis W. Glowacki.

The boy is charged with making anonymous telephone calls to the Rolling Meadows Police Department. His parents, later brought charges against the police for having his long hair cut by a barber in the police station.

The latter complaint will be heard at a later date.

Glowacki ruled that oral motions by the boy's lawyer, Ronald DeKoven of Chicago must be put in writing, so Joseph Farmer, assistant states attorney, may respond. On June 10, the motions will be ruled on and the matter brought to trial.

A jury trial was not requested.

Pay for Insurance

The Palatine Township Board of auditors agreed Monday to pay a $1,044 bill for Workmens Compensation Insurance for workers in the highway department.

About $700 will come out of the road and bridge budget, while the balance will come from town funds.

The board Monday also was told by M. Strauss and Son Landscape Nursery of Prospect Heights that the company would "fully seed the landscape around the town hall," for $321. They will "wait for payment until funds are available," board members were told. The matter was taken under advisement.

ALSO DISCUSSED was an upcoming bill from the T and H Construction Co. for the town hall completion. The bill is expected to be approximately $5,700. Town Clerk Margaret Chapman said the bill is expected to be delivered "within 30 days after the work is finished."

The board received a letter from the Palatine Leisure Club for senior citizens,

FRIENDS OF the Library. Mrs. James Haslem, left, and Mrs. Joseph Coomes, are on their way to place posters in Rolling Meadows Shopping Center window and to go door to door asking residents to fill manila envelopes with book fund contributions.

dence will be introduced, based on what was allegedly overheard by a telephone company supervisor. The supervisor advised police that someone had been asking for the police number and offered to trace the call, which she stated came from the boy's home.

Farmer said only testimony by Sgt. Charles Poellein and a police radio officer would give testimony.

DeKoven claimed that the charges against the boy were "initially triggered" by telephone company personnel over-hearing a call. This falls under a state eavesdropping ruling, which the lawyer cited at length.

THE "SOURCE" of the call is "precluded," because it is "incorporated" in the eavesdropping definition. Any evidence the telephone company gives that was traced to the source, is void by this rule, the lawyer contended.

Glowacki denied the motion, claiming that the legislature had a law covering "telephone misuse" on the one hand, and on the other, a law that takes away the penalty.

DeKoven said he'd ask for a mistrial. Farmer told the magistrate he agreed with many of the lawyer's arguments, but stressed he is not calling on telephone personnel to testify on what they heard.

I don't know what they heard, and I don't care, he said. He pointed out that he didn't think DeKoven would object to the police testimony.

THE BOY allegedly made a call to police that someone had been shot. After information that the calls came from the youth's home, Sgt. Poellein called there to see if police assistance was needed. Police report he was greeted by laughter.

After more calls to the station, police issued a warrant for the boy's arrest. His mother claims the disorderly conduct charge is false.

This area's annual battle with traffic, race track noise and the heavy influx of track devotees will be launched Monday with a variety of weapons, strategies and preparations.

Arlington Park's 163-day thoroughbred racing season runs from Monday through Sept. 8.

But local residents, particularly those on Fremont Street in Rolling Meadows, will have to wait at least a month to learn just what effect twilight racing — and the new lights at the track — will have.

From Monday through June 14, the track will be occupied by the Balmoral Jockey Club.

Post time each day, Monday through Saturday, will be 2 p.m., with a probable completion time of about 5:30 p.m.

ON JUNE 16, however, the Arlington Park Jockey Club will open its season of afternoon and early evening racing. Post times for the Arlington meeting, and also the Chicago Tribune Charities and Washington Park Jockey Club meetings, have not been set yet, although daily racing will be over by 7:30 p.m.

The biggest problem the track presents, other than the noise and whatever nuisance the lights might present, is the heavy traffic flow into and away from this area.

With a 5:30 p.m. completion time for the Balmoral, main thoroughfares in Palatine and Rolling Meadows will be even more crowded than they are during normal rush-hour periods.

Dozens of local police will meet the onslaught of traffic.

ROLLING MEADOWS Police Lt. Ralph Evans said the race track pays the city for the traffic control it provides at the track and the city, in turn, pays the policemen who accept the traffic assignment in addition to their regular duties and normal eight-hour day.

"They are paid for each time they go out on an assignment, whether it's for 20 minutes or two hours — as long as it takes to clear the traffic," Evans said.

The lieutenant added that the race track does not present many other problems of a police nature. Because of the state racing board's rule that police officers are fired from race track jobs, the track employees are generally well behaved.

"The crime rate generally increases here during the summer," Evans said, "but that can't necessarily be attributed to the race track."

TAVERNS AND restaurants within 1 1/2 miles of the track, questioned yesterday afternoon, indicated they view the coming racing season with mixed emotions.

One restaurant manager in Rolling Meadows, who did not want to be identified, said he tries to discourage race track clientele from visiting his business.

"I've had eight years of experience with the track and I don't want to have anything to do with it," he told the Herald.

He said he charges "outrageous prices" to discourage race track patrons.

The manager said business is generally negatively affected for a few weeks because people don't want to fight the race track traffic.

A Palatine tavern owner said he does nothing to attract the race track patrons.

"I'M MORE CONCERNED with keeping my regular customers happy," he said. "And I don't want the headaches the extra business brings."

A motel-restaurant manager said his business keeps a close eye on race track patrons "because one day they might be rich and the next day they may be running."

12 Month School?

High School Dist. 214 board members and part of the board's citizens committee agreed last night to forge ahead with a year-round calendar.

They said the school board should seek other consultant firms' cost estimates to pin down the financial implications of the school year change.

Asst. Supt. Roderick McLennan urged the committee to also ask the administration to make a similar study of educational advantages and community problems that would accompany the calendar change.

Last night's meeting was triggered by the board's receiving two estimates of the financial analysis, one estimate of $7,500 and the other between $17,000 and $22,000.

"I THINK THIS district is already working toward the 12-month school year," McLennan said, "and I'll tell you how." He said the school district now has 4,000 summer school students and hopes to step this up. Another 6,000 adults are attending evening classes.

"We need a broad scope study," McLennan added, "covering seven to ten different plans."

"I don't think anyone here is opposed to this," returned Citizens Committee spokesman Dr. Conrad Mazeski of Mount Prospect. "I think we just need to agree on how we're going to go about it."

Central Holds Social

Central Road School PTA will hold an open house and ice cream social from 7 to 9 p.m. today in the school on Central Road in Rolling Meadows.

Parents attending will be able to view a display of their children's art work. Refreshments will be served.

The committee suggested that a switch to a year-round school plan might make it unnecessary for Dist. 214 to build its eighth and ninth high schools. They said when the study is completed voters might be asked to take their choice between another high school and a 12-month school year.

Reservations regarding voter acceptance of a calendar change were strongly expressed by board member Richard Stamm of Mount Prospect. He said that the calendar change might mean students would be on vacation for three weeks four times a year — a switch that would mean "a whole new way of life for district families."

Girls' Gym Suits Stolen At Fremd

An Arlington Heights man was arrested last night and charged with the theft of 62 girls' gym suits from the William Fremd High School, according to Robert Centner, Palatine police chief.

Police, acting on a tip from a school gym instructor, stalked out the locker room three times between April 15 and last night, said Officer Richard Sikorski, police consultant at the school.

Police said Richard Geisler, 22, 816 N. Ridge, an employee of the Wala Washerette, 822 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights, was charged with taking the articles of clothing valued at about $300, collecting towels from the laundry.

Police last night made a raid on Geisler's house. Assisting Sikorski in the investigation and arrest were Officers Gene Bobinski, Tony Mazur, and John Wallisch.

The World Just Walks By

(In this second and concluding part of "Divorce Suburban Style," Gerry DeZonna, Paddock staff writer, describes where a suburban mother of five turns when her money runs out as she waits for her divorce to become final.)

For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried.

There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce,

Divorce Suburban Style

he would file a lien against the property. He would be guaranteed his wages once the house was sold. The house would have to be sold within 90 days from the day that the decree was filed, so he said.

She was left in an unfortunate position. There was no money, and there wouldn't be any income until the divorce was settled. She was living in a state in which she had only lived for seven years. She didn't know the procedures as well as for her native state of Wisconsin. Her family still lived in Madison, and she didn't know where to turn or who to go to for help and advice.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW if she should sign the lien, despite the lawyer's asking price. Without the divorce, there would be no money at all. Her financial situation was already at rock bottom. It seemed as though there was no alternative but to sign the lien. She thought that it would be better to be in the frying pan rather than the fire.

But there had to be someone who could

Visions of D.C.

by MARTHA KOPER

With a Congressional vacancy in the 13th District some local Republicans in Palatine Township could be thinking big these days.

After all they belong to one of the surest GOP strongholds in the northwest suburbs and election of a successor to Congressman Donald Rumsfeld most assuredly is a Republican matter.

So strong is the hold in Palatine that GOP candidates went unchallenged in last month's election. And even though Republican candidates in Rolling Meadows were defeated, the national political party now has officially entered the picture in the city.

So with their ego up, and their confidence strong, visions of Washington D.C. could be dancing in their heads.

A U.S. REPRESENTATIVE from Palatine is not beyond the realm of possibility, although admittedly it seems unlikely. Does a man known primarily for his local activities in a village of 25,000 people stand a chance in winning voter support throughout an area covering eight townships?

The competition is stiff. Already 8 to 10 Congressional hopefuls have indicated either an active or passive interest in the position. Most of them are known in more than one town.

So who in Palatine has the ambition and more importantly, the chance to enter the race?

Although it might seem automatic to look at Village Pres. John Moodie, it doesn't seem logical. A resident of Palatine for more than 17 years, he's firmly lodged in local concerns.

BUT OTHER MEMBERS of the village board could be thinking of the Congressional seat either for themselves or a fellow-trustee.

In a social situation, I can see one local board member looking at the other and saying, "Why don't you try for the 13th District? What can you lose?"

A likely candidate to direct his questions to could be Wendell Jones, who was top vote-getter of last month's five-man GOP slate. Not only did he poll more votes than the top of the ticket, but he has professional ties which have brought many acquaintances throughout the northwest suburbs.

He's ambitious. Beginning as a teacher in School Dist. 15 only nine years ago, he has escalated on the education scale up to the Cook County Superintendent of Schools office as assistant superintendent in charge of special education.

HE'S DIVERSIFIED. As a past president of Dist. 15's Educators Association, as a former Republican precinct captain, as a previous director of Dist. 15's special education department and as a member of the Palatine Jaycees, Jones also holds the distinction of being named 1967 Man of the Year in Palatine.

With a long list of qualifications, a man from Palatine going to Washington still seems more like a dream, even if he's the township committeeman, Wally Schaw, who hasn't shown the slightest interest in succeeding Rumsfeld.

In fact, Schaw thinks Palatine Township is in a good position for influencing the entire 13th District's choice of a candidate, since "we don't have a candidate running."

But as long as most of the other townships are putting their favorites into the running, Palatine Township officials at least can dream about joining the bandwagon.

LUCKY WINNERS, Richard Hedke, and wife Carol are shown loading up some of the goods won in the recent Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Association's $500 shopping spree. The Hedkes live at 308 E. Schaumburg Road, Schaumburg.

Neighbors Like Radar

Communities in the suburban Northwest are reacting generally favorably to Arlington Heights' approval of a purchase of two radar sets for tornado watching.

The two radar sets, to be purchased from United Air Lines for $3,500, may be installed in the village and could provide local radar information for surrounding communities if a tornado hits the area.

Carmen Vineziano, civil defense director for Rolling Meadows, said a joint operation agreement, if approved in the future, would be a "terrific idea." He said he would be willing to look into support for Arlington Heights civil defense director L. Jack Benson, who is one of the backers of the project.

Vineziano wondered out loud if matching funds might not be available to help pay for the radar.

LARRY PAIRITZ, director of the Mount Prospect Civil Defense unit, said he thought the decision to purchase small radar units was a "worthwhile experiment," but Mount Prospect has no immediate plans to participate in the program.

Pairitz explained that many CD units rely on the U.S. Weather Bureau and a system of skywatchers who are expected to alert local authorities at the approach of a tornado.

Wheeling Village Pres. Ted Scanlan said he knew nothing of the Arlington Heights plan, but he will look into its feasibility for Wheeling. He added he was more than interested in it. "We would be interested in doing anything to safeguard our citizens."

However, use of the radar will be up to a committee of the Arlington Heights Village Board, which will decide shortly how, if at all, the equipment will be used.

George Burlingame, an Arlington Heights trustee and a pilot for United, was the man who arranged for the purchase of the equipment at a three-fourths reduction in cost. Burlingame learned that United was abandoning its Viscount airliners and much of the equipment in the planes would be sold.

HE INQUIRED in Washington about Arlington Heights purchasing the equipment. United Air Lines agreed to put aside two sets of radar until May 11.

The bill was a requirement for two elections. He said he favored the House's bill that would automatically elect a primary candidate if that candidate gets 40 percent of the vote.

"MY VOTE AGAINST the conference committee report was for a consolidation of elections and against the number of elections the north and northwest suburbs will have," Schlickman explained.

Two Con-Con and two congressional elections will diminish voter interest in the races and impose an unnecessary burden on citizens of the 13th District, he added.

"My record has been one of long-term support of Con-Con and constitutional reform."

Schlickman is considered a likely candidate for the office of 13th District congressman. The congressional post is expected to be vacated by Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, who is Pres. Richard Nixon's choice for director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Deny Soliciting

by DAN JOHN

A little dust was raised in the Wheeling Herald offices Tuesday, resulting from Monday's article concerning a group of Jehovah's Witnesses, in the Wheeling police station.

The group went to the police station Sunday to clarify, with the police, their position in regard to a village ordinance banning solicitations.

At that time they quoted U.S. Supreme Court and State Supreme Court rulings exempting Jehovah's Witnesses from any form of solicitation bans, explaining the position generally held by the faith, that Witnesses do not sell, anything but preach their faith door-to-door.

James L. Staelens Sr., a representative of the Northbrook congregation, reiterated this position in the Herald offices, adding that he felt the tone of the article was detrimental to the image of the faith.

HIS EXPLANATION of the events was this: An officer stopped a man who had two children with him. The officer asked if they were soliciting. He was told yes, then after a minute, was told no, the man pointing out he was a minister in the faith.

This is a correction of part of the Herald article Monday stating "asked if he was soliciting, the man answered no, at first, then said yes, pointing out he was a minister in the faith."

Then, according to Staelens, the officer became "belligerent." Chief M. O. Horcher told the Herald Tuesday the officer simply made them aware of the solicitation ban. Then the minister asked to come to the station to have the matter clarified.

STAELENS SAID he had had a "long conversation" with Horcher Monday, mentioning that Horcher said the officer would be reprimanded.

Horcher told the Herald Tuesday there would be no action taken against the officer. He added, "The officer was only doing his duty in making them aware that if they were soliciting, they would have to stop."

The nub of the incident is the Wheeling village ordinance prohibiting solicitations. This is being decided in the Illinois Appellate Court.

The Jehovah's Witnesses' contention is they are covered under Supreme Court rulings, specifically mentioning them, as not solicitors, but as a religious group entitled to rights of speech and freedom of religion.

Chief Horcher said whether they come under this contested ordinance or not is to be decided upon after the Appellate Court resolves the case.

Votes No on Aid

State Rep. Eugene Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted "No" in committee on all three aid to nonpublic school bills before the state legislature.

Mr. Chapman told The Herald Tuesday that after much soul-searching, she voted against the bills because they did not provide "tight" enough state standards to control the caliber of education in the nonpublic schools.

We would be encouraging schools offering inadequate programs," Mrs. Chapman said. She said she did not anticipate back from her parochial-school oriented constituents provided she could get the reason for her vote across to them.

Two of the three bills received a "Do Pass" from the House Education Committee and will be introduced onto the floor of the house sometime next week.

THE BILLS passed from committee are House Bill 2116 and House Bill 2350. H.B. 2116 will give a tuition grant to private schools of approximately $60 per elementary student and $90 per high school student.

Mrs. Chapman says this bill would in some cases give more aid to nonpublic than some public schools. Although it would require certification of newly-hired nonpublic school teachers, after two years it sets no other standard," Mrs. Chapman said.

The second bill, H.B. 2350, would provide a tuition grant to parents of nonpublic school children of $48 for elementary and $60 for high school students — the same as public schools' grants. It would also require schools getting the grants to meet standards set for state accreditation of private schools.

MRS. CHAPMAN contends this bill also does not set stringent enough standards.

The bill voted down in committee, H.B. 2116, would give a tuition grant in money to nonpublic schools equivalent to what the student would get if he were attending a public school in the district.

The state aid is determined by the tax base of the district and "two districts side by side of varying financial ability would receive different grants," Mrs. Chapman says. This would cause unequal distribution of money among rich and poor districts, she said.

Mrs. Chapman said these bills could provide "innumerable administrative problems."

She said she favors providing a good framework of aid to private schools before passing out state money.

Ambulance Service Visits Brownie Troop

Representatives from the Delta Ambulance Service visited Palatine Brownies from Sanborn-Wood Street school recently.

They visited the girls from Troop 91 and the following day, attended a meeting of Troop 924. The girls saw a demonstration of equipment and were presented with a first aid kit.

Dickson Is In London

Airman 1C William S. Dickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Dickson of 1010 E. Palatine Road, Palatine, is stationed in London where he is a photographer with the Air Force.

Airman Dickson, a 1968 graduate of Palatine High School, joined the Air Force in July. After completing basic training at Lackland Air Force Base, he received specialized photographic training while stationed in Denver, Colo.

House Approves Con-Con Bill

The Illinois House of Representatives approved a State Constitutional Convention bill Tuesday, but State Rep. Eugene Schlickman's R-Arlington Heights, vote was not with the majority.

Schlickman explained his "no" vote was aimed not at constitutional reform but at two features of a conference committee report which was, in effect, the bill before the House. One objection was to a provision that will give the north and northwest suburbs four separate elections this fall.

The committee had been charged with compromising both House and Senate Con-Con bills and recommended Tuesday that no other election, referendum or issue be voted on the same day as Con-Con elections.

SCHLICKMAN was CONTACTED soon after the 142 to 22 vote on Con-Con was taken. State Rep. Eugene Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted with the committee report.

Also interviewed, Mrs. Chapman said she was "truly proud" of the House action and said she anticipates a "slew" of candidates running for the two delegate positions from the Third District.

The conference committee report setting up machinery for a convention became, in effect, the Con-Con bill the House had to vote on. This report, Schlickman said, was given legislators only that morning.

Though the Con-Con measure passed the House, it must still be approved in the Senate. Con-Con legislation bogged down in the last month when the House and Senate revised differently the original legislation of the Constitutional Study Commission.

When the bills were approved in one house and moved to another, they came back with amendments identical to each body's bill.

Approved Tuesday, the "compromise" bill calls for a convention convening at noon Dec. 8 in the Illinois House, Springfield. A primary to select four candidates will be Sept. 23 and a run-off election to select two delegates from each Senate district will be Nov. 18.

Schlickman said his second objection to

New Mayor Lays Plans

City Reign of Terror

CHICAGO — Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan said Negro street gang warfare in Chicago has reached "malignant" proportions, and compared it to the reign of terror unleashed in the city by the Mafia in the 1920s and '30s.

There are now 50 reputed street gang members under indictment in courts. Of 28 indictments returned between 1967 and this year, 22 charged murder, eight attempted murder and four intimidation.

Frank Borman Resigns

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Apollo 8 astronaut Frank Borman who commanded mankind's first trip around the moon, has resigned from the astronaut corps.

Borman will accept a post in the space agency's program to develop orbiting space stations. His resignation leaves the space agency with 30 astronauts.

Food for Hungry

WASHINGTON — President Nixon, declaring that hunger in America is "embarrassing and intolerable," asked Congress Tuesday to make food available free to the nation's poorest and to nearly double spending on food stamps for the hungry.

Under the proposal, families with an income of about $30 a month would receive food stamps at no cost. Families with incomes of about $4,000 a year would receive stamps for no more than 30 per cent of their income.

No-Confidence Vote

LONDON — Dissident Labor members of Parliament circulated a motion yesterday calling for a vote of no-confidence in Prime Minister Harold Wilson, after voters dealt the Labor party another setback in local elections.

The opposition Conservative party gained 34 local council seats after the first day's polling in the week-long local elections.

Court-Martial Out

WASHINGTON — A court of inquiry recommended that Cmdr Lloyd Bucher be court-martialed for the loss of the intelligence ship Pueblo, but the civilian Navy Secretary yesterday ruled out punishment of Bucher or any of his crew because "they have suffered enough."

At a news conference after Navy Secretary John H. Chaffee overruled the five-admiral board and decreed that there would be no discipline of Bucher or his crew, E. Miles Harvey, Bucher's lawyer, said, "As far as we're concerned, Commander Bucher has been cleared."

Real Bargaining Seen

PARIS — A tacit agreement among the Vietnam peace negotiators in Paris to stop threatening each other gave impetus Tuesday to reports that the conference is inching toward real bargaining.

Careful analysis of statements made by Allied and Communist negotiators showed a de-escalation of verbal attacks, and threats routinely made in the initial stages of the conference. This change in tone, noted by diplomats on both sides, coincided with mounting reports in diplomatic circles in Paris that delegates were slowly moving toward a breakthrough.

Marchers See Aid OK'd

SPRINGFIELD — About 200 chanting welfare recipients marched 12 blocks from a tent village to the statehouse yesterday where they watched the House Public Welfare Committee approve bills to increase public aid payments and benefits by a 14 to 4 vote.

PAUL NEUHAUSER

Neuhauser Stepping In

by GEOFFREY MEHL

Even though School Dist. 59 Board of Education elections are fading into history, the name of Paul Neuhauser is not.

One of seven who sought election on April 12, he ran third behind winners Harold Harvey and George Blanchard.

But late on two fronts is pushing Neuhauser back into the spotlight, and possibly onto the school board. He lost the election by 26 votes out of more than 5,400 cast, conceded and congratulated, and talked about "maybe next year."

All of a sudden Blanchard has been affected by a company transfer, and expects to move out of the area July 1. Concurrently, parents of students at Forest View Elementary School are becoming more militant and have tabbed Neuhauser as their man.

He hasn't been unwilling to accept the leadership that parents have been pressing upon him.

BLANCHARD, HAVING announced that he won't be with the district much longer, hasn't set a resignation date. While his term won't expire until 1972, any appointee to replace him would serve until April, 1970, date of the next board of education election.

Initial feelings are mixed on who will replace Blanchard. Some lean toward the practice followed in the past of interviewing interested citizens and making a choice, while others favor at least giving consideration to the candidates who were defeated on April 12.

Neuhauser, who received 626 votes to Blanchard's 670, heads the list, followed by Ernest Rich, Patrick Ordovensky, William Garvey, and Harry Stewart.

The board is not bound to naming the next highest vote-getter, and may appoint anyone it chooses. In this regard, there is already talk in some quarters about naming Gene Artemenko, past president and member of the board, who retired from the panel last month.

AT THE TIME of his decision not to seek reelection, listed personal commitments as the reason he chose not to seek to remain on the board.

Parents of Forest View Elementary School students, organized into a study group to probe faculty morale, fiscal matters, and administrative practices, became incensed when the school principal, Thomas Warden, was transferred to the central administration office.

Warden said Monday night that while he would live with the transfer, he would prefer to remain at Forest View. The board, in executive session, decided otherwise, arousing parents even more.

When the "reconsideration" of the Warden issue went in favor of the administration, parents Monday complained bitterly and walked out of the meeting.

Waiting in the wings was Neuhauser, who met with the group immediately after they left the board meeting.

Warden reportedly had been told to either accept the transfer or resign, and some board members privately accused him of being "incompetent."

THUS WARDEN WAS removed from his job as principal and made a curriculum coordinator.

Neuhauser appears to strike a compromise between administration and the militant parents on several issues dear to both.

better be handled directly by the board."

Teichert said flooding was the community's most pressing problem and added that he hoped the Drainage and Clean Streams Commission could come up with a comprehensive flood control plan within the year.

"I want to increase the number of members on the Drainage and Clean Streams Commission, and I also want us to be prepared to appropriate funds for the flood control plan on the local level."

The new mayor said he hoped the board would explore the possibility of acquiring Central School from Dist. 37 for the use of the Mount Prospect Library and for additional village administrative offices.

He called for beefing up staffs in some departments of the village "before a crisis occurs" and for competitive salaries for new employees.

TEICHERT SAID HE would like to see the Mount Prospect tax base broadened. That this could be done, he said, by expanding Randhurst with high-rise buildings and by further developing property owned by Old Orchard Country Club and Kenroy Builders.

He said he would like the board to meet with the Mount Prospect Park District to discuss acquisition of a proposed five-acre park site at Lonnquist and Busse Avenue, presently owned by Salvatore DiMucci, a local builder.

And lastly he called for youth and senior citizens programs. "Ten per cent of our population in Mount Prospect is 60 years old or over. That means we have at least 3,000 senior citizens. They have problems, but until now they have had to handle these problems alone. I think it's time we do something."

"Also I'd like to see a youth involvement program started, not in any way connected with the Youth Commission. Youth is a large and vital part of our community. The communication gap we hear so many adults refer to is nothing but a handy phrase to explain the problems we have with youth."

COG Studies CTA Tie-in

The Council of Governments of Cook County (COG) may pick up Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's idea of tying suburban bus service into the Chicago Transit Authority (CTA).

COG Chairman Jack Pahl, Elk Grove Village president, said he also hopes to pick up Chicago membership in the voluntary association of governments.

Pahl said he discussed the combined bus-mass transit plan with Daley yesterday. The local Mayor said he will set up a meeting with Daley to talk further on the idea of COG assuming the transportation project.

"THIS IS WHAT the council is for, to further inter-governmental cooperation," Pahl said.

Daley's proposal made Monday is to set up a unified metropolitan transit system incorporating suburban bus lines with the CTA.

In the Northwest suburbs, this would tie the United Motor Coach of Des Plaines to the CTA extension in the Kennedy Expressway. An official of United Motor Coach was quoted Monday saying he would be interested in discussing the concept.

Pahl said Daley's proposal involves nine bus companies in the entire county.

Recapping his conversation with Daley, Pahl said they talked about combining bus companies and tying these in with the CTA to provide better transportation service to both city and suburbs.

THE CTA IS extending down both the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways and is seeking the legislature's help in finances. Bills pending in the legislature would allow Cook County to levy a 2-cent gasoline tax to finance its mass transit system.

Suburban bus companies are also expressing concern over lack of revenues and United Motor Coach officials recently mentioned dropping some bus service.

Pahl said COG is particularly suited to bring the transportation plan together as an association of governments representing all areas of Cook County. He cited four existing transportation studies going on from all sides of Cook County and a new one in DuPage County.

The Northwest Municipal Conference recently authorized a mass transit study for its 13 member area communities.

Pahl said the north suburbs have a transportation study group and a transportation committee was recently appointed in the DuPage Mayors and Managers Association, headed by Itasca Pres. Will Notke.

The south suburbs have a program to issue bonds to buy coaches, then lease them to the Illinois Central Railroad, he said.

Pahl said the council project will be "a very logical tie-in to the Northwest Municipal Conference study."

COG does not have a transportation division as this function had been left up to the Chicago Area Transportation Study (CATS) and Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPCO), Pahl said.

"BUT THERE IS no reason why we can't do this to give the best possible service to the citizens."

Since its beginning in late 1967, COG has hoped to attract Chicago as a council member. Pahl said transportation could be the attraction to join since Chicago is concerned with this and the council could be of help.

AUSTRALIA BOUND. Mount Prospect's Rev. Tom Phillips of the Community Presbyterian Church will be leaving for a year's work in Australia. Why Australia? See page 5 of today's Herald.

The World Just Walks By

by GERRY DeZONNA

(In this second and concluding part of "Divorce Suburban Style," Gerry DeZonna, Paddock staff writer, describes where a suburban mother of five turns when her money runs out as she waits for her divorce to become final.)

For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried.

There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce, he would file a lien against the property.

Divorce Suburban Style

He would be guaranteed his wages once the house was sold. The house would have to be sold within 90 days from the day that the decree was filed, so he said.

She was left in an unfortunate position. There was no money, and there wouldn't be any income until the divorce was settled. She was living in a state in which she had only lived for seven years. She didn't know the procedures as well as for her native state of Wisconsin. Her family still lived in Madison, and she didn't know where to turn or who to go to for help and advice.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW if she should sign the lien, despite the lawyer's asking price. Without the divorce, there would be no money at all. Her financial situation was already at rock bottom. It seemed as though there was no alternative but to sign the lien. She thought that it would be better to be in the frying pan rather than the fire.

But there had to be someone who could

All Over But the Memory

If you can't come out the big winner, the next best thing is to have your room-mate take top prize.

That's the way things turned out for Illinois' Junior Miss Pamela Weir in the 1969 Junior Miss finals at Mobile, Ala., last night.

America's new Junior Miss is Jackie Bennington of California, who was Pam's roommate in Mobile since the 50 Junior Misses arrived there for this year's competition April 28.

Although not among the 10 semi-finalists, the Prospect High School senior will not come home empty-handed. She won a $1,000 preliminary scholarship for academic achievement.

LAST NIGHT'S finals, televised nationally from Mobile, climaxed for Pam an experience that began last October when she first entered the Paddock Publications Junior Miss Pageant. From that she emerged as one of four winners with the title of Arlington Heights Junior Miss. She also won the top scholastic award in that pageant.

Last January, in competition with 26 other Illinois high school senior girls, Pam won the title of Illinois Junior Miss, and she will continue in that role until next winter's state pageant. As the reigning Junior Miss, she will participate in locally conducted pageants in Illinois this summer and next fall when possible to get away from her studies at Illinois Wesleyan University, where she will enroll in the nursing program in September.

A total of $45,000 in scholarships was awarded in this year's pageant with the winner receiving $10,000.

First runner-up and winner of a $6,000 scholarship was Missouri's Junior Miss, Ann Columbia Deanne Allen of North Dakota was second runner-up, winning $4,000 in scholarship money.

ANN LANDIS, Arkansas' Junior Miss, and Mary Ann Stuckmeyer, Virginia's Junior Miss, others among the five finalists, each got a $2,500 scholarship.

Sponsors of the national Junior Miss Pageant are Chevrolet Division of General Motors, Breyer Co., Kraft Foods and Eastman Kodak Co.

This was the third year of the last four to be a runner of a Paddock Junior Miss. She represented Illinois in the national pageant. Previous winners were Kathy Brown of Roselle and Sue Courtney of Mount Prospect.

New Films Are In

by LAURIE ROSSI
Once again, the Mount Prospect Public Library has some new 8mm color films that can be taken out.

Lueth Faces Charge Of Shoplifting

An 18-year-old Itasca man was charged with shoplifting a pair of $10 earrings from Lorsey's store in Randhurst Shopping Center Monday.

The man was identified by police as Michael Lueth, a student at Lake Park High School in Roselle.

Lueth was released on $1,000 bond and is slated to appear in Mount Prospect court May 22.

The library has seven new ones this time, which include "An Edison Album," "The Holy Land: Landmarks," "Thunder at Tennessee Pass" — a railroad movie — and Cecil B. DeMille's spectacular, "The Crusades."

OTHERS ARE "D-Day Landings in Normandy," highlight scenes based on the memoirs of Winston Churchill from World War II, and highlights from the "Bridge on the River Kwai."

These can be shown with any 8mm projector for parties, clubs, school, family enjoyment or individual viewing.

There are many more already in the collection, and any film can be reserved. The library is open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

tion of the Constitutional Study Commission.

When the bills were approved in one house and moved to another, they came back with amendments identical to each body's bill.

Approved Tuesday, the "compromise" bill calls for a convention convening at noon Dec. 8 in the Illinois House, Springfield. A primary to select four candidates will be Sept. 23 and a run-off election to select two delegates from each Senate district will be Nov. 18.

Schlickman said his second objection to the bill was a requirement for two elections. He said he favored the House's bill that would automatically elect a primary candidate if that candidate gets 40 per cent of the vote.

"MY VOTE AGAINST the conference committee report was for a consolidation of elections and against the number of elections the north and northwest suburbs will have," Schlickman explained.

Two Con-Con and two congressional elections will diminish voter interest in the races and impose an unnecessary burden on citizens of the 13th District, he added.

"My record has been one of long-term support of Con-Con and constitutional reform."

Schlickman is considered a likely candidate for the office of 13th District congressman. The congressional post is expected to be vacated by Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, who is Pres. Richard Nixon's choice for director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Neighbors Like Radar

Communities in the suburban Northwest are reacting generally favorably to Arlington Heights' approval of a purchase of two radar sets for tornado watching.

The two radar sets, to be purchased from United Air Lines for $3,500, may be installed in the village and could provide local radar information for surrounding communities if a tornado hits the area.

Carmen Vineziano, civil defense director for Rolling Meadows, said a joint operation agreement, if approved in the future, would be a "terrific idea." He said he would be willing to look into support for Arlington Heights civil defense director Lt. Jack Benson, who is one of the backers of the project.

Vineziano wondered out loud if matching funds might not be available to help pay for the radar.

LARRY PAIRITZ, director of the Mount Prospect Civil Defense unit, said he thought the decision to purchase small radar units was a "worthwhile experiment," but Mount Prospect has no immediate plans to participate in the program.

PAIRITZ explained that many CD units rely on the U.S. Weather Bureau and a system of skywatchers who are expected to alert local authorities at the approach of a tornado.

Wheeling Village Pres. Ted Scanlan said he knew nothing of the Arlington Heights plan, but he will look into its feasibility for Wheeling. He added he was more than interested in it. "We would be interested in doing anything to safeguard our citizens."

However, use of the radar will be up to a committee of the Arlington Heights Village Board, which will decide shortly how, if at all, the equipment will be used.

George Burlingame, an Arlington Heights trustee and a pilot for United, was the man who arranged for the purchase of the equipment at a three-fourths reduction in cost. Burlingame learned that United was abandoning its Viscount airliners and much of the equipment in the planes would be sold.

HE INQUIRED in Washington about Arlington Heights purchasing the equipment. United Air Lines agreed to put aside two sets of radar until May 11.

He then contacted Allen Aircraft Radio, Inc., in Elk Grove Village. The firm told him that it could supply parts and maintenance for the units.

Burlingame then presented his proposal to the village. It took a last-minute agenda supplement to bring the matter up for consideration Monday.

After the approval Monday, Burlingame fumed that the village administration had tried to sidetrack his proposal.

In the meeting, Burlingame presented the proposal while stressing that the village's $50,000 siren system was worthless without a clear-cut immediate storm detection system.

The village receives radar information on storm conditions from a center in Kansas City, Mo., and it receives regional information from various local agencies. However, there is no in-village system that can locate a tornado immediately at close range.

Burlingame said installation would slightly boost the cost of the project, but learning to operate radar was a relatively simple procedure.

VILLAGE PRES. John Walsh said it was "absolutely outside procedures we've followed" to buy the equipment on short notice, but he stressed that questions of use should be resolved at a later session.

Finally, the board approved the purchase and agreed with Walsh that the use of the equipment should be considered later. The money for the set comes from the village's contingency fund.

Benson later explained that the radar system was merely one of many kinds of radar in use and that it could eliminate a gap in coverage of possible local tornadoes.

Part of the system considered by Arlington Heights could be mounted on top of the municipal building. A basket-type rotating net would transmit and receive signals.

Signals are sent out from the unit, and when they hit a solid object, they are returned. To spot a tornado, the signals bounce off the dust particles in the tornado.

John Baer, associate editor of Plane and Pilot Magazine, a periodical for professional and amateur fliers, told the Herald the system would be difficult to use in Arlington Heights alone.

HE SAID THE range of a Bendix radar set is about 100 miles. With tornadoes averaging between 25 and 40 miles per hour in speed, it would be difficult to spot the tornado in time, if observation is limited to the Arlington Heights village limits.

He explained that equipment the village has purchased is regarded as sound in the aviation industry. Weather radar is required in all commercial aircraft, and it is used both for weather observation and landings.

Baer explained that the radar can easily be adapted for ground usage, but a skilled person is needed to interpret data which appears on the radar screens.

Benson said that similar equipment is used by a United Air Lines office in the area, but it does release data on local storms to either public or private agencies. He commented that the problem of liability makes United hesitant to release any information.

Monday night, Arlington Heights Village Atty. Jack Siegel explained that if an agreement should ever be reached between villages for use of the equipment, it would be necessary to include a disclaimer of liability to eliminate a legal danger for Arlington Heights.

However, the use of radar equipment is still in the future. Initially, it will be up to Arlington Heights to determine what to do — if anything — with its new equipment.

'Child Week' Celebrated By Nursery Tots

Youngsters at Community Nursery School in Mount Prospect are celebrating "The Week of the Young Child" (May 4-11) in their own way — by finger-painting, singing, and playing house.

Just one-year-old, this nursery school tries to make every week a special one for young children. Four-year-olds attend class three mornings a week, and 3-year-olds come two mornings a week. Classes are held in the kindergarten room of the Community Presbyterian Church.

EMPHASIS IS ON learning through informal group activities. Teachers Mrs. John Page of Mount Prospect and Mrs. Ed Sandersfeld of Arlington Heights guide the children through many enjoyable learning experiences.

Special meetings for parents are held four times a year. Parents are also encouraged to visit and observe their children in class.

Anyone interested in further information about the school may call Mrs. Page at 392-1737 or Mrs. Carl Maas at 392-6367.

House Approves Con-Con Bill

The Illinois House of Representatives approved a state Constitutional Convention bill Tuesday but State Rep. Eugene Senickman's R-Arlington Heights, vote was not with the majority.

Schlickman explained his "no" vote was aimed not at constitutional reform but at two features of a conference committee report which was, in effect, the bill before the House. One objection was to a provision that will give the north and northwest suburbs four separate elections this fall.

The committee had been charged with compromising both House and Senate Con-Con bills and recommended Tuesday that no other election, referendum or issue be voted on the same day as Con-Con election.

SCHLICKMAN WAS CONTACTED soon

after the 142 to 22 vote on Con-Con was taken. State Rep. Eugene Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted with the committee report.

Also interviewed, Mrs. Chapman said she was "truly proud" of the House action and said she anticipates a "slew" of candidates running for the two delegate positions from the Third District.

The conference committee report setting up machinery for a convention became, in effect, the Con-Con bill the House had to vote on. This report, Schlickman said, was given legislators only that morning.

Though the Con-Con measure passed the House, it must still be approved in the Senate. Con-Con legislation bogged down in the last month when the House and Senate revised differently the original legislabe cut back to 50 or 60 per cent a year from the current maximum level of 75 per cent to increase flexibility and avoid potential crisis.

While he questioned current practices, he carefully avoided commitment and pledged "looking into administrative accounts and staff functions." The contention he made was that administrative costs seem to be too high, and that a morale problem does exist between administration and faculty.

"Teachers feel like pawns, receiving very little consideration. Some of the policy is arbitrary," he said, calling for an examination of how Supt. Donald Thomas handles affairs of the district.

He won friends on the board by issuing substantial praise for Albert Domanico and Allen Sparks. Domanico, running unopposed, was elected to a one-year term, and Sparks, an incumbent, was elected president of the panel.

WITH INROADS into the district Teachers Council, Neuhauser has drawn positive interest among faculty members. His wife, a teacher would have to resign if he were appointed because of policy prohibiting potential conflict of interest.

"The school board should have a maverick on it, and I'm willing to be that person. I'm not interested in a popularity contest," Neuhauser said earlier this year.

Drug Program Moves Into Junior Highs

A drug education program sponsored by the Mount Prospect Youth Commission will be started this fall for junior high school students.

The program will be presented by the National Council for the Prevention of Drug Abuse at a cost of less than $1,000. Source of funds for the project has not been decided yet.

TWO POTENTIAL sources, however, are the village board and various civic groups.

In a report to the group last month, Dr. Ronald Duckers, village youth psychologist, said there is a real drug problem in Mount Prospect.

Schools in which the drug program will be presented, probably during gym classes, are Central, Lincoln, Dempster, St. Raymond's and St. Paul's.

Jehovah's Witnesses: No Soliciting

by DAN JOHN

A little dust was raised in the Wheeling Herald offices Tuesday, resulting from Monday's article concerning a group of Jehovah's Witnesses, in the Wheeling police station.

The group went to the police station Sunday to clarify, with the police, their position in regard to a village ordinance banning solicitations.

At that time they quoted U.S. Supreme Court and State Supreme Court rulings exempting Jehovah's Witnesses from any form of solicitation bans, explaining the position generally held by the faith, that Witnesses do not sell, anything but preach their faith door-to-door.

James L. Staelens Sr., a representative of the Northbrook congregation, reiterated this position in the Herald offices, adding that he felt the tone of the article was detrimental to the image of the faith.

HIS EXPLANATION of the events was this: An officer stopped a man who had two children with him. The officer asked if they were soliciting. He was told yes, then after a minute, was told no, the man pointing out he was a minister in the faith.

This is a correction of part of the Herald article Monday stating "asked if he was soliciting, the man answered no, at first, then said yes, pointing out he was a minister in the faith."

Then, according to Staelens, the officer became "belligerent." Chief M. O. Horcher told the Herald Tuesday the officer simply made them aware of the solicitation ban. Then the minister asked to come to the station to have the matter clarified.

STAELENS SAID he had had a "long conversation" with Horcher Monday, mentioning that Horcher said the officer would be reprimanded.

Horcher told the Herald Tuesday there would be no action taken against the officer. He added, "The officer was only doing his duty in making them aware that if they were soliciting, they would have to stop."

The nub of the incident is the Wheeling village ordinance prohibiting solicitations. This is being decided in the Illinois Appellate Court.

The Jehovah's Witnesses' contention is they are covered under Supreme Court rulings, specifically mentioning them, as not solicitors, but as a religious group entitled to rights of speech and freedom of religion.

Chief Horcher said whether they come under this contested ordinance or not is to be decided upon after the Appellate Court resolves the case.

Curriculum Plans

by EDITH FREUND

Members of the Dist. 57 board of education seem determined to talk about long-range curriculum planning in their school system, despite the fact that nobody appears to be listening.

Board members were presented with the minutes of two April board meetings for their approval last Monday but two members of the board chose to ignore those minutes and skipped to criticism of a special meeting held by the board May 3.

The May 3 meeting was called to discuss the long-range curriculum plans in the district for the junior high program. Only incidentally were two other topics added — Central School's sale and personnel.

At special meetings the board may take action only on topics listed on the public agenda established before the meeting.

IN ITS REGULAR meeting preceding the May 3 discussion, the board asked for guidance in establishing long-range planning for the junior high schools.

Dr. Richard Percy, new assistant superintendent in charge of curriculum, gave answers at that meeting to the board "off the top of his head." These answers gave board members a look at possible improvements in the curriculum that could be used to reduce the 99 study hall periods now scheduled into the junior high program.

Percy suggested a reduction in the language arts program which now includes 10 periods per week. He suggested that students be allowed to take public speaking, debate, typing or drama part of this time.

He suggested consolidation of the foreign language program so that students could take French or Spanish, based on their choice and not on the portion of town they happened to live in.

Supt. Eric Sahlberg promised the board on April 21 that he would go to the May 3 meeting with "a practical, workable plan" for the junior highs.

At that meeting, the board dealt first with the schedule for the sale of Central School. In so doing it established that most of board members wanted to move to a one-junior-high program as soon as a building addition can be completed at Lincoln Junior High to house the Central students. Funds from the sale of Central will be used to build the addition, and additional money will be sought in a referendum June 14.

BUT SEVERAL board members, notably Leo Floros, said they would like to move to Lincoln even if the referendum fails. This would mean a smaller building addition but would relieve the district of Central, should the board receive a bid on the 42-year-old building.

While this move Saturday altered any long-range thinking that might have been accomplished before the meeting, no plans for long-range curriculum changes were presented to the board.

The board was almost unanimous in grumbling about the lack of "imagination and leadership" they received from the administration on curriculum.

By Monday, board members Jack Ronchetto and Mrs. Pat Kimball had obviously had time to think things over, and they seemed no happier than they had been Saturday.

Ronchetto complained Monday that although the board had restored three teaching positions in the junior highs, it had not received any information concerning what this change would accomplish.

He said he would like to know what impact this personnel would have on the numerous study halls and what the chances are for adding typing, debate and practical arts to the system.

MRS. KIMBALL asked when a meeting to discuss the long range planning, finally recommended by the administration Saturday, would be scheduled.

Sahlberg said curriculum study should be conducted by the staff. He said the addition of three staff members would allow the restoration of some foreign language cut from the program a year ago and possible addition of typing.

"When will we have that?" asked Ronchetto. "Our lead time is getting short. One year ago today we cut the foreign language program and we have been told all year that this late decision messed everything up as far as scheduling is concerned. When will we see a master schedule? Don't you have three of them drawn up right now for 48 teachers?"

Sahlberg replied that he had not worked on the schedules himself and he is not aware just what the three alternative master schedules represented.

He told the board it would have been impossible to do any long-range planning in seven to 10 days (between April 21 and May 3.)

Sahlberg said the master schedules would be run through the computer to see what conflicts develop from the scheduling before a report is made to the board.

Pastors Change Places

by JAMES VESELY
Rev. Tom Phillips of the Community Presbyterian Church is moving to another suburb.
It's called Wattle Park and it is half-way around the world.

Phillips and his wife will leave at the end of August for a year's pastoral exchange at the Wattle Park Presbyterian Church, near Melbourne, Australia.
PHILLIPS WILL BE replaced at the Mount Prospect church by the Rev. Thomas Howells and his wife, Rev. Howells is now the pastor of the Wattle Park church.

Both ministers will spend a year in each other's countries substituting for each other in the ministries and occupying each other's houses and using each other's cars.

"I have to admit, it's going to feel a little strange living in someone else's house and using their possessions without ever having met the other family," Phillips said.

How did Phillips decide to go to Australia?

"I SAW AN offer for an exchange in a church periodical, from there it was a matter of mutually deciding to exchange ministerial duties and getting the approval of the church governing board," Phillips said.

The minister said the Session of the Community Presbyterian Church endorsed the idea and higher authorities in the church were then notified of the exchange.

For Phillips, the sojourn to Australia will be part of a dream of worldwide travel.

"I had hoped to get to parts of Asia on the way to Australia," he said, "but the ships are all booked up and we may not get a chance to visit the Orient this time."

Rev. Phillips recognizes that his departure for Australia can be interpreted as something more than just a year's leave from Mount Prospect.

Phillips became a controversial figure in the community when efforts were made to close the church-sponsored coffee house, the Crystal Ship. Phillips was in the center of that controversy.

As the adult most closely identified with the Crystal Ship, he received criticism for the operation of the coffee house and was the subject of heated debate between members of the local church.

BUT THE CRYSTAL Ship is closed now, and Phillips considers the matter closed as well.

"This trip to Australia is simply not connected with the closing of the Ship in any way," he said.

Although the Ship is closed, the involvement in local community needs expressed by Phillips does not go away.

"I came to the suburbs because I think the suburbs are where the real decisions about the community can be made. The suburbs are where the people have the jobs and the power to change their communities to their own needs... and that's where I want to be involved."

In Australia, Phillips hopes to be able to conduct the same type of ministry, one which appeals to the whole community rather than to selected groups.

"One of the most interesting things being done at the Wattle Park church is innovative services on Sundays. Three services are conducted each Sunday. Two are traditional services but the third often consists of discussion groups, films and guest speakers. I think that is a fine idea."

PHILLIPS' REPLACEMENT at Community Presbyterian Church seems to be a man also caught up in his commitment to the ministry.

The Rev. Howells was born near Melbourne. He won a scholarship at the age of 13 to attend Geelong College in Australia and then the Geelong Gordon Institute of Technology where he studied chemistry.

Following his work toward a degree in chemical engineering, Rev. Howells worked as an engineer and then entered Ormond College for theological training.

One of his first ministries was in a small country town called Peshurst in the western district of Victoria, Australia.

Rev. Howells is 43 years old. He and his wife have four children. They will leave Australia at the end of August, bound for Vancouver, Canada, and then a long train ride to Winnipeg and finally, Mount Prospect.

AT THE SAME time, Rev. Phillips and his family will be bound for Melbourne by way of a steamer out of San Francisco. The two ministers will pass each other somewhere enroute. They do not expect to meet except perhaps at the end of their year's exchange.

City Reign of Terror

CHICAGO — Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan said Negro street gang warfare in Chicago has reached "malignant" proportions, and compared it to the reign of terror unleashed in the city by the Mafia in the 1920s and '30s.

There are now 50 reputed street gang members under indictment in courts. Of 28 indictments returned between 1967 and this year, 22 charged murder, eight attempted murder and four intimidation.

Borman will accept a post in the space agency's program to develop orbiting space stations. His resignation leaves the space agency with 39 astronauts.

Food for Hungry

WASHINGTON — President Nixon, declaring that hunger in America is "embarrassing and intolerable," asked Congress Tuesday to make food available free to the nation's poorest and to nearly double spending on food stamps for the hungry.

Under the proposal, families with an income of about $30 a month would receive food stamps at no cost. Families with incomes of about $4,000 a year would receive stamps for no more than 30 per cent of their income.

No-Confidence Vote

LONDON — Dissident Labor members of Parliament circulated a motion yesterday calling for a vote of no-confidence in Prime Minister Harold Wilson, after voters dealt the Labor party another setback in local elections.

The opposition Conservative party gained 34 local council seats after the first day's polling in the week-long local elections.

Court-Martial Out

WASHINGTON — A court of inquiry recommended that Cmdr Lloyd Bucher be court-martialed for the loss of the intelligence ship Pueblo, but the civilian Navy Secretary yesterday ruled out punishment of Bucher or any of his crew because "they have suffered enough."

At a news conference after Navy Secretary John H. Chaffee overruled the five-admiral board and decreed that there would be no discipline of Bucher or his crew, E. Miles Harvey, Bucher's lawyer, said, "As far as we're concerned, Commander Bucher has been cleared."

Real Bargaining Seen

PARIS — A tacit agreement among the Vietnam peace negotiators in Paris to stop threatening each other gave impetus Tuesday to reports that the conference is inching toward real bargaining.

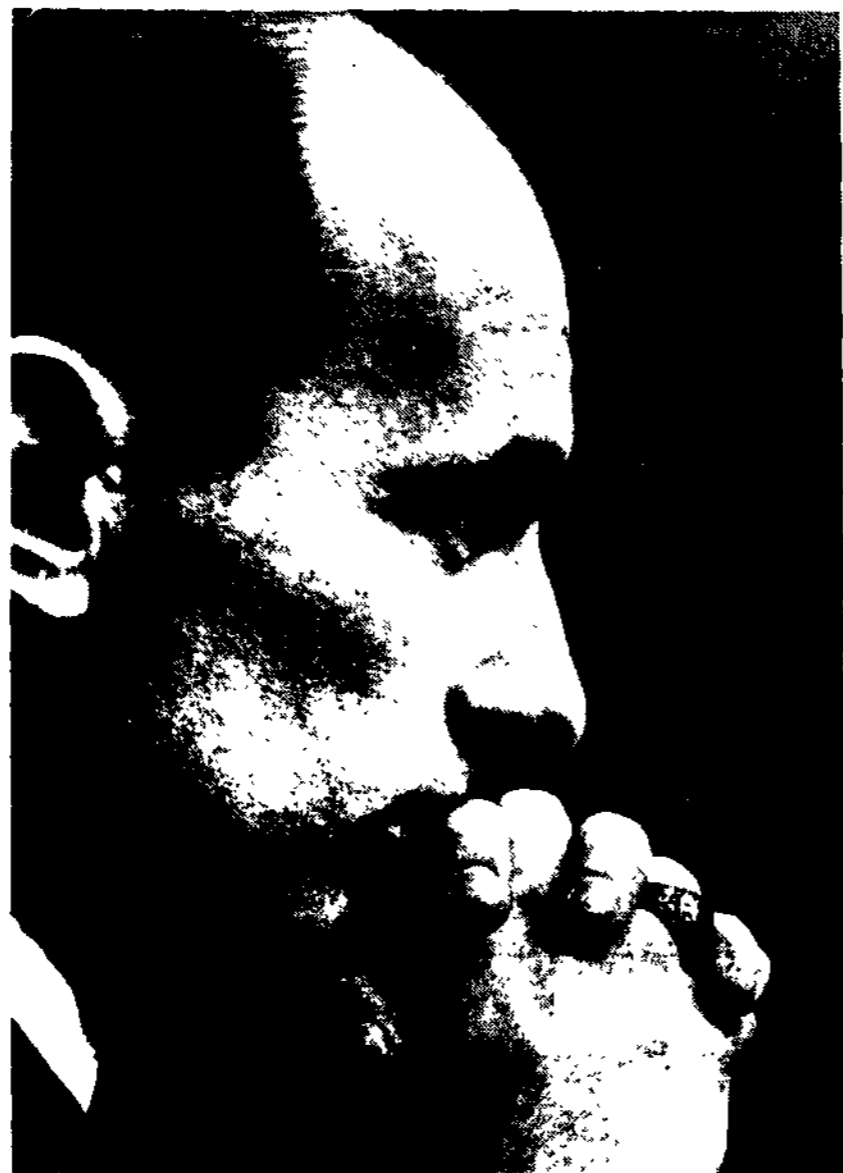

Careful analysis of statements made by Allied and Communist negotiators showed a de-escalation of verbal attacks and threats routinely made in the initial stages of the conference. This change in tone, noted by diplomats on both sides, coincided with mounting reports in diplomatic circles in Paris that delegates were slowly moving toward a breakthrough.

Marchers See Aid OK'd

SPRINGFIELD — About 200 chanting welfare recipients marched 12 blocks from a tent village to the statehouse yesterday where they watched the House Public Welfare Committee approve bills to increase public aid payments and benefits by a 14 to 4 vote.

PAUL NEUHAUSER

Neuhauser Stepping In

by GREGORY MEHL

Even though School Dist. 39 Board of Education elections are fading into history, the name of Paul Neuhauser is not.

One of seven who sought election on April 12, he ran third behind winners Harold Harvey and George Blanchard.

But late on two fronts is pushing Neuhauser back into the spotlight, and possibly onto the school board. He lost the election by 26 votes out of more than 5,400 cast, conceded and congratulated, and talked about "maybe next year."

All of a sudden Blanchard has been affected by a company transfer, and expects to move out of the area July 1. Concurrently, parents of students at Forest View Elementary School are becoming more militant and have tabbed Neuhauser as their man.

He hasn't been unwilling to accept the leadership that parents have been pressing upon him.

BLANCHARD, HAVING announced that he won't be with the district much longer, hasn't set a resignation date. While his term won't expire until 1972, any appointee to replace him would serve until April, 1970, date of the next board of education election.

Initial feelings are mixed on who will replace Blanchard. Some lean toward the practice followed in the past of interviewing interested citizens and making a choice, while others favor at least giving consideration to the candidates who were defeated on April 12.

Neuhauser, who received 626 votes to Blanchard's 670, heads the list, followed by Ernest Rich, Patrick Ordovinsky, William Garvey, and Harry Stewart.

The board is not bound to naming the next highest vote-getter, and may appoint anyone it chooses. In this regard, there is already talk in some quarters about naming Gene Artemenko, past president and member of the board, who retired from the panel last month.

AT THE TIME of his decision not to seek reelection, listed personal commitments as the reason he chose not to seek to remain on the board.

Parents of Forest View Elementary School students, organized into a study group to probe faculty morale, fiscal matters, and administrative practices, became incensed when the school principal, Thomas Warden, was transferred to the central administration office.

Warden said Monday night that while he would live with the transfer, he would prefer to remain at Forest View. The board, in executive session, decided otherwise, arousing parents even more.

When the "reconsideration" of the Warden issue went in favor of the administration, parents Monday night complained bitterly and walked out of the meeting.

Waiting in the wings was Neuhauser, who met with the group immediately after they left the board meeting.

Warden reportedly had been told to either accept the transfer or resign, and some board members privately accused him of being "incompetent."

THUS WARDEN WAS removed from his job as principal and made a curriculum coordinator.

Weekly village board meetings, acquisition of Central School and development of a community flood control plan were some of the sweeping changes proposed by Mayor Robert Teichert last night before the new Mount Prospect Village Board.

In a report he read to board members, Teichert said not only would he like to have a new village manager quickly appointed, but also an assistant village manager to handle the increasing work load of village affairs.

He called for weekly board meetings, except during June, July and August, to expedite village business and to allow board members to adjourn no later than 10:30 p.m. The board currently meets twice a month.

"THIS WILL DO away with special meetings, but in no way will lessen the importance of committee meetings. I do think, however, we have channeled too much village business through committees in the past, when in many cases it could

The Council of Governments of Cook County (COG) may pick up Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's idea of tying suburban bus service into the Chicago Transit Authority (CTA).

COG Chairman Jack Pahl, Elk Grove Village president, said he also hopes to pick up Chicago membership in the voluntary association of governments.

Pahl said he discussed the combined bus-mass transit plan with Daley yesterday. The local Mayor said he will set up a meeting with Daley to talk further on the idea of COG assuming the transportation project.

"THIS IS WHAT the council is for, to further inter-governmental cooperation," Pahl said.

better be handled directly by the board." Teichert said flooding was the community's most pressing problem and added that he hoped the Drainage and Clean Streams Commission could come up with a comprehensive flood control plan within the year.

"I want to increase the number of members on the Drainage and Clean Streams Commission, and I also want us to be prepared to appropriate funds for the flood control plan on the local level."

The new mayor said he hoped the board would explore the possibility of acquiring Central School from Dist. 57 for the use of the Mount Prospect Library and for additional village administrative offices.

He called for beefing up staffs in some departments of the village "before a crisis occurs" and for competitive salaries for new employees.

TEICHERT SAID HE would like to see the Mount Prospect tax base broadened. That this could be done, he said, by expanding Randhurst with high-rise build-

Daley's proposal made Monday is to set up a unified metropolitan transit system incorporating suburban bus lines with the CTA.

In the Northwest suburbs, this would tie the United Motor Coach of Des Plaines to the CTA extension in the Kennedy Expressway. An official of United Motor Coach was quoted Monday saying he would be interested in discussing the concept.

Pahl said Daley's proposal involves nine bus companies in the entire county.

Recapping his conversation with Daley, Pahl said they talked about combining bus companies and tying these in with the CTA to provide better transportation service to both city and suburbs.

THE CTA IS extending down both the Kennedy and Dan Ryan expressways and is seeking the legislature's help in finances. Bills pending in the legislature would allow Cook County to levy a 2-cent gasoline tax to finance its mass transit system.

Suburban bus companies are also expressing concern over lack of revenues and United Motor Coach officials recently mentioned dropping some bus service.

Pahl said COG is particularly suited to bring the transportation plan together as an association of governments representing all areas of Cook County. He cited four existing transportation studies going on from all sides of Cook County and a new one in DuPage County.

The Northwest Municipal Conference recently authorized a mass transit study for its 13 member area communities.

Pahl said the north suburbs have a transportation study group and a transportation committee was recently appointed in the DuPage Mayors and Managers Association, headed by Itasca Pres. Will Notke.

The south suburbs have a program to issue bonds to buy coaches, then lease them to the Illinois Central Railroad, he said.

Pahl said the council project will be "a very logical tie-in to the Northwest Municipal Conference study."

COG does not have a transportation division as this function had been left up to the Chicago Area Transportation Study (CATS) and Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC), Pahl said.

(In this second and concluding part of "Divorce Suburban Style," Gerry DeZonna, Paddock staff writer, describes where a suburban mother of five turns when her money runs out as she waits for her divorce to become final.)

For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried.

There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce, he would file a lien against the property.

He said he would like the board to meet with the Mount Prospect Park District to discuss acquisition of a proposed five-acre park site at Lonnquist and Busse Avenue, presently owned by Salvatore DiMucci, a local builder.

And lastly he called for youth and senior citizens programs. "Ten per cent of our population in Mount Prospect is 60 years old or over. That means we have at least 3,000 senior citizens. They have problems, but until now they have had to handle these problems alone. I think it's time we do something."

"Also I'd like to see a youth involvement program started, not in any way connected with the Youth Commission. Youth is a large and vital part of our community. The communication gap we hear so many adults refer to is nothing but a handy phrase to explain the problems we have with youth."

can't do this to give the best possible service to the citizens."

Since its beginning in late 1967, COG has hoped to attract Chicago as a council member. Pahl said transportation could be the attraction to join since Chicago is concerned with this and the council could be of help.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW if she should sign the lien, despite the lawyer's asking price. Without the divorce, there would be no money at all. Her financial situation was already at rock bottom. It seemed as though there was no alternative but to sign the lien. She thought that it would be better to be in the frying pan rather than the fire.

All Over But the Memory

If you can't come out the big winner, the next best thing is to have your roommate take top prize.

That's the way things turned out for Illinois Junior Miss Pamela Weir in the 1969 Junior Miss finals at Mobile, Ala., last night.

America's new Junior Miss is Jackie Rennington of California, who was Pam's roommate in Mobile since the 50 Junior Misses arrived there for this year's competition April 26.

Although not among the semi-finalists, the Prospect High School senior will not come home empty handed. She won a $1,000 preliminary scholarship for academic achievement.

LAST NIGHT'S finals televised nationally from Mobile, climaxed for Pam an experience that began last October when she first entered the Paddock Publications Junior Miss Pageant. From that she emerged as one of four winners with the title of Arlington Heights Junior Miss. She also won the top scholastic award in that pageant.

Last January, in competition with 26 other Illinois high school senior girls, Pam won the title of Illinois Junior Miss, and she will continue in that role until next winter's state pageant. As the reigning Junior Miss, she will participate in locally conducted pageants in Illinois this summer and next fall when possible to get away from her studies at Illinois Wesleyan University, where she will enroll in the nursing program in September.

A total of $45,000 in scholarships was awarded in this year's pageant with the winner receiving $10,000.

First runner-up and winner of a $6,000 scholarship was Missouri's Junior Miss, Anna Columbia Deanne Allen of North Dakota. She was second runner-up, winning $4,000 in scholarship money.

ANN LANDIS, Arkansas' Junior Miss, and Mary Ann Stuckmeyer, Virginia's Junior Miss, were among the five finalists, each getting a $2,000 scholarship.

Sponsors of the national Junior Miss Pageant are Chevrolet Division of General Motors, Borden Co., Kraft Foods and Eastman Kodak Co.

This was the third year of the last four to be a winner of a Paddock Junior Miss. She represented Illinois in the national pageant. Previous winners were Kathy Bennett of Roselle and Sue Courtney of Mount Prospect.

Lueth Faces Charge Of Shoplifting

An 18-year-old Rasca man was charged with shoplifting a pair of $10 earrings from Lorsey's store in Randhurst Shopping Center Monday.

The man was identified by police as Michael Lueth, a student at Lake Park High School in Roselle.

Lueth was released on $1,000 bond and is slated to appear in Mount Prospect court May 22.

The library has seven new ones this time, which include "An Edison Album," "The Holy Land: Landmarks," "Thunder at Tennessee Pass" — a railroad movie — and Cecil B. DeMille's spectacular, "The Crusades."

OTHERS ARE "D-Day Landings in Normandy," highlight scenes based on the memoirs of Winston Churchill from World War II, and highlights from the "Bridge on the River Kwai."

These can be shown with any 8mm projector for parties, clubs, school, family enjoyment or individual viewing.

There are many more already in the collection, and any film can be reserved. The library is open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on weekdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Neighbors Like Radar

Communities in the suburban Northwest are reacting generally favorably to Arlington Heights' approval of a purchase of two radar sets for tornado watching.

The two radar sets, to be purchased from United Air Lines for $3,500, may be installed in the village and could provide local radar information for surrounding communities if a tornado hits the area.

Carmen Vineziano, civil defense director for Rolling Meadows, said a joint operation agreement, if approved in the future, would be a "terrific idea." He said he would be willing to look into support for Arlington Heights civil defense director L. Jack Benson, who is one of the backers of the project.

Vineziano wondered out loud if matching funds might not be available to help pay for the radar.

LARRY PAIRITZ, director of the Mount Prospect Civil Defense unit, said he thought the decision to purchase small radar units was a "worthwhile experiment," but Mount Prospect has no immediate plans to participate in the program.

Pairitz explained that many CD units rely on the U.S. Weather Bureau and a system of skywatchers who are expected to alert local authorities at the approach of a tornado.

Wheeling Village Pres. Ted Scanlan said he knew nothing of the Arlington Heights plan, but he will look into its feasibility for Wheeling. He added he was more than interested in it. "We would be interested in doing anything to safeguard our citizens."

However, use of the radar will be up to a committee of the Arlington Heights Village Board, which will decide shortly how, if at all, the equipment will be used.

George Burlingame, an Arlington Heights trustee and a pilot for United, was the man who arranged for the purchase of the equipment at a three-fourths reduction in cost. Burlingame learned that United was abandoning its Viscount airliners and much of the equipment in the planes would be sold.

HE INQUIRED in Washington about Arlington Heights purchasing the equipment. United Air Lines agreed to put aside two sets of radar until May 11.

He then contacted Allen Aircraft Radio, Inc., in Elk Grove Village. The firm told him that it could supply parts and maintenance for the units.

Burlingame then presented his proposal to the village. It took a last-minute agenda supplement to bring the matter up for consideration Monday.

After the approval Monday, Burlingame fumed that the village administration had tried to sidetrack his proposal.

In the meeting, Burlingame presented the proposal while stressing that the village's $50,000 siren system was worthless without a clear-cut immediate storm detection system.

The village receives radar information on storm conditions from a center in Kansas City, Mo., and it receives regional information from various local agencies. However, there is no in-village system that can locate a tornado immediately at close range.

Burlingame said installation would slightly boost the cost of the project, but learning to operate radar was a relatively simple procedure.

VILLAGE PRES. John Walsh said it was "absolutely outside procedures we've followed" to buy the equipment on short notice, but he stressed that questions of use should be resolved at a later session.

Finally, the board approved the purchase and agreed with Walsh that the use of the equipment should be considered later. The money for the set comes from the village's contingency fund.

Benson later explained that the radar system was merely one of many kinds of radar in use and that it could eliminate a gap in coverage of possible local tornadoes.

Part of the system considered by Arlington Heights could be mounted on top of the municipal building. A basket-type rotating net would transmit and receive signals.

Signals are sent out from the unit, and when they hit a solid object, they are returned. To spot a tornado, the signals bounce off the dust particles in the tornado.

John Baer, associate editor of Plane and Pilot Magazine, a periodical for professional and amateur fliers, told the Herald the system would be difficult to use in Arlington Heights alone.

HE SAID THE range of a Bendix radar set is about 100 miles. With tornadoes averaging between 25 and 40 miles per hour in speed, it would be difficult to spot the tornado in time, if observation is limited to the Arlington Heights village limits.

He explained that equipment the village has purchased is regarded as sound in the aviation industry. Weather radar is required in all commercial aircraft, and it is used both for weather observation and landings.

Baer explained that the radar can easily be adapted for ground usage, but a skilled person is needed to interpret data which appears on the radar screens.

Benson said that similar equipment is used by a United Air Lines office in the area, but it does release data on local storms to either public or private agencies. He commented that the problem of liability makes United hesitant to release any information.

Monday night, Arlington Heights Village Atty. Jack Siegel explained that if an agreement should ever be reached between villages for use of the equipment, it would be necessary to include a disclaimer of liability to eliminate a legal danger for Arlington Heights.

However, the use of radar equipment is still in the future. Initially, it will be up to Arlington Heights to determine what to do — if anything — with its new equipment.

'Child Week' Celebrated By Nursery Tots

Youngsters at Community Nursery School in Mount Prospect are celebrating "The Week of the Young Child" (May 4-11) in their own way — by finger-painting, singing, and playing house.

Just one-year-old, this nursery school tries to make every week a special one for young children. Four-year-olds attend class three mornings a week, and 3-year-olds come two mornings a week. Classes are held in the kindergarten room of the Community Presbyterian Church.

EMPHASIS IS ON learning through informal group activities. Teachers Mrs. John Page of Mount Prospect and Mrs. Ed Sanderfeld of Arlington Heights guide the children through many enjoyable learning experiences.

Special meetings for parents are held four times a year. Parents are also encouraged to visit and observe their children in class.

Anyone interested in further information about the school may call Mrs. Page at 392-1737 or Mrs. Carl Maas at 392-6367.

Votes No on Aid

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted "No" in committee on all three aid to nonpublic school bills now before the state legislature.

Mrs. Chapman told The Herald Tuesday that after much soul-searching, she voted against the bills because they did not provide tight enough state standards to control the caliber of education in the nonpublic schools.

"We would be encouraging schools offering inadequate programs," Mrs. Chapman said. She said she did not anticipate flack from her parochial-school oriented constituents provided she could get the reason for her vote across to them.

Two of the three bills received a "Do Pass" from the House Education Committee and will be introduced onto the floor of the house sometime next week.

THE BILLS passed from committee are House Bill 2116 and House Bill 2350. H.B. 2116 will give a tuition grant to private schools of approximately $60 per elementary student and $90 per high school student.

Mrs. Chapman says this bill would in some cases give more aid to nonpublic than some public schools. Although it would require certification of newly-hired nonpublic school teachers, after two years it sets "no other standard," Mrs. Chapman said.

The second bill, H.B. 2350, would provide a tuition grant to parents of nonpublic school children of $48 for elementary and $60 for high school students — the same as public schools' grants. It would also require schools getting the grants to meet standards set for state accreditation of private schools.

MRS. CHAPMAN contends this bill also does not set stringent enough standards.

The bill voted down in committee, H.B. 46, would give a tuition grant in money to nonpublic schools equivalent to what the student would get if he were attending a public school in the district.

The state aid is determined by the tax base of the district and "two districts side by side of varying financial ability would receive different grants," Mrs. Chapman says. This would cause unequal distribution of money among rich and poor districts, she said.

Mrs. Chapman said these bills could provide "innumerable administrative problems."

She said she favors providing a good framework of aid to private schools before passing out state money.

Purse Is Returned, Crackers And All

A purse containing $18.77 and a half-eaten box of animal crackers was found on Route 83 near Euclid in Mount Prospect Monday and later returned to its owner.

The purse was found by J. H. Knollmuller, 307 N. Elmhurst, Mount Prospect, who turned it over to police.

The purse, which had been reported lost, was then returned to Beverly Bartell, 4734 Arbor, Rolling Meadows.

Bag Bug's Buckets

Mrs. Kathleen Engstrom, 25, of 134 Sumac Court, Schaumburg, had the front bucket seats of her Volkswagen stolen at Randhurst Shopping Center Monday.

Mrs. Engstrom told police her car was not locked at the time of the theft.

Gustavus Dean's List

Four area students have been named to the dean's list at Gustavus Adolphus College, St. Peter, Minn.

They are Ross Bondy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Bondy of 331 S. Carlyle, Arlington Heights, a freshman majoring in biology, and Mount Prospect residents Shirley Borg Boim, daughter of Mrs. Laura Borg of 500 N. Elmhurst Ave., a senior music major; Kathleen Dorosh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Dorosh of 3 W. Orchard Place, a freshman art major; and her sister Susan, a senior majoring in music.

House Approves Con-Con Bill

The Illinois House of Representatives approved a state Constitutional Convention bill Tuesday, but State Rep. Eugene Schickman, R-Arlington Heights, vote was not with the majority.

Schickman explained his "no" vote was aimed not at constitutional reform but at "two features of a conference committee report which was, in effect, the bill before the House. One objection was to a provision that will give the north and northwest suburbs four separate elections this fall."

The committee had been charged with compromising both House and Senate Con-Con bills and recommended Tuesday that no other election, referendum or issue be voted on the same day as Con-Con elections.

SCHICKMAN WAS CONTACTED soon

after the 142 to 22 vote on Con-Con was taken. State Rep. Eugene Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted with the committee report.

Also interviewed, Mrs. Chapman said she was "truly proud" of the House action and said she anticipates a "slew" of candidates running for the two delegate positions from the Third District.

The conference committee report setting up machinery for a convention became, in effect, the Con-Con bill the House had to vote on. This report, Schickman said, was given legislators only that morning.

Though the Con-Con measure passed the House, it must still be approved in the Senate. Con-Con legislation bogged down in the last month when the House and Senate revised differently the original legislation of the Constitutional Study Commission.

When the bills were approved in one house and moved to another, they came back with amendments identical to each body's bill.

Approved Tuesday, the "compromise" bill calls for a convention convening at noon Dec. 8 in the Illinois House, Springfield. A primary to select four candidates will be Sept. 23 and a run-off election to select two delegates from each Senate district will be Nov. 18.

Schickman said his second objection to the bill was a requirement for two elections. He said he favored the House's bill that would automatically elect a primary candidate if that candidate gets 40 per cent of the vote.

"MY VOTE AGAINST the conference committee report was for a consolidation of elections and against the number of elections the north and northwest suburbs will have," Schickman explained.

Two Con-Con and two congressional elections will diminish voter interest in the races and impose an unnecessary burden on citizens of the 13th District, he added.

"My record has been one of long-term support of Con-Con and constitutional reform."

Schickman is considered a likely candidate for the office of 13th District congressman. The congressional post is expected to be vacated by Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, who is Pres. Richard Nixon's choice for director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

be cut back to 50 or 60 per cent a year from the current maximum level of 75 per cent to increase flexibility and avoid potential crisis.

While he questioned current practices, he carefully avoided commitment and pledged "looking into administrative accounts and staff functions." The contention he made was that administrative costs seem to be too high, and that a morale problem does exist between administration and faculty.

"Teachers feel like pawns, receiving very little consideration. Some of the policies are arbitrary," he said, calling for an examination of how Supt. Donald Thomas handles affairs of the district.

His won friends on the board by issuing substantial praise for Albert Domanico and Allen Sparks. Domanico, running unopposed, was elected to a one-year term, and Sparks, an incumbent, was elected president of the panel.

WITH ISRAELI into the district Teachers' Council, Neuhauser has drawn positive interest among faculty members. His wife, a teacher, would have to resign if he were appointed because of policy prohibiting potential conflict of interest.

The school board should have a maverick on it, and I'm willing to be that person. I'm not interested in a popularity contest," Neuhauser said earlier this year.

Drug Program Moves Into Junior Highs

A drug education program sponsored by the Mount Prospect Youth Commission will be started this fall for junior high school students.

The program will be presented by the National Council for the Prevention of Drug Abuse at a cost of less than $1,000. Source of funds for the project has not been decided yet.

TWO POTENTIAL sources, however, are the village board and various civic groups.

In a report to the group last month, Dr. Ronald Duckers, village youth psychologist, said there is a real drug problem in Mount Prospect.

Schools in which the drug program will be presented, probably during gym classes, are Central, Lincoln, Dempster, St. Raymond's and St. Paul's.

Jehovah's Witnesses: No Soliciting

by DAN JOHN

A little dust was raised in the Wheeling Herald offices Tuesday, resulting from Monday's article concerning a group of Jehovah's Witnesses, in the Wheeling police station.

The group went to the police station Sunday to clarify, with the police, their position in regard to a village ordinance banning solicitations.

At that time they quoted U.S. Supreme Court and State Supreme Court rulings exempting Jehovah's Witnesses from any form of solicitation bans, explaining the position generally held by the faith, that Witnesses do not sell, anything but preach their faith door-to-door.

James L. Staelens Sr., a representative of the Northbrook congregation, reiterated this position in the Herald offices, adding that he felt the tone of the article was detrimental to the image of the faith.

HIS EXPLANATION of the events was this: An officer stopped a man who had two children with him. The officer asked if they were soliciting. He was told yes, then after a minute, was told no, the man pointing out he was a minister in the faith.

This is a correction of part of the Herald article Monday stating "asked if he was soliciting, the man answered no, at first, then said yes, pointing out he was a minister in the faith."

Then, according to Staelens, the officer became "belligerent." Chief M. O. Horcher told the Herald Tuesday the officer simply made them aware of the solicitation ban. Then the minister asked to come to the station to have the matter clarified.

STAELENS SAID he had had a "long conversation" with Horcher Monday, mentioning that Horcher said the officer would be reprimanded.

Horcher told the Herald Tuesday there would be no action taken against the officer. He added, "The officer was only doing his duty in making them aware that if they were soliciting, they would have to stop."

The nub of the incident is the Wheeling village ordinance prohibiting solicitations. This is being decided in the Illinois Appellate Court.

The Jehovah's Witnesses' contention is they are covered under Supreme Court rulings, specifically mentioning them, as not solicitors, but as a religious group entitled to rights of speech and freedom of religion.

Chief Horcher said whether they come under this contested ordinance or not is to be decided upon after the Appellate Court resolves the case.

City Reign of Terror

CHICAGO — Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan said Negro street gang warfare in Chicago has reached "malignant" proportions, and compared it to the reign of terror unleashed in the city by the Mafia in the 1920s and '30s.

There are now 50 reputed street gang members under indictment in courts. Of 28 indictments returned between 1967 and this year, 22 charged murder, eight attempted murder and four intimidation.

Frank Borman Resigns

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Apollo 8 astronaut Frank Borman who commanded mankind's first trip around the moon, has resigned from the astronaut corps.

Borman will accept a post in the space agency's program to develop orbiting space stations. His resignation leaves the space agency with 50 astronauts.

Food for Hungry

WASHINGTON — President Nixon, declaring that hunger in America is "embarrassing and intolerable," asked Congress Tuesday to make food available free to the nation's poorest and to nearly double spending on food stamps for the hungry.

Under the proposal families with an income of about $90 a month would receive food stamps at no cost. Families with incomes of about $4,000 a year would receive stamps for no more than 50 per cent of their income.

No-Confidence Vote

LONDON — Dissident Labor members of Parliament circulated a motion yesterday calling for a vote of no-confidence in Prime Minister Harold Wilson, after voters dealt the Labor party another setback in local elections.

The opposition Conservative party gained 34 local council seats after the first day's polling in the week-long local elections.

Court-Martial Out

WASHINGTON — A court of inquiry recommended that Cmdr Lloyd Bucher be court-martialed for the loss of the intelligence ship Pueblo but the civilian Navy Secretary yesterday ruled out punishment of Bucher or any of his crew because "they have suffered enough."

At a news conference after Navy Secretary John H. Chaffee overruled the five-admiral board and decreed that there would be no discipline of Bucher or his crew, E. Miles Harvey, Bucher's lawyer, said, "As far as we're concerned, Commander Bucher has been cleared."

Real Bargaining Seen

PARIS — A tacit agreement among the Vietnam peace negotiators in Paris to stop threatening each other gave impetus Tuesday to reports that the conference is inching toward real bargaining.

Careful analysis of statements made by Allied and Communist negotiators showed a de-escalation of verbal attacks and threats routinely made in the initial stages of the conference. This change in tone, noted by diplomats on both sides, coincided with mounting reports in diplomatic circles in Paris that delegates were slowly moving toward a breakthrough.

Marchers See Aid OK'd

SPRINGFIELD — About 200 chanting welfare recipients marched 12 blocks from a tent village to the statehouse yesterday where they watched the House Public Welfare Committee approve bills to increase public aid payments and benefits by a 14 to 4 vote.

EXCAVATION FOR Amersham Searle Corporation's new building in Arlington Heights' Clearbrook Industrial Park was officially begun Monday. Shovelers included John Walsh, Arlington Heights village president; Carl Teutsch, president of Teutsch Associates, architects for the new building; John Kuranz, president of Amersham/Searle Corp.; and Daniel Searle, president of G. D. Searle and Co.

Answers Hike Charges

Idealism and reality were balanced carefully by Mrs. Rena Trevor when she spoke to an Arlington Heights sociology class yesterday.

Teenagers of Arlington Heights and other parts of the suburban Northwest marched in a Hike for the Hungry during a spring rain storm on April 4.

Funds raised by hikers were to be divided between the Northwest Opportunity Center and Ecuador agricultural project and a Biafran relief project.

The goal of the march, to help feed hungry people, is good, Mrs. Trevor said. "But it isn't that simple with the hidden poor we have here."

QUESTIONS AND OBJECTIONS have been raised about how the funds would be used by the opportunity center in Rolling Meadows. Mrs. Trevor said the funds would go for self developmental programs.

Mrs. Trevor is an active alternate delegate on the advisory committee of Norwesco, the Northwest Cook Opportunity Council. Norwesco is the founder of the Opportunity Center and is one of the three local groups which sponsor the center.

The Spanish-Americans in this area comprise about 90 per cent of the 700 or 800 poor families in the suburban Northwest. Mrs. Trevor said they are proud people who do not like to accept outright help like gifts of food, but would rather try to better themselves through educational programs.

THE YOUTHS WHO marched in the Hunger Hike knew funds would go to the Northwest Opportunity Center but did not know how the funds would be used. At a recent Norwesco meeting, charges were made that the funds should not be used to pay salaries of full-time staff people at the center.

Mrs. Trevor said the funds would be put to good use. She said there is a chance that some of the money will be used to feed hungry people on an emergency basis. However, most of the funds will probably go into educational programs.

Various programs offered by the Northwest Opportunity Center were explained to the teenagers by Mrs. Trevor. Programs include classes in English, basic math, citizenship and consumer goods. Other programs include providing transportation so that people can get to dentists who have volunteered to do free dental work and providing legal aid.

"SOME OF THESE people don't know their rights," she said. "There are cases of things that have happened to these people that are absolutely pathetic."

Answering the complaint that funds raised by the Hike for the Hungry should not be used for salaries, Mrs. Trevor said a center like the one in Rolling Meadows must have full-time paid personnel to provide seven-day-a-week service to the poor.

The center would not be able to operate without volunteer help, but the full-time paid staff is necessary, she said.

Students accepted the attractive grey-haired woman's explanations of where the funds would go. There wasn't much reaction and few questions were asked.

However, the effectiveness of Mrs. Trevor's presentation on the problems of the poor in the suburban Northwest can be measured by a question asked by a student at the end of her talk:

"How can I volunteer to help at the opportunity center?"

Burlingame said installation would slightly boost the cost of the project, but learning to operate radar was a relatively simple procedure.

VILLAGE PRES. John Walsh said it was "absolutely outside procedures we've followed" to buy the equipment on short notice, but he stressed that questions of use should be resolved at a later session.

Finally, the board approved the purchase and agreed with Walsh that the use of the equipment should be considered later. The money for the set comes from the village's contingency fund.

Benson later explained that the radar system was merely one of many kinds of radar in use and that it could eliminate a gap in coverage of possible local tornadoes.

Part of the system considered by Arlington Heights could be mounted on top of the municipal building. A basket-type rotating net would transmit and receive signals.

Signals are sent out from the unit, and when they hit a solid object, they are returned. To spot a tornado, the signals bounce off the dust particles in the tornado.

John Baer, associate editor of Plane and Pilot Magazine, a periodical for professional and amateur fliers, told the Herald the system would be difficult to use in Arlington Heights alone.

HE SAID THE range of a Bendix radar set is about 100 miles. With tornadoes averaging between 25 and 40 miles per hour in speed, it would be difficult to spot the

Year-Round Study Set

High School Dist. 214 board members and part of the board's citizens committee agreed last night to forge ahead with a year-round calendar.

They said the school board should seek other consultant firms' cost estimates to pin down the financial implications of the school year change.

Asst. Supt. Roderick McLennan urged the committee to also ask the administration to make a similar study of educational advantages and community problems that would accompany the calendar change.

Last night's meeting was triggered by the board's receiving two estimates of the financial analysis, one estimate of $7,500 and the other between $17,000 and $22,000.

"I THINK THIS district is already working toward the 12-month school year," McLennan said, "and I'll tell you how." He said the school district now has 4,000 summer school students and hopes to step this up. Another 6,000 adults are attending evening classes.

"We need a broad scope study," McLennan added, "covering seven to ten different plans."

"I don't think anyone here is opposed to this," returned Citizens Committee spokesman Dr. Conrad Mazeski of Mount Prospect. "I think we just need to agree on how we're going to go about it."

The committee suggested that a switch to a year-round school plan might make it unnecessary for Dist. 214 to build its eighth and ninth high school. They said when the study is completed voters might be asked to take their choice between another high school and a 12-month school year.

Reservations regarding voter acceptance of a calendar change were strongly expressed by board member Richard Stamm of Mount Prospect. He said that the calendar change might mean students would be on vacation for three weeks four times a year — a switch that would mean "a whole new way of life for district families."

Watch, Ring Stolen

A Hersey High School youth has reported the theft of a watch and a class ring valued at $54 from his school locker.

James Allare, 16, of 610 East Valley Lane, Arlington Heights, told Arlington Heights police that he discovered his locker had been broken into Friday morning after he had been in the school gymnasium.

She was living in a state in which she had only lived for seven years. She didn't know the procedures as well as for her native state of Wisconsin. Her family still lived in Madison, and she didn't know where to turn or who to go to for help and advice.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW if she should sign the lien, despite the lawyer's asking price. Without the divorce, there would be no money at all. Her financial situation was already at rock bottom. It seemed as though there was no alternative but to sign the lien. She thought that it would be better to be in the frying pan rather than the fire.

But there had to be someone who could

(In this second and concluding part of "Divorce Suburban Style," Gerry DeZonna, Paddeck staff writer, describes where a suburban mother of five turns when her money runs out as she waits for her divorce to become final.)

For the amount of time and legal advice that the lawyer had invested in the case, the fee of $1,200 was exorbitantly high. For a woman in her position, the price was impossible and out of reach. She explained that she didn't have the money and he explained that he would not file the final divorce papers. No money, no divorce. The matter was cut and dried.

There was one alternative. As long as she would own the house after the divorce, he would file a lien against the property. He would be guaranteed his wages once the house was sold. The house would have to be sold within 90 days from the day that the decree was filed, so he said.

She was left in an unfortunate position. There was no money, and there wouldn't be any income until the divorce was set-

All Over But the Memory

If you can't come out the big winner, the next best thing is to have your roommate take top prize.

That's the way things turned out for Illinois Junior Miss Pamela Weir in the 1969 Junior Miss finals at Mobile, Ala., last night.

America's new Junior Miss is Jackie Bennington of California, who was Pam's roommate in Mobile since the 50 Junior Misses arrived there for this year's competition April 26.

Although not among the 10 semi-finalists, the Prospect High School senior will not come home empty-handed. She won a $1,000 preliminary scholarship for academic achievement.

LAST NIGHT'S finals, televised nationally from Mobile, climaxed for Pam an experience that began last October when she first entered the Paddock Publications Junior Miss Pageant. From that she emerged as one of four winners with the title of Arlington Heights Junior Miss. She also won the top scholastic award in that pageant.

Last January, in competition with 26 other Illinois high school senior girls, Pam won the title of Illinois Junior Miss, and she will continue in that role until next winter's state pageant. As the reigning Junior Miss, she will participate in locally conducted pageants in Illinois this summer and next fall when possible to get away from her studies at Illinois Wesleyan University, where she will enroll in the nursing program in September.

A total of $45,000 in scholarships was awarded in this year's pageant with the winner receiving $10,000.

First runner-up and winner of a $6,000 scholarship was Missouri's Junior Miss, Anna Columbia Deanne Allen of North Dakota was second runner-up, winning $4,000 in scholarship money.

ANN LANDIS, Arkansas' Junior Miss, and Mary Ann Stuckmeyer, Virginia's Junior Miss, others among the five finalists, each won a $2,500 scholarship.

Sponsors of the national Junior Miss Pageant are Chevrolet Division of General Motors, Breck Co., Kraft Foods and Eastman Kodak Co.

This was the third year of the last four that a winner of a Paddock Junior Miss title represented Illinois in the national pageant. Previous winners were Kathy Benning of Roselle and Sue Courtney of Mount Prospect.

House Approves Con-Con Bill

The Illinois House of Representatives approved a state Constitutional Convention bill Tuesday, but State Rep. Eugene Schlickman's R-Arlington Heights, vote was not with the majority.

Schlickman explained his "no" vote was aimed not at constitutional reform but at two features of a conference committee report which was, in effect, the bill before the House. One objection was to a provision that will give the north and northwest suburbs four separate elections this fall.

The committee had been charged with compromising both House and Senate Con-Con bills and recommended Tuesday that no other election, referendum or issue be voted on the same day as Con-Con elections.

SCHLICKMAN WAS CONTACTED soon after the 142 to 22 vote on Con-Con was taken. State Rep. Eugene Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, voted with the committee report.

Also interviewed, Mrs. Chapman said she was "truly proud" of the House action and said she anticipates a "slew" of candidates running for the two delegate positions from the Third District.

The conference committee report setting up machinery for a convention became, in effect, the Con-Con bill the House had to vote on. This report, Schlickman said, was given legislators only that morning.

Though the Con-Con measure passed the House, it must still be approved in the Senate. Con-Con legislation bogged down in the last month when the House and Senate revised differently the original legislation of the Constitutional Study Commission.

When the bills were approved in one house and moved to another, they came back with amendments identical to each body's bill.

Approved Tuesday, the "compromise" bill calls for a convention convening at noon Dec. 8 in the Illinois House, Springfield.

A primary to select four candidates will be Sept. 23 and a run-off election to select two delegates from each Senate district will be Nov. 18.

Schlickman said his second objection to the bill was a requirement for two elections. He said he favored the House's bill that would automatically elect a primary candidate if that candidate gets 40 percent of the vote.

"MY VOTE AGAINST the conference committee report was for a consolidation of elections and against the number of elections the north and northwest suburbs will have," Schlickman explained.

Dist. 59 Parents Protest

With banners and placards waving, 100 angry Forest View parents walked out of the Dist. 59 meeting Monday night.

The parents walked out as a visual demonstration of their opposition to the board's reaffirmed decision to remove the Forest View principal.

Principal Tom Warden has been appointed curriculum coordinator of Dist. 59, a decision hotly protested by parents working as the Forest View Parents' Study Committee.

Monday's board meeting began with an hour-long executive session in which the Warden matter was apparently discussed. When the board returned to public session, Allen Sparks, board president, told the assembled parents that Tom Warden will be removed from Forest View School as originally announced.

Sparks also disclosed that an executive meeting was held last Tuesday in which the board members arrived at the same decision.

SPARKS BARELY HAD the announcement read when he was barraged by a series of questions from angered parents. Monday's meeting was more emotional than a similar meeting two weeks ago, when the study committee members originally voiced their disapproval of board policy.

As board members were asked to account for their decision to transfer Warden, homemade signs appeared in the audience reading, "We Want Warden" and "Tom Warden is the Man We Want."

Supt. Donald Thomas was asked to explain his position regarding qualifications of principals and to account for Warden's transfer.

The board's public silence on the matter angered the parents even more causing some to shout their defiance to the board openly.

ERNEST RICH of Des Plaines, defeated candidate for the Dist. 59 board, rose to ask if each board member would disclose how he voted on the Warden transfer. The board refused claiming the privileges of executive session.

At that point a member of the audience asked Warden how he felt about the transfer. Obviously on the spot, Warden replied that he would go along with any position offered him by Superintendent Thomas, but that given his choice he would prefer to stay at Forest View. His reply was greeted with a standing ovation by the disgruntled parents.

Things continued to get hot when parents accused the board of being unresponsive to their demands. Elsie Cohn, of Arlington Heights asked, "Why is the board so unresponsive? Obviously there is a divergence of opinion between the board and the people. What happens to all of us when we disagree with the school board?"

JOHN D. HERBERT, a resident of the district for 10 years and a former school board member, spoke of the growing dissatisfaction with the elected officials.

"Something's wrong in this district," Herbert said. "Soon you will try to swing another bond issue and if you go for that issue you'd better have some answers for the people." His remarks were met with applause.

At 9:20 p.m., at the close of the discussion of Tom Warden, the parents walked out of the meeting. But they did not leave the school. Assembling in another part of the building the study committee discussed their differences with the board and made new plans.

One of the men who most appealed to the embittered parents was Paul Neuhauser, defeated candidate for the Dist. 59 Board of Education.

Neuhauser is theoretically next in line for a soon-to-be-vacant Dist. 59 board seat. His stand Monday was in obvious sympathy with the Forest View parents on the Tom Warden matter. As of Monday, Neuhauser was obviously a candidate the parents are behind.

Neuhauser Back

by GEOFFREY MEHL

Even though School Dist. 59 Board of Education elections are fading into history, the name of Paul Neuhauser is not.

One of seven who sought election on April 12, he ran third behind winners Harold Harvey and George Blanchard.

But fate on two fronts is pushing Neuhauser back into the spotlight, and possibly onto the school board. He lost the election by 26 votes out of more than 5,400 cast, conceded and congratulated, and talked about "maybe next year."

All of a sudden Blanchard has been affected by a company transfer, and expects to move out of the area July 1. Concurrently, parents of students at Forest View Elementary School are becoming more militant and have tabbed Neuhauser as their man.

He hasn't been unwilling to accept the leadership that parents have been pressing upon him.

BLANCHARD, HAVING announced that he won't be with the district much longer, hasn't set a resignation date. While his term won't expire until 1972, any appointee to replace him would serve until April, 1970, date of the next board of education election.

Initial feelings are mixed on who will replace Blanchard. Some lean toward the practice followed in the past of interviewing interested citizens and making a choice, while others favor at least giving consideration to the candidates who were defeated on April 12.

Neuhauser, who received 626 votes to Blanchard's 670, heads the list, followed by Ernest Rich, Patrick Ordovensky, William Garvey, and Harry Stewart.

The board is not bound to naming the next highest vote-getter, and may appoint anyone it chooses. In this regard, there is already talk in some quarters about naming Gene Artemenko, past president and member of the board, who retired from the panel last month.

Neuhauser appears to strike a compromise between administration and the militant parents on several issues dear to both.

LADEN WITH GYM SUITS, Palatine police detectives leave an Arlington Heights home which was raided last night. Police confiscated 62 girls' gym suits which they said were stolen in recent weeks from a locker room at Fremd High School. Richard Geisler, 22, of Arlington Heights, was charged on three counts of theft in connection with the larcenies.

Radar Is Favored

tornado in time, if observation is limited to the Arlington Heights village limits.

He explained that equipment the village has purchased is regarded as sound in the aviation industry. Weather radar is required in all commercial aircraft, and it is used both for weather observation and landings.

Baer explained that the radar can easily be adapted for ground usage, but a skilled person is needed to interpret data which appears on the radar screens.

Benson said that similar equipment is used by a United Air Lines office in the area, but it does release data on local storms to either public or private agencies. He commented that the problem of liability makes United hesitant to release any information.

Monday night, Arlington Heights Village Atty. Jack Siegel explained that if an agreement should ever be reached between villages for use of the equipment, it would be necessary to include a disclaimer of liability to eliminate a legal danger for Arlington Heights.

However, the use of radar equipment is still in the future. Initially, it will be up to Arlington Heights to determine what to do — if anything — with its new equipment.

Aged Home Status

Two decisions by the Illinois Supreme Court outlawing the tax-exempt status of nonprofit homes for the aged will not affect the Lutheran Home for the Aged in Arlington Heights unless local taxing bodies challenge its charitable status in the courts.

Director Paul Hauer said, "We definitely consider ourselves a charitable institution. The home must subsidize some costs for over one-half of the residents." Current deficit, which the home covers, runs about $88 per person for those on public assistance.

For those who can afford to pay, the home charges an annual fee equal to the average cost per person for yearly services.

THREE CASES WENT before the state supreme court involving the ability of homes to qualify as charitable institutions. Adverse decisions for the homes to qualify as charitable institutions. Adverse decisions for the homes affected institutions in Evanston and Winnebago County. The third case involving a Rockford home has not been decided yet.

In the Winnebago case, the judge held that church-owned and other nonprofit homes could not be considered charitable facilities because of the amount charged for admission for those able to pay.

Neil Gaynes, executive director of the Illinois Association of Homes for the Aged, said if the loss of tax exemption is ultimately applied to all 132 homes in Illinois, "it would place about one-third of them in serious jeopardy."

He said his organization is actively working to raise welfare payments for persons living in the homes and recently submitted a plan to the Department of Public Aid which would make payments equal to the actual cost of an individual's expenses. Welfare payments now account for about two-thirds of total expenses.

"DEFICITS ARE USUALLY met by the churches and charitable institutions running the home, but the charitable dollar is shrinking," Gaynes said.

He noted that the plan to equalize welfare payments to actual expenses for those unable to pay their own costs was approved by the public aid director and included in the budget.

"It has been pushed aside in the legislature, however, and has been referred to a committee."

Gaynes said very few of the Illinois homes "break even" on expenses. "As costs keep going up, expenses for long-time care becomes prohibitive."

Both Gaynes and Hauer agreed that the circumstances of each home should be decided on an individual basis. Gaynes said he does not expect a blanket decision involving all institutions in the state.
